A. C. Nellis, president of the New York Market Gardeners' Association, of West Brighton, S. I., claims that Secretary Wilson not only refused to award the contract for $180,000 worth of seeds to the lowest bidder, but by manipulating the schedules and by private letting gave the Henry Phillips Seed and Implement Company, of Toledo, a profit of $40,000 of the government's money. Secretary Wilson has refused to discuss the matter of the contract for the seed for 1902.

Proposals for seeds for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, were sent out November 20, 1900, and closed December 12, 1900. The proposals called for precisely the same quantities and character of seeds as the distribution then being put up. This amounted to 23,961,168 packets of garden and flower seed. The proposals stated that the bids were in "anticipation of an appropriation act," etc. The lowest bid was for $4.16½ per 1,000 packets and was verbally awarded to the New York Market Gardeners' Association, subject to the appropriation to be made. The new appropriation was made about March 1 and increased the usual appropriation about $100,000, and contained a clause making it mandatory for the Secretary to expend at least $180,000 for seeds for distribution.

Secretary Wilson set aside the bids and schedules of December 12, 1900, and on March 5, 1901, had a new schedule of seeds prepared, reducing the proportions of expensive seeds, such as beans, corn, peas and onions, and adding cheaper families of seeds, thus considerably reducing the cost of the bulk. These expensive seeds were reduced about fifteen per cent, and Secretary Wilson is charged with arbitrarily increasing the price per thousand packets to $4.70.

This action was taken without warning the seedsmen interested in the contract, nor was any opportunity given them to bid on the revised and cheapened contract.

About the middle of April of that year, Mr. Nellis claims Secretary Wilson entered into a private contract with the Phillips Seed and Implement Company, of Toledo, by which an excessive profit was made, as claimed by Mr. Nellis. It is fair to add that Mr. Nellis may be a prejudiced witness, as he has been charged with irregularities in a previous contract with the Department of Agriculture.

Representative Fitzgerald, of Brooklyn, introduced a resolution in the House calling for an investigation of the letting of this contract and of former contracts, but the matter was pigeon-holed in the Committee on Agriculture.

AMONG ROSE GROWERS.

I have visited, within the past two weeks, several dozen of the largest rose growers in the vicinity of San Francisco and a few of my observations in regard to what can be expected for the coming four months may be of interest to the florists and wholesalers.

As soon as the chrysanthemum crop is harvested we will have to rely on indoor flowers, except for some kinds of bulbous stock and carnations and roses are, of course, of the greatest interest. From what I have seen of the latter there is practically no increase in the plantings this season. Many of the growers who devoted their houses to the growing of Beauties are planting Maids and Brides instead. I have seen only a half dozen good ranges of Beauty that appear as though they could be depended on to produce fancy stock, although there are a good many thousand planted in this neighborhood. With Brides and Maids the conditions are more favorable to a good winter supply and I do not think there will be a great scarcity at any time. In quantity, there are more planted than last season. Although the majority of the stock now being cut is short and weak-stemmed the prospects are for plenty of good flowers in the near future.

Some growers have discarded Liberty this season, although I do not see anything at present to take its place. There is considerable difference of opinion among our largest growers regarding this rose. Some claim that it is a money-maker and others do not succeed well with it, although it has superseded Meteor almost entirely. Queen of Edgely has been planted in a few places with fair results. Pres. Carnot and Ulrich Brunner are in for a good deal of bench room and the stock looks well.

There is nothing new being planted extensively in the line of roses this season. A few growers have imported some of the newer eastern roses but not in sufficient quantity to form a decided opinion as to their merits. Perle des Jardins is a splendid yellow rose but I find it growing in only a few places. The florists seem to be able to get along without yellow roses and no one makes a specialty of them. Cecil Brunner is a paying variety in a good many places and is extensively grown by a few. This is about the end of the list of varieties.

There are a good many houses changed to carnation growing, that formerly were filled with roses and vice versa, although the great majority of glass is devoted to pinks and I will give a few observations on the plants and varieties grown here in my next letter. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business is very quiet, and has been so for the past month. It is not as good in a general way as it was a year ago and the prospects are not very encouraging. Some retailers are inclined to think the approaching election has something to do with it and that possibly after the fun is all over receipts will be heavier. The wholesalers and growers are feeling the quiet times also and the price of flowers has fallen considerably from those of a month or six weeks ago. Under ordinary circumstances flowers should bring a good price at the beginning of November but this year is an exception. Of course it must be kept in mind that we are having extremely favorable weather for all kinds of growing stock and the great abundance of flowers of all descriptions would be offered in far less quantity had we had a few sharp frosts. But our time will probably come and we will sigh for the days when we caught a glimpse of the sun and it was not necessary to keep heat going twenty-four hours a day. There is a good demand only for fancy roses and they are not to be had in quantity. Beauties are not yet first-class. Carnations are plentiful and will be a glut until the greater portion of the chrysanthemums are over. Mums are in their prime and they are as fine as I have ever seen them. The weather has particularly favored the growers this season. Violets are plentiful, although there is no surplus. Other outdoor flowers are on the wane, except cosmos. Sweet peas have all but disappeared. Valley and lilies are in fair supply and a few narcissi are being offered. All sorts of bulbous stock will be in season earlier than usual this year.

Various Notes.

John C. Siegfried, the orchid grower of Alameda, is expected home from Chicago about the end of November.

L. E. McKenney, of Irvington, is in town.

A. Duhem, one of our pioneer florists, is with L. Wickstrom, at his Market street store.

The Menlo Park Agricultural Association opened its floral exhibit this week and the large attendance already assures success. The association is composed of nurserymen, gardeners and superintendents of the different places of this locality, who are aided by their employers. A large tent has been erected, so that ample room may be afforded for a big display. The tent is 250 feet in length and 160 feet in width. S. Clack, M. Lynch, P. C. Meyer, Redwood Nurseries, Fair Oaks Nurseries, Sherwood Hall Nurseries and Woodside Nurseries are among the large exhibitors. G.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1905.

HUNTSVILLE, ALA.—The six nurseries of this county are furnishing the railroads about all the traffic they can handle. All of the nurseries report the largest sales they have enjoyed in years.

FAIRBURY, NEB.—It is reported that a company will shortly be incorporated here, with $50,000 capital stock, to propagate and disseminate the Spencer seedless apple, originated by John F. Spencer, of Grand Junction, Colo.

THE proposed auxiliary channel connecting Evanston, Ill., with the Chicago drainage canal was planned to run through the Peterson nursery, Chicago. Various considerations, among them the prospect of a sharp fight in condemnation proceedings, has caused a change in route.

NORMAL, ILL.—The nursery business is now at its height, says the Phoenix Nursery. There seems to be about an equal demand for both ornamental and fruit stock. The season is starting out very well, the stock being in good condition. They have about 600 acres in cultivation. At present they are working about 125 men. The packing season ends about December 1, but goods will be shipped to agents over the country all winter. From indications at present there will be a large demand for small fruits in the spring. The other nurseries in Normal, including Augustine & Co., Custer Bros., George J. Foster, are also shipping large quantities of stock.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The Cleveland market during the past two weeks has not been up to the usual standard. Business has not made the lively spurt expected after two heavy frosts, which made outdoor stock decidedly scarce. There have been several weddings of late, which called for some fine decorations, using considerable stock, but outside of this and a few funeral orders there is practically nothing doing.

The cut of tea roses has been quite heavy of late and the quality of stock is very good, possibly owing to the cooler weather. Carnations are not over-plentiful and an active demand is prevalent. Good prices are realized. Flowers show good substance and color. Lawson, Enchantress and Crane seem to be the most called for. Whites are scarce and not very good.

The chrysanthemums are having full play at present, which may account for the poor sales on roses. Some fine chrysanthemums are to be had at ridiculously low prices, considering the quality of the flowers. Blooms which ought to bring from $2 to $3 per dozen only find buyers at from $1 to $1.50 per dozen. It is hoped, as the season advances, better prices will be realized. It is a general opinion that after election business will assume a different attitude and the retailer and grower alike will wear that smile which won't come off.

Various Notes.

A visit to the various stores found them all gaily decorated with the queen of autumn. Gasser is using the massive effect, filling one large window with a solid color. It was nicely arranged and quite in keeping with their large store.

The Cleveland Floral Co., which recently opened a fine store on Euclid avenue, a little east of Gasser's, has a nice display of chrysanthemums and Boston ferns in one window and a show of bulbs in another.

Smith & Fetters, as usual, have a high class window, resplendent with chrysanthemums, Beauties and Piersoni ferns, all with good effect. Forest City.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held October 26, President Ballantyne in the chair. I. H. King, Irvington, was duly elected an active member. Tracy Dow, Irvington, was elected an honorary member, G. Fresenius, Irvington, and J. Woodcock, Yonkers, were proposed for active membership.

Some very promising seedling chrysanthemums were exhibited at this meeting by L. Martin, Irvington, which were awarded honorable mention, with the recommendation that they be grown next year.

Several special prizes were thankfully received to be competed for at the November exhibition, November 1, 2 and 3.

The sad death of one of our most active and esteemed members, Franz S. Pammer, is deeply regretted by all members of the society. The funeral took place October 25 from the Second Reformed Church. T. A. L.

Biddeford, Me.—Chas. S. Strout has a rare combination of pets in his greenhouse, a woodcock and a cat. One destroys the worms and insects, the other the mice, and they live in perfect harmony, but some other means of exterminating the worms will be necessary if the supply of rodents should run short.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Business on the whole was all right for the commission men the past week, but in a retail way it was not all it should have been. There were a number of good decorations, which used up a quantity of stock, but small trade seems to be holding back. Chrysanthemums are cleaning up much better than for several years, which is saying a good deal considering the quantity coming in, with prices averaging just a little better than last season.

Various Notes.

Sunday was perfection for a fall day and all roads seemed to lead to the mum shows. Another of our Pittsburg millionaires, A. R. Peacock, opened his conservatory to the public. His houses contain mums, carnations, palms and ferns. It is said that there were 25,000 visitors at the Schenley park show, and not less than 10,000 at Allegheny park, while a constant stream of visitors took advantage of H. C. Frick's open houses. It is expected that this will have its effect on business the coming week, as people cannot look at such shows without wanting to possess flowers.

Patrick Maier is sending the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. Paper Whites and Romans, the first of the season.

Gustav & J. W. Ludwig are making a grand display of mums on their stand in the Allegheny Market. They are among the pioneers in the business, as they started about twenty-eight years ago and are still as energetic as beginners. They get their fair share of everything that is abroad.

Randolph & McClements had a very novel decoration for Halloween, using large quantities of corn stalks, corn in the husk, autumn leaves, pumpkins, wired masks for light shades, the proverbial witch, and all arranged to make appropriate and beautiful decorations for the night.

The Washington Floral Co. are sending in some fine mums, among them some very fine Cheltoni, which were the finest yellow seen this year.

The Cut Flower Co. is receiving some of the new white carnation, Fred Burki, which they report as selling on sight.

Mrs. Schmucker, 4709 Liberty avenue, is the latest to open a cut flower store. As there is no one within a mile or more of her, she should do all right.

Among the visitors this week were Wm. Schrader, Johnstown, Pa., and Martin Reukauf, Philadelphia.

Tuesday night is meeting night for the Florists' Club, when mums will be the order of the day. Everyone is invited to bring a few blooms.

The bowlers met Friday night and it is said they are getting good.

Howard Carney, of J. B. Murdoch & Co., will take unto himself a wife this coming week. Hoo-Hoo.

BEST IN CIRCULATION.

Enclosed find check to cover bill. Had very good success; sold out everything advertised. You have the best advertising medium and all-around florists' paper in circulation; anything else I have you will do the job. GEO. MILNE.
Winchester, Mass., Sept. 29, 1904.

WE think the REVIEW our best publication.—W. J. MILLER & SON.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Since last writing we have had the pleasure to have lots of sun, which has livened up everything. Growers have been picking considerable more stock, but on account of the good weather trade has been still heavier, so prices on carnations have stiffened again, with common stock bringing $2 and Enchantress $3. Some of our store men have paid as high as $5 per hundred for Enchantress already this season.

Jas. Bishop is cutting some grand mums. He reports his carnations doing nicely.

H. Merritt has had the pleasure to discover a white sport of Enchantress in his greenhouse. M.

I would not want to do without the Review.—J. H. Fiesser, West Hoboken, N. J.

Garfield Ave. Greenhouses,
Harry T. Miller, Proprietor. Salem, Ohio.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

A. Relyea & Son are cutting some very fine mums of Robt. Halliday and Alice Byron, they having given up violet growing and gone into mums. There is a fine lot of white and yellow Eaton and Bonnaffon in sight. They also have one house of carnations, planted with Queen Louise and Joost. The Queen Louise is showing from eight to twelve buds and flowers. All the growers who have seen them say they are the best they ever saw.

James Coleman has given up growing violets and gone in chrysanthemum and sweet pea growing and is doing very well at it.

Sloane Bros. have also thrown over violets and planted all their houses with carnations, having about 18,000 plants in ten varieties. All look good and clean. The writer was down to see them a few days ago and found one of the brothers in a hole in the ground. I asked him if he was preparing to bury the money they expect to make this winter off their carnations, and he said, "No; we are making a vat for liquid manure and will put our money in the coal bin." When I left he was on his knees, not praying, but slapping on the cement good and thick.

Speaking about violet growing, I hear that six growers around here have thrown out violets and put in something else. The low prices and big coal bills were the cause of it.

Our tenth annual flower show will take place at the State Armory, November 9 and 10. The society offers $750 in premiums and $175 in special prizes are offered by the members. Competition is going to be very hot, as the mums are finishing up fine this year, so get a hump on, boys, or you will get left. X. Y. Z.

MOLINE, ILL.—On October 13 the Tri-City Florists' Club met at Julius Staack's, Theo. Ewoldt reading an essay on carnations. On November 10 the club will meet at Central park, Davenport, to inspect the chrysanthemums.

Are all flower growers liars?

SURELY this cannot be true; well, we have over 100 growers who have written us, a large majority without request, their opinions; we publish a few of these letters in the columns of this paper; see on pages 1195-96-99-1208-11, what they say about the FUMIGATING KIND TOBACCO POWDER. All began with a five-pound trial bag at our expense, which gave them an opportunity without cost to prove its GOODNESS and our assertion that it was the most effective, cleanest and quickest, as well as cheapest (10 cents per 100-foot house) article to fumigate with, and that all kinds of aphis can be killed in one night. Let us send you a five-pound trial bag by express, it will cost you nothing but the express charges on it, and be convinced that what your brother growers say of it is true. Our booklet tells of it; we mail it on request.

FITTING OLD TUBES.

Please tell me the best way to fit 3-inch boiler tubes that are too thin to be threaded. They are, of course, to be used for hot water. O. N.

It has never been my good fortune to see a house piped with cast off boiler tubes, and I can only suggest a possible solution to this problem. I do not say this will prove satisfactory, but it is worthy of a trial. Secure a long sleeve, or section of pipe that will allow at least three-eighths of an inch of space all around between the outside of the flue and the inside of the sleeve. If there are some rough projections on the ends of the flues, batter them only sufficiently to allow passing the flue inside the sleeve. After the ends of two flues have been adjusted equidistant in the sleeve, which should be about ten or twelve inches long, force a roll of hemp packing into the sleeve from each end to prevent the cement which is to be used to make the joint from finding its way to the interior of the flue. After this preliminary calking is completed, stuff the sleeve full of a cement made as follows: Powdered clay six pounds, iron filings one pound, made into a thick paste with linseed oil. Portland cement one part, sand two parts, has also been successfully used in such joints. It is necessary that these joints become well set before water or heat is brought in contact with them. L. C. C.

NOTES ON A NEGLECTED PLANT.

Choisya ternata is a plant that is not so often seen in greenhouses as it deserves to be when one considers its value as a subject for the production of sweetly-scented white flowers in spring. Almost hardy, easily grown, and easily forced into flower, I have found it very useful in helping to bridge over the gap which sometimes occurs in cold and late springs, between the general batch of forced bulbs and the time flowers can be had in quantity from the open borders.

If a few pots are set into a warm greenhouse in January or February they will produce their umbels of chaste, hawthorne-scented flowers throughout March. Plants will stand a fairly high temperature, but then the syringe must be freely used, as red spider and thrips are apt to disfigure the foliage if kept too warm and dry.

As much syringing spoils the flowers, it is better not to subject the plants to a high temperature till flowering is over, when it is advisable to give a little more heat and moisture in order to "draw" the young growth a little, as these plants naturally make short and stocky growth, which is not so useful for cutting as when drawn a few inches longer. When flowering is over, potting should have attention, and plants trimmed into shape a bit if necessary, and, if convenient, given a little more heat for a few weeks as advised. They should be gradually hardened off and finally set out in the open by the end of June and kept carefully watered, when they will complete and ripen their growth and insure a crop of bloom for another spring.

Cuttings of the young growth, with or without a heel of older wood, root freely in spring in any ordinary cutting compost, set into a propagating pit, where some bottom heat is afforded, and pots should be kept fairly moist till cuttings are rooted.

Unless they can be rooted early, young plants are better not pinched, because, flowering as they do on the points of the young shoots, young plants unpinched give one good truss; whereas, if pinched the resultant breaks are often too late to ripen properly, and fail to flower next spring altogether. In fact, no pinching of young growth should be practiced on either old or young plants, as they can be kept in shape by cutting back freely when growth is starting in spring.

Good fibrous loam with a dash of leaf-mold and sand is a good potting medium, though a little peat may be given cuttings at their first shift, which should be into 4-inch pots. Plants in large pots will do for several years with an annual top dressing, and occasional waterings with weak liquid manure when in full growth. Any light, frost-proof structure will keep the plants safe in winter until wanted again for spring use.—Gardening World.

CONDENSATION.

In our plant we have eighty feet of 5-inch pipe, 600 feet of 2½-inch, 6,000 feet of 1-inch and 4,600 feet of 1¼-inch pipe, also 200 feet of 2½-inch drips and eighty feet of 3-inch drips. We carry a night temperature of 50 degrees, and want to know what the maximum condensation per hour would be in weather 20 degrees below zero, and with all pipes working to full capacity. We are given widely varying estimates as to the size of pump required. H. H. N.

From the statement of pipe given above the total number of square feet of radiation in this plant is 4,973.96 square feet. This gives 1,492,188 British thermal units transmitted from radiating surface per hour, which is equivalent to 1,544 pounds of steam or 186 gallons of water per hour. For sake of safety and ample provisions, we will say 300 gallons per hour. I know of no more accurate method of estimating this than that here given. If you have a pump with 300 gallons capacity per hour it should be amply large to handle the condensation. If, however, the pump can only lift 300 gallons under atmospheric pressure it will be at a disadvantage when working against a head of steam on the boiler, but if it is a boiler feed pump there should be no difficulty. L. C. C.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Trial of the suit for $1,000 damages, brought by F. A. Conway & Co., florists, Napoleon and Beecher streets, against Anton Schmidt and Henry Cook, owners of a brick kiln on Beecher street, has begun. It is alleged that soot and cinders from smoke made by the brick kiln have greatly injured the company's stock. It is charged that the brick manufacturers have violated the city smoke ordinance.

We are much pleased with the Florists' Manual, and could not get along without the Florists' Review. Enclosed find another dollar.—Wm. Rhodes & Son, Leechburg, Pa.

A VIEW IN ONE CORNER OF THE FLOWER GROWERS' MARKET, 58-60 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO.
(OTHER VIEWS WERE SHOWN IN RECENT ISSUES.)

IF, as has been demonstrated, the Flower Growers' Market in Chicago enjoys the favor of the local buyers, who make it their place of first call each morning, and if, as is the fact, the out-of-town buyers are rapidly finding out that the Market is the place where growers and their representatives make it their business to look out for the customers' interests, whether the buyer is present or not, these being the facts, Mr. Grower, doesn't it follow that the Market is the place to do your selling? True, there is now more stock on the stands in the Market each day than is received in any other wholesale house in the West, but so are there more buyers there, and their number is constantly on the increase. Furthermore, the growers there are not in competition. They each help the other, for buyers go where the most stock is to be found. The more growers, the more stock, and the more buyers. It is an admirable arrangement. The busy hours at the Market are 8:00 to 9:30 a. m., and stock not reserved for orders is usually cleaned out promptly, so that it does not take a grower's whole time. Come in any morning and see the pace at which business moves along, and talk with the manager and the present stand-holders. You can arrange to have your stock sold here without giving up any of your personal time to it, if you so desire.

THE PRESENT STAND-HOLDERS IN THE MARKET ARE:

C. S. FORD, 1417 Columbia Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.

MANUFACTURER OF

Immortelle Floral Novelties and Dealer in Florists' Supplies

ESTABLISHED 1881

Our Immortelle Designs are made by skilled and experienced workers and must not be compared with the cheap and poor work made by others.

Our Christmas Bells are made on wire frames true to shape. The Immortelles are glued on, one flower at a time, and they are dove-tailed in such a skillful manner that each flower protects the other, preventing them fraying out in the center, giving the finished work a velvety appearance. The Bells are trimmed with natural green Moss (which is better than the sawdust used by others) and tied with red ribbon bows. The larger sizes have 'Merry Christmas" in gold letters on the streamers of the ribbon. The finished piece is done up in neat red boxes ready for sale.

A Trial Order will convince florists of the superiority of these goods over any other kind offered to the trade to-day and they will find them just the thing for Christmas Sales to please the most fastidious.

Alpha Christmas Bells!

Patented

March 15, 1904

No. 754,782

A medium priced Bell, but as good as the best that has ever been put on the market. Perfect and graceful in shape, bright and attractive in color. They are strongly and firmly made—easily handled—no chance for breakage.

We introduced these ALPHA BELLS last year in the large eastern cities, and could not fill one fourth of our orders before the season for them had fairly started. We have prepared for this emergency this year, and are now in a position to fill all orders with promptness and dispatch. The West and the South are comparatively new fields for our ALPHA BELLS and we believe that there is not a town—no matter how small it may be—where florists and others could not do a good business, as our ALPHA BELL is just the thing that is wanted for a medium priced quick selling Christmas article. They also make a pretty store, window or general holiday decoration, and one that is bound to become very popular.

Our ALPHA BELLS are made in 2½, 4¾, 5¾, 7, 9, 12 and 15-inch size, and are conveniently packed one dozen in a box. Price lists to dealers sent on request. For the convenience of those who would like to see a sample of our ALPHA BELL we will mail a sample of 4¾-inch bell postpaid upon receipt of 20 cents to cover cost of postage and packing.

BENTHEY'S PINK...

THE ABOVE CUT shows a vase of BENTHEY'S WHITE with flowers from four to five inches in diameter, and stems from thirty to forty inches in length. These two varieties will produce more first-class salable flowers than any Aster now in commerce. They are pronounced by both grower and consumer THE FINEST ASTERS EVER SEEN IN CHICAGO, and were the FAVORITE ASTERS IN THE CHICAGO AND ST. LOUIS MARKETS the past season. Read what some of the prominent Florists say:

"The Asters received are a fine lot—the best we have ever seen." JOHN BREITMEYER'S SONS, Detroit, Mich.

"We have handled the Benthey Asters in large quantities the past season and found it the best seller we have ever handled, and sold at double the price of any other variety in the market." P. J. HAUSWIRTH, Chicago, Ill.

"It is the best Aster I ever handled both for cut flowers and design work. Hope you will have more next season, as I know the demand will be great." J. J. BENEKE, St. Louis, Mo.

"We have seen the New Benthey Aster, and consider it the best in the market. When you are ready to place the seed on the market kindly inform us, as we are anxious to grow some next season." NANZ & NEUNER, Louisville, Ky.

WORLD'S FAIR FLOWER SHOW

The World's Fair Flower Show was opened by an address by President D. R. Francis, in the Palace of Horticulture at the St. Louis exposition on Monday, November 7, and is proving a success equal to the most sanguine expectations of its most enthusiastic promoter. It may be said without fear of stretching the truth that this is the greatest flower show ever held in the United States. The wealth of exhibits is such as to tax the capacity of the very large conservatory at the disposal of the management. As an example of the way the stock came out for the very liberal premiums offered it may be cited that in the classes for 100 blooms of cut chrysanthemums there were seven entries of white, six of yellow and six of pink, every one of them grand. The display was equally strong in nearly every class, the third prize being almost invariably awarded.

The only feature in which the show is in any way below the standard of the best ever seen in this country is in specimen chrysanthemum plants. In this particular department Boston holds the first place, the west showing no such enormous or well trained plants as are frequently seen in the halls of the Massachusetts Horticultral Society. The plants exhibited are, however, of very good character, judged by western standards.

Manager Hauswirth was confronted by a very heavy task in the caring for and arrangement of the very great number of exhibits, an immense quantity of stock being rushed into his hands within a few brief hours. That he has been so successful in the arrangement of the stock is an evidence of the wisdom of the choice which placed him at the head of affairs. It is difficult to see how the material could have been disposed to better advantage. The show is certainly as attractive as it would be possible to make in a building of such unattractive architectural design. The bare walls and posts naturally add to the difficulties of the manager, but the general effect as one enters the hall is very fine indeed. Good use of wild smilax and autumn foliage has been made. The St. Louis florists rendered invaluable aid in staging the show.

The very liberal manner in which Chief Taylor, and the World's Fair officials have co-operated has aided materially in the success of the show. The advertising has been most effective and the attendance from the opening has been most gratifying. The attendance on Monday was very large, on Tuesday larger and Wednesday saw a still further increase. It is thought that the show will be a complete financial success if the weather for the balance of the week is such as to favor large attendance. Certainly nothing like such crowds have been seen in the vicinity of the Horticulture building since the exposition opened, and therein the show has served its purpose with the exposition management and with the trade.

There are a large number of trade visitors present and much direct business benefit will be derived from the opportunity afforded for the examination of the many meritorius novelties. On Thursday afternoon there is to be a meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club and a conference of horticulturists under the auspices of the exposition. The show will remain open until 10 p. m. on Saturday evening.

THE BOSTON EXHIBITION.

Very great credit is due to the committee of arrangements of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, particularly to J. K. M. L. Farquhar, James Wheeler and Robert Cameron, for the very effective decoration of the various halls on the occasion of the visit of the Chrysanthemum Society of America at Boston, November 3 to 6. The red brick walls of the main exhibition hall were masked with evergreens, spruce and pine being used to form a suitable background for the varied colors of the chrysanthemums. The effect of this arrangement was most charming, especially in the evening, when the building was flooded with electric light. As was expected, the projected show at the World's Fair affected the show to some extent, as some western growers who had entered exhibits did not appear, the big premiums at St. Louis no doubt proving too attractive. While competition in the cut flower classes fell below expectations, some of the prominent local growers staying at home for various reasons, there was still a magnificent show and the specimen plants were marvelous examples of cultural skill, such as Boston only can produce. The date of the show was a trifle early for some growers. A week later would have been better, more especially for the pot plants.

The principal tussle in the pot plant section occurred in the class for eight specimens. The competition was so close that it took the judges a long time to decide between the first and second prize groups. Eventually the coveted honor fell to William Anderson, gardener to H. Dumaresq, who also won the same prize in 1903. Mr. Anderson's plants were superbly grown. His varieties were Kate Broomhead, Mrs. J. G. Breer, John Shrimpton, Mrs. R. H. Pearson, Black Hawk, Mrs. F. A. Constable, Arethusa and Miss Agnes Dalskov. A very close second was D. F. Roy, gardener to E. S. Converse, who had beautifully trained and flowered plants. His varieties were Robert Halliday, Black Hawk, Mrs. J. R. Traintor, Arethusa, Theo, Golden Gate, The Bard and A. J. Balfour. J. Nylan, gardener to J. S. Bailey, was third. He showed, among others, excellent specimens of Yanariva, Mrs. F. A. Constable, Wm. Duckham, Col. Appleton and Millicent Richardson.

For three specimens Japanese incurved, Mr. Roy won, with beautiful plants of Louis Boehmer, Dr. Enguehard and R. H. Pearson. William Anderson was second and third. For three reflexed, Mr. Roy was again in the lead, showing Red Warrior, Mrs. J. G. Breer and Yanariva. Robert Marshall, gardener to E. W. Converse, was second, with Red Warrior, The Bard and Mrs. J. R. Traintor. For one specimen pompon, Mr. Marshall led with a grand plant of that best of all pompons, Savannah, Mr. Anderson being second with the same variety. For one reflexed Mr. Anderson was first, with Red Warrior, Mr. Marshall being second and third. For "any other variety" Messrs. Roy, Nylan and Marshall led in order named. For two specimens anemone-flowered Mr. Roy won, with Garza and Red Robin. The first named was a magnificent specimen, in our estimation the most meritorious and certainly the most admired in the hall. It carried over 800 flowers and was a wonderful example of cultural skill.

For twelve specimens in 6-inch pots, grown to a single stem, James Nicol was in the lead, Mr. Roy taking second and third prizes. The large groups of chrysanthemums arranged for artistic effect, interspersed with foliage plants, were extra good. The use of the single varieties, especially Mizpah, as a bordering was quite effective and these small varieties seemed to be more popular with many visitors than the big specimen blooms. Wm. Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. John D. Gardner, won in this class for an extensive and tastefully arranged group. D. F. Roy was a good second and E. A. Clark, Wm. Riggs, gardener, third. Most of the chrysanthemums in these groups were naturally grown and only sufficient training done to secure the desired effect.

For the Josiah Bradlee special prize for twenty-five blooms in twenty-five varieties there were five entries. William A. Riggs was a good first, with very fine blooms well staged. His varieties were Lady Hanham, E. Fitzroy, Henry Barnes, William Duckham, Nellie Pockett, Brutus, Dr. Enguehard, Ben Wells, Leila Filkins, Maynell, Mrs. E. Thirkell, Mutual Friend, Merza, Australia, Master Tucker, F. S. Vallis, General Hutton, Kate Broomhead, Mrs. T. L. Park, Mrs. J. A. Millar, Yellow Eaton, W. A. Etherington, H. J. Jones and Mrs. J. Mileham. Wm. Abraham, gardener to P. W. Moen estate, was a good second and Michael Byrne, gardener to Thomas Dolliber, third. For six vases in six varieties, ten blooms of each, the last named exhibitor was first. For twelve incurved D. F. Roy led.

For twelve Japanese Peter B. Robb beat P. W. Moen estate. Some of the best blooms were Queen Alexandria, W. McNiece, Calvat's 99 and Meredith. For twelve blooms Japanese incurved Mr. Roy won, with some fine blooms, followed by Peter B. Robb and T. W. Head, gardener to M. F. Plant. Mr. Roy also won for twelve reflexed, as well as in the classes for anemone and pompon varieties. For six new varieties, current season's introductions, Peter B. Robb was first, with fine flowers of F. Hannaford, Cheltoni, Wm. Duckham, F. A. Cobbold, General Hutton and W. R. Church.

For vase of ten pink blooms on long stems, T. W. Head was first with very fine Dr. Enguehard. Eben D. Jordan followed, with William Duckham, T. Dolliber being third, with Viviand-Morel. For red Mrs. M. W. Peirce won, with John Shrimpton. For white Wm. Riggs won, with superb Merza, G. W. Knowlton being second, with Eaton, and T. Dolliber third, with Ben Wells. For ten yellow Mr. Dolliber led with very fine Appleton, G. W. Knowlton being second, with the same variety, and A. Herrington third, with Cheltoni. For ten "any other color" the best entries came from A. F. Whitin, who showed excellent samples of W. R. Church, Mr. Riggs being second, with Kate Broomhead, and H. Dumaresq third, with Lady Hanham. James Nicol had the best vase of Mrs. Jerome Jones, A. F. Whitin being second.

For the society's special prize for fifty blooms shown in the society's large china vases, William Riggs won with superb blooms, his flowers of F. S. Vallis being immense. H. Dumaresq, Wm. Anderson, gardener, was second, Thomas Dolliber third, M. F. Plant fourth and E. D. Jordan fifth. For the society's prize for the most representative collection of cut chrysanthemums, embracing all classes, D. F. Roy won, with a thoroughly representative lot.

For the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club's special prize for twelve blooms of the current season's introduction in America, A. Herrington won, with splendid Cheltoni, W. A. Riggs being second, with William Duckham.

For the C. S. A. special prize for twenty-four blooms in twenty-four varieties, William Duckham, Madison, N. J., easily distanced all competitors with magnificent blooms, the best staged in the hall. His varieties were F. S. Vallis, W. A. Etherington, Maynell, Nellie Pockett, Mary Inglis, Mrs. Weeks, Mme. Carnot, Lady Roberts, Lady Cranston, Cheltoni, J. Fraser, Mrs. Thirkell, Emily Mileham, Valorie Greenham, Miss Mildred Ware, Mrs. G. Mileham, Merza, S. T. Wright, Mrs. D. V. West, Ben Wells, Col. Appleton, Bessie Godfrey and Donald McLeod. P. W. Moen was second and M. F. Plant third.

William Duckham won the gold medal offered by W. Wells, Earlswood, England, for the best six blooms of any of the Wells-Pockett set of 1903, showing grand blooms of Cheltoni, F. A. Cobbold, Leila Filkins, Mary Inglis (an immense bloom), William Duckham and Maynell.

C. H. Totty's special prize for twelve blooms of William Duckham was again won by the redoubtable William Duckham, M. F. Plant being second. The same exhibitors won in same order for A. Herrington's prize for six blooms of any variety. The E. G. Hill silver vase for private gardeners only, for twenty blooms, also went to William Duckham, with remarkable blooms of Harrison Dick, Mme. Carnot, Mrs. Thirkell, Mary Inglis, Mrs. Weeks, J. Fraser, Appleton, W. A. Etherington, F. S. Vallis, Bessie Godfrey, Maynell, Mrs. G. Mileham, Mildred Ware, Merza, Ben Wells, Mrs. H. A. Millar, J. H. Doyle, General Hutton, F. A. Cobbold and Cheltoni.

The C. S. A. silver cup for ten blooms of any variety once more went to Mr. Duckham, who thus captured all the visiting society's first premiums at the Boston show. His vase of Mrs. William Duckham attracted great attention. We predict that Mrs. Duckham will be as popular in 1905 as her husband's namesake in 1904.

Wells silver gilt and Wells silver medal for six blooms of the Wells-Pockett set of 1903 were awarded to M. F. Plant, Mr. Duckham having secured the gold medal. President Herrington's special prize for chrysanthemums went to Mr. Duckham, for superb Merzas.

In the way of miscellaneous exhibits Thomas Dolliber filled a large table with named specimen blooms. E. A. Clark and Mrs. E. M. Gill made similar displays. Edward McMulkin had a large group of foliage plants interspersed with cattleyas and dendrobiums. Farquhar & Co. had a fine bank of foliage plants in which were quantities of Lorraine begonias finely flowered, chrysanthemums and some charming cactus dahlias grown in small pots. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Andrew Pow, gardener, had a fine lot of Amaryllis Belladonna which are grown planted in frames at Newport, also Gardenia florida. Farquhar & Co. had a collection of very interesting seedling chrysanthemums received from Japan, which received honorable mention.

A remarkable collection of fifty blooms of new seedling chrysanthemums came from W. Wells & Co., Earlswood, Surrey, England. These were in charge of C. H. Totty and were more closely scrutinized than anything else in the exhibition. Most of the blooms had been cut on October 17, exhibited before the Royal Horticultural Society on October 19, being a portion of an exhibit which there secured a gold medal, were shipped to Boston on October 22 and the majority of the blooms when staged on November 3 were just as fresh as any others in the exhibition. The blooms were among the largest in the hall, had great depth in nearly all cases, with stems as hard as the shoots on an oak tree. Some of the finest of the collection were Mrs. D. V. West, an improved Carnot; Mrs. D. Willis James, Mrs. William Duckham, a fine deep yellow flower, stem and foliage perfect, bound to be a grand commercial sort; Mrs. A. J. Miller and J. H. Doyle, similar in color, huge terra cotta; Mrs. William Knox, Merstham

Yellow, a fine early variety of good size and depth, a good shade of yellow; Mrs. J. Heaume, Seedling No. 10, Valerie Greenham, a grand pink; Emily Mileham, fine white, and others. The committee honored this most meritorious exhibit with the highest award at its command, a gold medal. We trust Mr. Wells' enterprise may lead others to send their novelties over. Certainly our English friends know how to grow big specimen blooms.

Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., had their usual fine stand of orchids comprising many useful sorts. E. O. Orpet showed a number of seedling orchids not for competition. H. A. Wheeler showed a cross between Laelia Dayana and Cattleya velutina (Laelio-cattleya Prosperpine). For best display of cut orchids the silver gilt medal went to the F. L. Ames estate, W. N. Craig, gardener, who staged 100 varieties and species filling 200 bottles. Colonel Charles Pfaff, Geo. Melvin gardener, won the silver medal and E. McMulkin the bronze medal.

Sander & Son, St. Albans, England, showed the new Nicotiana Sanderæ, with rosy red flowers two and one-half inches in diameter. It was greatly admired and will become popular for pot culture and outdoor bedding. It received a silver medal. Waban Rose Conservatories received a first-class certificate for their new rose, Wellesley, the color of which takes the popular fancy and will make it in big demand. They also showed a fine vase of American Beauty. Carl Jurgens had fine Kaiserin and John Cook, of Baltimore, a fine new seedling white rose. T. DeVoy & Son received honorable mention for their new geranium, Telegraph. John Scott was awarded a silver medal for Nephrolepis Scottii, of which he had a fine group. F. R. Pierson Co. had some handsome plants of the improved Piersoni. A. M. Davenport had some pretty nephrolepis sports, one from Piersoni receiving honorable mention.

Carnations made quite an extensive showing. William Nicholson's special prize for 100 white went to Peter Fisher for his fine new seedling, which seems to have all the merits of a first-class commercial variety. Peter Fisher's prize for fifty Nelson Fisher went to M. A. Patten & Son, while Patten's prize for Mrs. M. A. Patten went to William Nicholson. H. A. Stevens & Co. had fine vases of Fair Maid, Enchantress, Queen, Harry Fenn, Mrs. Patten and J. H. Manley. Geo. B. Anderson received honorable mention for Seedling No. 10. John Barr showed Elaine, a promising white. H. A. Jahn Co. had about a dozen seedlings. Wild Rose received honorable mention. S. J. Goddard showed Helen Goddard, of a beautiful lustrous pink shade, which was much admired. It will be heard from later. He received honorable mention for a light pink seedling No. 9. J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., had fine vases of Estelle, Mrs. Patten and The Bride. The journey had used up some of them in spite of ideal packing. William Nicholson's vase of 100 mixed blooms was a beauty. Backer & Co. showed Crusader, Flamingo, Nelson Fisher and fine Enchantress. L. E. Small, Tewsbury, showed his white seedling.

Coolidge Bros. had a good White Lawson and White Cloud. M. A. Patten & Son had honorable mention for a pink sport from Mrs. Patten and Peter Fisher a similar award for his crimson seedling, No. 113. He also had a fine flesh-colored seedling of the form of Joost. R. C. Pye, Nyack, N. Y., had a rather dull scarlet seedling and one similar in color to Mrs. Lawson. L. E. Small showed striped Lawson. C. N. Osborne, Newington, Conn., had a new white seedling. Victory from Guttman & Weber received a certificate of merit. It is a fine, clear scarlet, size, stem, calyx and form excellent. Robert Craig, owned by the Cottage Gardens and the J. D. Thompson Co., also received a certificate of merit, color very fine scarlet, stem strong, flower fringed, and good form. Fiancee from Chicago Carnation Co., arrived on the third day. It received a certificate of merit. Gibson Beauty, from J. D. Thompson Co., received honorable mention.

The first and second prize collections of eight specimen chrysanthemum plants from William Anderson and D. F. Roy each received a cultural certificate, which were well merited.

Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., sent a few seedling chrysanthemums which arrived on the third day. It was pleasant to have one exhibit from our western friends.

There was a fine exhibit of fruits and vegetables in the basement hall. Silver medals were awarded to Warren Heustis & Son for celery and to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher, gardener, for the finest brussels sprouts ever staged in Boston, or probably in America.

Business Meeting.

The business session of the C. S. A. was held Friday afternoon, November 4. President Herrington presided and there was a good attendance. In the absence of Secretary Lemon, Elijah A. Wood was appointed secretary pro-tem. President Herrington delivered a short address in opening the session. His remarks in part were as follows:

"We are pleased to meet in the city of Boston, where all horticultural societies receive a hospitable welcome. After the institution of the C. S. A. it was a long time ere it dared essay to hold an exhibition. At last, however, one was held, in Chicago, and we have continued to hold one from that time. It was a long time ere any of the horticultural societies had sufficient confidence to ask for this association. That time has now happily passed. The splendid exhibition speaks for itself. As a society we should apologize to our Boston friends for the comparative paucity of contributions as a society. I confess a feeling of keenest disappointment at the non-attendance of many prominent growers and the absence of their exhibits, more especially of western friends." He did not make a prepared address.

The following is the full report of Secretary Fred H. Lemon:

In making a report for the year 1903-4, it is not necessary to give a review of the work of the year, as the published proceedings for 1903 show the results which have been accomplished. The delay in placing this publication in the hands of the members is greatly regretted by the secretary, and can only be explained by the lack of a realization of the immense amount of work and time required to prepare the Elmer D. Smith variety lists for the printer and a consequent delay in beginning the work.

The publication of the proceedings for 1903 will cost the society a considerable sum. The income of the society for the year, as will be seen by the treasurer's report, will not nearly equal this outlay. At the convention in November, 1903, the secretary, realizing that such would be the case, asked for instructions regarding the extent of the publication and received orders to "make it as complete as possible." Now, it is certain that the society cannot go on spending more each year than it receives. The income resulting from the exhibition of seedlings before committees is much less than in former years and for some unknown reason the secretary finds it very difficult to persuade the members to pay their dues promptly. Three appeals have been sent out during the year and yet there are ninety-one members delinquent. Even if all dues had been paid, the income would still be too small to cover this year's expenses. It will be understood, of course, that this publication has cost more than the proceedings will cost in the future on account of the variety lists. All things considered, the secretary strongly recommends that the dues be increased to $2 per year, payable in advance, as suggested by Mr. C. W. Johnson.

Further, the society should pass a resolution instructing the secretary to mail the society's valuable publications only to members whose dues are paid. A genuine effort on the part of the members to get their neighbors to join would certainly increase the membership list.

For some reason unknown to the writer there has been a great falling off in the demand for the society's certificates during the past few years. It is a peculiar fact that not one of the wonderful Wells-Pockett set of novelties for last year was set up before the committees. Since one of the five "objects" given as reasons for the organization of the C. S. A. is "to stimulate the growing and introduction of improved varieties in every legitimate way," the society ought to inquire into the reason for this condition and endeavor to correct it. If the society could see its way clear to offer a medal to the firm receiving the greatest number of certificates in a year exhibiting before the committees would be stimulated.

A proper revision of scales is also of the greatest importance. In this connection the secretary desires to state that the use of the new scales for this fall's judging was favored by every member of the executive committee except one, and as a consequence the scales were put into use, mainly for the purpose of testing their efficiency.

The most important work before this convention must be the consideration of plans to increase the society's income or reduce expenses.

The treasurer, John N. May, gave his financial report, showing a small balance. In regard to the dues he recommended $2 a year and said that if a smaller amount was adopted no more reports need be expected. The society to exist must have funds to support it. It was unanimously decided that the dues be made $2.

A discussion arose as to whether money prizes or cups were the more desirable. C. H. Totty, J. T. Scott and F. R. Pierson approved of cups. It was voted to continue cups and to offer one next year for ten blooms of one variety. It was voted that district vice-presidents be appointed by the president. It was voted that the president have power to appoint a committee of five to take charge of the exhibits annually.

The committee on the revision of the scale of points for judging exhibition and commercial blooms, E. A. Wood, E. D. Smith and E. G. Hill, gave their report as follows:

After lengthy deliberation and correspondence with many of the leading chrysanthemum growers, we recommend the adoption of the following scales:

Commercial.		Exhibition.
Color	20	Color	10
Form	15	Stem	5
Fullness	10	Foliage	5
Stem	15	Fullness	15
Foliage	15	Form	15
Substance	15	Depth	15
Size	10	Size	35

Your committee has found that it is the consensus of opinion that a good commercial variety must be a well balanced form in all the essential parts and have endeavored to average the scale, so that a variety being exceedingly strong in one or two parts and weak in balance could not score the necessary number of points and have not given any one requisite a large number of points, but all agree that in our exhibition blooms the bloom itself is the one thing to be judged and that size is the principal factor and have so arranged the scale to bring out this as the most prominent feature.

We further recommend that the various committees use the scale in all their judgments, for that is the only way to know whether our scales are right or wrong and dispense justice to exhibitors.

The discussion on the adoption of the scale was opened by E. A. Wood, who said blooms were scaled too much alike, therefore it seemed needless to have two scales. The committee did not know what distinctiveness meant. If it had been used many sorts would never have passed the committees. Such a fine variety as Colonel Appleton did not score on distinctiveness. A bloom to pass commercially must be solid, have great substance, stiff stem and foliage up to flower. As regards exhibition blooms there is a considerable demand for these large, showy sorts which may not have a stem as stiff as a crow-bar. Size was absolutely necessary. Depth is size, some would say, breadth was suggested. They would be criticised for favoring wide, flat flowers. One half of the points, fifty, are in reality for size.

Mr. Totty thought too much was given to mere size. The short vase classes, he considered very useful. His idea would be to cut down the points given to size and add to color. In the opinion of the New York committee size should be twenty, color twenty, stem ten, foliage ten, depth fifteen, the balance going to fullness and form.

Mr. Wood said some considered color too low. The C. S. A. idea is to judge a seedling for a certificate and not for an exhibition. E. D. Smith said color amounted to nothing, as catalogues tell it all accurately and considered color should be a small factor. A. McLellan thought points for size too high, the scale set too much for commercial flowers. Smaller flowers with good stem and foliage should receive more consideration.

James Wheeler considered distinct types necessary. He would advocate taking away ten points from size in exhibition blooms and giving five each to stem and foliage. Mr. Duckham approved of Mr. Wheeler's suggestion. Mr. Herrington said anything to be distinctive must be new. Term was too indefinite. It would be a gain to leave out the term distinctiveness altogether, as recommended by the committee.

Mr. Wheeler made a motion in line with his suggestions and it was unanimously carried. The new scales on exhibition flowers therefore now stand: Color, 10; foliage, 10; form, 15; size, 25; stem, 10; fullness, 15; depth, 15.

For the next meeting invitations were read from the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, from the Indiana Floral Festival Association and from the American Institute of New York. William Nicholson moved and C. H. Totty seconded a motion to accept the invitation to meet in Philadelphia in 1905. This was carried unanimously.

The election of officers was next proceeded with. H. Dailledouze moved and Wm. Nicholson seconded the nomination of Wiliam H. Duckham for the post. No other candidate being named, Mr. Duckham was unanimously elected amid warm applause. Mr. Duckham briefly and feelingly thanked the members for the honor done him. He felt ere coming there that he would refuse any post tendered him. He had, however, changed his mind and would accept the office. He wanted to see the society grow faster and with the kind aid and consideration of the members he would endeavor to further that end and maintain its honor and dignity.

For vice-president James Wheeler, of Brookline, was nominated by W. A. Riggs and seconded by W. N. Craig. Mr. Wheeler was unanimously elected and thanked the members for the honor done him. John N. May, the always faithful treasurer, was unanimously reelected. A. J. Loveless and F. H. Lemon were nominated for secretary, Mr. Lemon being elected.

A large number of new members were elected to membership and the meeting was full of encouragement.

The Banquet.

The banquet tendered to the visiting members of the C. S. A. was held at the Copley Square Hotel, on Friday evening, November 4. Over 100 guests were present, including a number of ladies. The tables were decorated with flowers and Asparagus plumosus furnished by Welch Bros., W. Nicholson, Waban Conservatories, W. H. Elliott, William Sim and others. An efficient orchestra furnished music.

President J. A. Pettigrew, of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, presided and called on President Herrington for an address. Mr. Herrington said in part: "On behalf of the C. S. A. I know I am expressing a sentiment in all our members' hearts when I thank you from the bottom of my heart for your welcome and entertainment. We are deficient in numbers to what we ought to be, but we are certainly not deficient in enthusiasm. We have had a somewhat trying ordeal during our existence, but the present climax seems to mark the turning point in our prosperity and efficacy as a national society."

Judge Hoitt, of Nashua, N. H., was introduced as toast-master by President Pettigrew. The judge in this capacity proved himself inimitable and created great amusement by his numerous sallies and anecdotes. He introduced as the first speaker, Mr. Jerome Jones, who made a felicitous speech.

John N. May was enthusiastically applauded on rising to speak. "In spite of all criticisms, chrysanthemums have made a wonderful advance in the last decade and would make a still greater one in the succeeding ten years. If only the C. S. A. could get the roll of members needed, it could then do something creditable. The compilation of every variety ever raised in America now ready for distribution to members was worth more than the price of membership."

F. R. Pierson said he was always glad to come to his native city and felt the interests of his business demanded at least four trips a year to the shows to keep abreast of the times. E. A. Wood sang with telling effect, "Jingle Bells," the other members joining in the chorus.

After a few remarks from E. Jenkins, of Lenox, Alexander Wallace, of New York, was called upon, made a felicitous speech and also sang. John K. M. L. Farquhar spoke of the work being done and still to be carried out by the new management of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. W. N. Craig was called upon and furnished a humorous recitation. W. J. Stewart spoke for the ladies. Messrs. J. B. Shea and Morton made a few remarks after which Judge Hoitt called on Jackson Dawson as the last speaker. After a few preliminary remarks, Mr. Dawson treated the audience to a fine rendition of an old English song, followed by "Auld Lang Syne."

Convention Jottings.

William H. Duckham, the newly elected president of the C. S. A., is a modest, unassuming gentleman. His name is in every grower's mouth this year, just as his good wife's will be a year hence. As a grower of specimen blooms Mr. Duckham is without a peer.

James Wheeler, the new vice president of the C. S. A., has been a member of the C. S. A. seedling committee in Boston for some years. He has raised quite a number of good seedlings, one of the best being J. H. White, for years classed as one of the best whites. He is an indefatigable worker on all horticultural lines and will prove a worthy lieutenant for Mr. Duckham.

The Wells-Pockett set in charge of C. H. Totty was the most scrutinized by the growers. Mr. Totty should sell a large quantity of these novelties. Some are better than anything on the market today.

The two Scotts, hailing from Tarrytown and Brooklyn, each reported fine business for his fern. Each came in for its measure of praise.

William Duckham's blooms were reminders of the grand specimens Brydon, Montgomery, McKay and others used to stage. Let all young growers wake up and recover their lost laurels.

W. A. Rigg's blooms were the best grown in this section and show what superb flowers can be produced in boxes.

A great many visitors admired the pompons, singles and anemones much more than the big blooms. On private estates the tendency in Massachusetts is toward medium flowers. The craze for mammoth blooms is subsiding and this must effect future shows to some extent.

Visitors.

Among the visitors to the chrysanthemum show were E. Jenkins, Carlquist, Hermans, A. J. Loveless, Redstone and Proctor, Lenox, Mass.; W. Duckham, A. Herrington, C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; J. N. May, G. F. Struck, Summit, N. J.; Alfred Dimmock, St. Albans, England; F. R. Pierson, J. T. Scott, Tarrytown, N. Y.; F. H. Traendly, H. Dailledouze, A. J. Guttman, Alex. Wallace, Patrick O'Mara, Chas. Weathered, New York; J. D. Thompson, Joliet, Ill.; Robert Laurie, William Hollingsworth, Wm. Hill, Farquhar Macrae, John Macrae, P. M. Johnson, Wm. Miller, Providence, R. I.; D. Shepherd, Alex. McLellan, B. Anthony, E. J. Coghlan, James Boyd, A. McWilliams, A. McLennan, James Robertson, Odin Robertson, D. McIntosh and John Anderson, Newport, R. I.; John Scott, Brooklyn, N. Y.; T. Fieldhouse, Frank Atkinson, Falmouth, Mass.; E. O. Orpet, Joseph Clark, Wm. Anderson, South Lancaster, Mass.; John Ash, A. J. Newell, Pomfret, Conn., and T. W. Head, Groton, Conn.

THE BOSTON EXHIBITION.

Viewed as a picture, the Boston show stays in my memory as a pleasant dream, the main hall where the plants and groups were staged being very attractive. While the specimen plants were said to be smaller than in some previous years, they were perfectly finished and of a quality that cannot be seen anywhere else in the country. The brick walls of the building were hidden by elaborate decorations of greenery which improved its appearance very much and contributed greatly to the general effect.

The chief interest for me centered in the chrysanthemum cut flower exhibits and, though one might wish that the entries in the special classes offered by the C. S. A. had been more numerous, the quality of the flowers set up in those classes left nothing to be desired. W. Duckham won almost everything in sight, capturing the C. S. A. silver cup with Mrs. W. Duckham, which is more fully described elsewhere; the Totty prize for twelve W. Duckhams; the E. G. Hill prize for twenty-four flowers; the C. S. A. prize for twenty-four flowers; the Wells gold medal and the Herrington prize for six flowers, any color, Thomas W. Head running second in several classes. These flowers were the largest in the exhibition and were much admired. W. Wells sent over from England some fifty flowers of new varieties, Merstham Yellow, Mrs. W. Duckham, J. H. Doyle, Mrs. A. J. Miller, Merstham Crimson and others showing up finely. These flowers were cut, most of them, on October 17 and some had already formed part of a gold medal exhibit in London before being packed up and sent to this country. That the flowers were still in better condition than some flowers grown within twenty miles of Boston was looked on as wonderful and it is a tribute to the enterprise of Mr. Wells and the excellence of present day transportation facilities. This exhibit was deservedly awarded a gold medal.

The other cut flower classes were much better filled by the local growers, the big vase exhibits showing the highest quality. The carnation classes were well filled and the quality of the flowers wonderful for so early in the season. In the same hall with the carnations was an orchid exhibit from the Ames estate (W. N. Craig, gardener), that could hardly be duplicated in the country.

Special mention may be made of exhibits of the Scottii fern, the new Pierson fern and a vase of Nicotiana Sanderae from Sander & Son, of St. Albans, England. It was the first time the latter novelty had been exhibited in this country, and it was awarded a silver medal.

At the business meeting of the C. S. A. there were about a hundred present, when President Herrington called the meeting to order. The principal new business was the final adoption of the scale of points for judging seedlings. The commercial scale was adopted as handed in by the committee, but the exhibition scale was revised somewhat. Some twenty-four new members were accepted and I see no reason why the C. S. A. should not move onward and upward at a rapid rate.

The banquet given in honor of the C. S. A.'s visit was one of the most enjoyable things I ever attended and too much praise cannot be given to the committee in charge of the affair. Judge Hoitt as toastmaster cannot be equalled and he can bring down the house whenever he wishes. The time passed all too quickly and I wish to place myself on record as publicly thanking the members of the craft in Boston for their uniform kindness and courtesy to the visiting delegations.

Charles H. Totty.

WM. DUCKHAM.

When the king was in a devil of a fix,
He was wont to send for a Devon, maw Sir.

So run the words of an old English song and while the C. S. A., is not in any kind of a fix, it has sent for a Devonshire man as its executive head for the next year, Mr. Duckham hailing from that smiling county of large cheeses and clotted cream.

It need not be inferred, however, that because he was born in a pastoral community that the new president is anything of a farmer. He has often proved his ability to travel in any kind of company and when it comes to lifting prizes in a mum competition, he is easily the champion of the heavyweights. He could easily afford to give Sir Thomas Lipton half a dozen silver cups and have some left to grace his sideboard as testimonials to his cultural skill.

It was a case of the office seeking the man, for Mr. Duckham is not the kind that goes looking for anything, modesty being his chief characteristic, but that he will fill the chair to the satisfaction of everyone, no one who knows him can for a moment doubt.

Mr. Duckham is not only a chrysanthemum expert but an all-round grower, carnations, orchids, palms, stove plants and in fact, almost everything he grows showing the touch of the master hand. The estate of D. Willis James, of Madison, N. J., of which he is the superintendent, is one of the best known places in the east, and it has grown into being under his personal care and supervision. He is of uncertain age, being not nearly so old as he looks, his careworn expression (?) being due to hard study, trying to beat his own record in growing big mums every year. He is a good shot, a first-class bowler and his popularity in the community where he resides was well expressed in a local newspaper the other day when it referred to him as "our esteemed fellow townsman."

Cut Blooms at the Monmouth County Society's Exhibition, Red Bank, N. J.

THE PHILADELPHIA SHOW.

The fall exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society opened on Tuesday evening, November 8, and was as large and handsome as any display ever held in that city. The general feeling was that the cut blooms of chrysanthemums were finer than those shown in previous years, while the plants were, as a rule, remarkably well grown. The quantity of cut flowers of chrysanthemums was so great that besides decorating the stairway with the usual freedom, a large overflow was staged in the lower hall, driving the vegetables, of which there were, luckily, not very many, almost to the rear entrance.

The main stairway was bordered its entire length by vases of handsome specimen blooms, divided in the center, at the first landing, by a group of well grown geraniums. The center of the main hall was devoted to a Japanese garden enclosed by a rustic fence, the posts surmounted by bark baskets filled with pompons, contrasting prettily with the larger flowers with which the garden was filled. Colored Japanese lanterns overhead lit up the scene beautifully. This bit of decorative work was in Wm. Graham's best style.

The chrysanthemum plants, which filled most of the hall, were well arranged and of excellent quality, the very few poor ones serving to bring out the good points of the others. The specimens in 14-inch pots and the 6-inch grown to one flower were especially fine. Gordon Smirl, gardener to J. F. Sinnot, Rosemont, showed a great number of blue ribbon winners.

The stage was devoted to an interesting collection of rare foliage plants shown by Henry A. Dreer, Riverton. Against the walls were groups of foliage plants containing many fine specimens, some much too crowded for best effect. A group of ten crotons in ten varieties were well grown and superbly colored.

Julius Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J., was first with a handsome collection of commercial orchids in bloom. Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., were second. Mr. Roehrs also showed a grand specimen Cattleya labiata with twenty-nine blooms.

The cut chrysanthemums were wonders. The twelve blooms in twelve varieties with which F. Ibbotson won the blue ribbon, were warmly praised as being the finest ever seen here. His varieties were Merza, white; Queen Alexandria, bronze; J. Falconer, yellow; T. Carrington, red; F. A. Cobbold, pink; Nellie Pockett, white; Leila Filkins, pink; F. S. Vallis, yellow; W. R. Church, red and gold; M. Inglis, yellow; W. Duckham, pink; Ben Wells, white. There were many other exhibits of choice blooms.

The foyer was filled with a well-grown lot of foliage plants and some specimen dracænas in variety were especially noteworthy. Down stairs a table or more of pompons were effectively arranged. A half-dozen full-grown pots of tiny blooms surmounted by an immense cut bloom of the modern Japanese type marked the evolution. Henry F. Michell Co. had a clever device showing mushrooms growing in a bed for which their spawn had been used. The evergreens and autumn leaves decorated the lobby.

RED BANK, N. J.

The seventh annual exhibition of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held in the Town Hall at Red Bank, N. J., November 1 and 2. It was, artistically and financially, the greatest success this society ever had. The blooms were at their best and of immense size. The judges remarked that they were the best blooms they ever judged and as good as they think will be staged this year. A feature of this show is to have the high school scholars admitted free, accompanied by their teachers, and we think this is about the best advertisement an exhibition can have. The large hall was not sufficient to hold all the exhibits, so the audience room down stairs was likewise filled. On the second day we had some celebrated visitors, including State Senator Francis, U. S. Senator Keane and the Republican candidate for Governor, who was presented with a bouquet.

In groups of chrysanthemums H. McCarron, gardener for W. F. Havemeyer, received first prize, H. A. Williams, gardener for Selmar Hess, and N. Butterbach, gardener for C. N. Bliss, equal second prizes. For best three specimen bush plants, H. A. Williams was first, and H. A. Kettel, gardener for James Loeb, second. For one specimen bush plant H. A. Kettel was first and H. A. Williams second. For six specimen bush plants anemone varieties, H. A. Kettel was first and G. H. Hale, gardener for E. D. Adams, second. For group of ornamental foliage plants arranged for effect Mr. Butterbach was first and H. A. Kettel second. For specimen palm Mr. Kettel was first, Mr. Butterbach second. For specimen foliage plant not palm Mr. Hale was first and Mr. Butterbach second. For six single specimen plants suitable for dinner table decoration Mr. Hale first and Mr. Kettle second. For six specimen ferns Mr. Williams was first and Mr. Butterbach second, the awards for specimen fern being in the same order.

On cut blooms Wm. Turner, gardener for M. C. D. Borden was first for thirty-six blooms in six varieties, for twenty-five blooms in distinct varieties, for white, yellow, pink, crimson and "any other color" in the classes for six blooms. G. H. Hale was first for twenty-five blooms arranged for effect, for six Carnot, for six bronze, and second on several others. N. Butterbach was first for twelve blooms in twelve varieties.

Mr. Hale was first on tweleve Beauties, Mr. Butterbach second; on twelve Brides Mr. Butterbach was first, Mr. Kettle second. On Maids Mr. Tierney was first, Mr. Butterbach second. On "any other" Mr. Hale was first, Mr. Butterbach second.

On vases of twelve carnations Wm. Turner was first on white, pink, red and crimson. On "any other," Mr. Logan was first.

On violets Geo. Kuhn was first for both single and double, Wm. Dowlen being second for the former and Oliver McIntosh for the latter.

There was a fine showing of fruits and vegetables.

The judges were C. H. Totty, Peter Duff and Wm. Bartholmae.

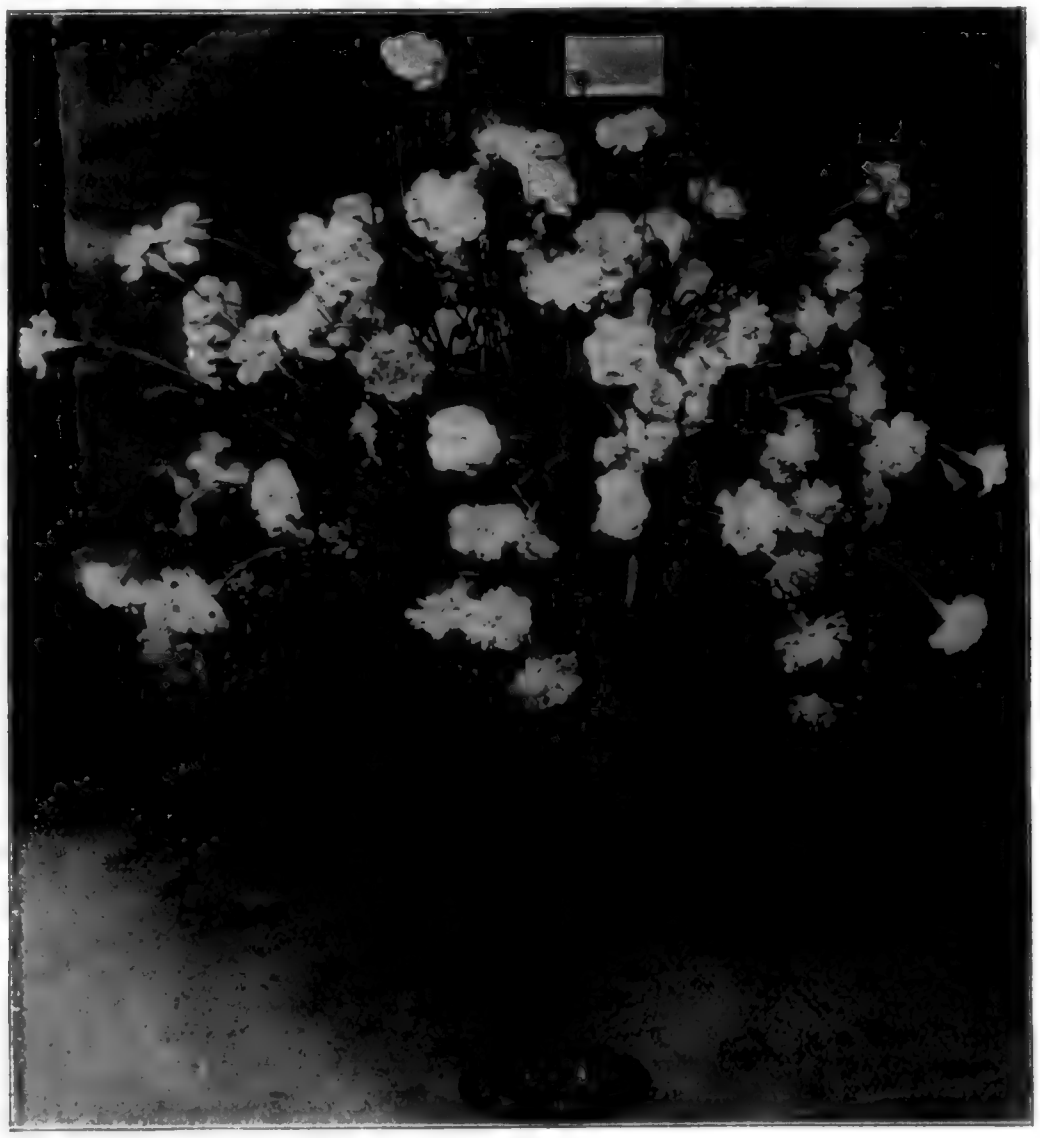
There was bowling both days of the show, good scores being made. B.

THE TARRYTOWN SHOW

The sixth annual exhibition of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held in Music Hall November 1 to 3, and was quite up to the usual high standard for which the shows held under the auspices of this progressive society are already far-famed. The one great drawback in Tarrytown is that the largest hall is too small. Several of the visitors remarked that there was a falling off in the number of plants exhibited but a number of these were purposely left at home by the members so as to allow more room for the cut blooms.

The principal exhibitors in plants were Samuel Untermyer, Yonkers, John Featherstone, gardener; Mrs. Geo. Lewis, James Ballantyne, gardener, and Mrs. J. B. Trevor, Yonkers, Howard Nichols, gardener. Plants of special note were Mr. Untermyer's Pritchardia grandis and Pandanus Sanderiana, Mrs. Trevor's Goniophlebium subauriculatum and Adiantum Farleyense and Mrs. Lewis' Maranta Zebrina. A very fine specimen of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine measuring nearly four feet through came from Mrs. Ogden Codman, David McFarlane, gardener.

Among the commercial exhibitors were F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown; John N. May, Summit, N. J.; John M. Hunter, Edgewarter, N. J.; the Swan Peterson Floral Co., of Gibson City, Ill.; Thomas Barson, Johnstown, N. Y., and Samuel Grigg, of Pittsfield, Mass. The F. R. Pierson Co. showed a group of palms, foliage plants, ferns and chrysanthemums. Among the latter two seedlings, No. 1, yellow, and No. 2, pink, showed up well. F. A. Cobbold, Leila Filkins, Dr. Enguehard and Donald McLeod were also shown in good form. They were awarded the society's silver medal for Nephrolepis elegantissima. John N. May staged Carnation Phyllis, a new pink of the Enchantress type. This is a large, full flower of good form and claimed to be an ideal grower. John M. Hunter staged a lot of seedling chrysanthemums, all single and semi-double. They showed a fine range of coloring and look like a class that would be very useful for commercial purposes. The Swan Peterson Co.'s exhibit was a vase of the new carnation, Gibson Beauty, of the Enchantress type. The flowers were not so large but of fine form and the color brighter than Enchantress. Samuel Grigg staged a lot of novelties in chrysanthemums, several of which were very promising.



Of the new varieties in chrysanthemums among the best were Maynell, Mrs. S. T. Wright and Henry Barnes in crimson; Wm. Duckham, Leila Filkins and Janet Lady Clark in pink; F. S. Vallis, Gen. Hutton and Donald McLeod in yellow. In white there was nothing to beat the older varieties, such as Merza, Mrs. Weeks, Mme. Carnot and Nellie Pockett, which were all well shown.

JOLIET FLOWER SHOW.

The Joliet flower show November 3 to 5 was an unqualified success. The exhibits were numerous, the quality of the stock good and the arrangement left nothing to be desired. There were a considerable number of exhibits from out of town and many trade visitors, particularly on the closing day.

Poehlmann Bros., Chicago, were first for twenty-five Beauties, Liberty, Golden Gate and Maid and second for Bride and "any other." Weiland & Risch were second for Maid and third for Bride. The Chicago Carnation Company was first for Bride and "any other," second for Beauty, Peter Reinberg being third. Robert Klagge was third for "any other." The Carnation company was first for basket of roses and vase of mums, also for best palm, araucaria, dracaena, Boston fern, other fern and flowering plant other than mums. Vaughan was first on berried plant, also on chrysanthemum plants, Buehler second. Among the exhibitors of made-up work were J. M. Smely, Aurora; Schiller, H. C. Rowe and P. J. Hauswirth. There was a large display of carnations, W. C. Hill, of Streator, showing Melody, a sport from Lawson.

PITTSBURG CLUB SHOW.

November 1 was club night at Pittsburg. The subject for discussion was the chrysanthemum and we had a royal show of these. The members turned out in great force. Every seat in the hall was taken and several men were standing. Although the meeting began promptly at 8 o'clock not a man left his chair until 10:30, it was so absorbingly interesting.

A. Herrington, president of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, Madison, N. J., sent a box of fine blooms of the newer varieties that elicited much admiration. Nathan Smith & Son, of Adrian, Mich., sent a lot of good new varieties and their fine seedlings of last year. And our never failing friends R. Vincent, Jr., & Son, White Marsh, Md., loaded us with sheaves of pompon loveliness. William K. Harris, of Philadelphia, sent us fine flowers of his own private varieties and some standard sorts. This is the letter Mr. Harris sent with his flowers:

The varieties originated by us and not to be disseminated are Grace, Elizabeth Harris, Florence Harris and Wm. McKinley, the balance are old and popular varieties. The blooms are not selected for size, but they are the average run of our stock. We grow three flowers to the plant and plant them on our benches 8x10 inches apart. When we stake our plants and give them our first tying up we cut out all the weak shoots but four. Then when giving the second tying we again cut out from each plant the weakest shoot, leaving three heavy, uniform shoots to each plant. This method gives you a heavy cut and the crop comes very uniform in size of blooms and even in blooming. Great care must be exercised at all times in the watering when they are planted so thickly, otherwise the foliage will be most apt to rot and in this event be of little value. We think it most important to disbud at the earliest possible moment.

We never feed our plants with either liquid fertilizers or mulch, but depend on a rich compost from the start. Our beds of soil run from two inches to three inches deep. Thus, having shallow beds, we have the conditions of the soil and drainage in regard to watering always under control.

Our idea is to have our varieties different from the general run; then if such varieties as we control exclusively are wanted, they must be served by us. This gives us an easier market and not so much competition in price.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. brought over a splendid showing of blooms and the Florists' Exchange wholesale house and Julius Ludwig contributed liberally to the display. Mr. Zimmermann, of Dixmont; the Valley Greenhouses, Leetdale; Blind Brothers, West View, and O. Godwin & Sons, Bridgeville, brought in freely of their product. Thos. Jenkinson, gardener to A. R. Peacock, was a new exhibitor among us. He brought in about thirty varieties of enormous proportions with stems four feet long, stiff as a walking stick and with leathery leaves to the neck. Then came John Jones, of the Phipps Conservatories, with faultless blooms of gigantic size and some potted plants to show how he had grown them. Among his blooms was a Vallis fourteen inches in diameter. It was the largest flower in the hall. All his plants are grown in pots and nearly all are single-stemmed. Every plant must have perfect foliage from the pot up and any in the least degree deficient in this respect never see the conservatory.

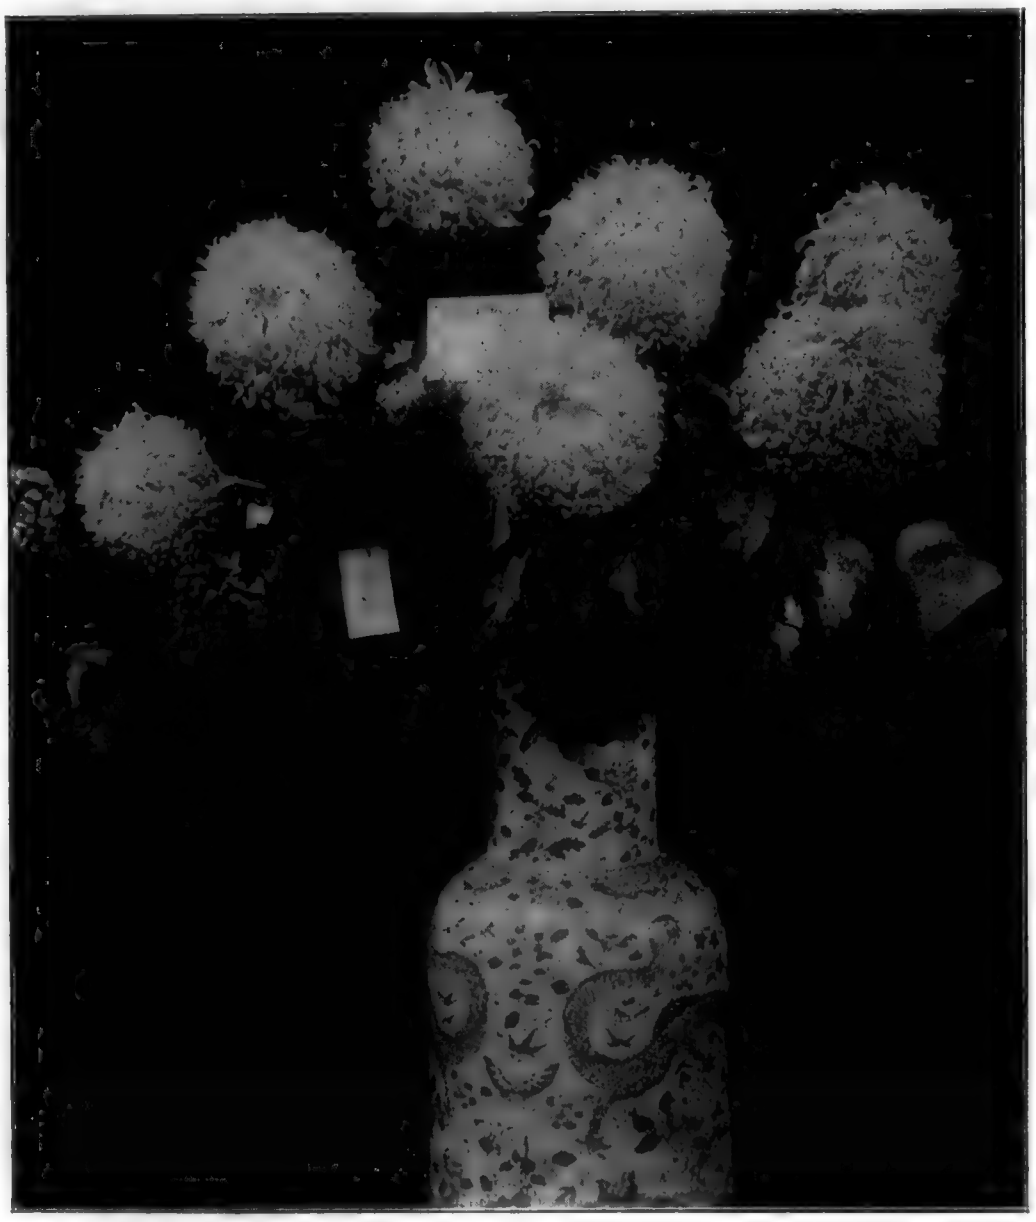
All of the out of town flowers and those from Mr. Peacock's place and the parks, after doing duty at the Florists' Club were taken by the president and exhibited, a day or two after, at the meeting of the Botanical Society of Western Pennsylvania, thus being doubly honored.

Several of the prominent growers gave their methods of cultivation. Young plants are struck and potted in early spring and later on the tops of these are struck. While both strikings are used, preference is given to the later batch. They are stronger, stockier and less hide bound than the other and give an evener crop of bloom. They are planted in beds in May, June and July, as houses are ready for them, in three to five inches of soil and eight to nine inches apart. Usually two and sometimes three blooms are allowed to a plant. They occupy houses emptied of bedding plants or spring blooming stock and are removed in time to make room for filling with carnations from pots and longiflorum lilies or hydrangeas.



Some feed with liquid manure. Aside from a little bone dust mixed with the soil very little artificial fertilizer is used. There is an impression it has a tendency to cause the dropping of the lower leaves. In potting, John Jones doesn't fill his flowering pots quite full, but when the soil becomes well filled with roots he fills them up with rich compost containing a goodly quantity of pulverized sheep manure and a sprinkling of bone flour; later he waters freely with sheep manure liquid. Beware of overfeeding; defoliated and cankered-looking plants are often the result. Mr. Jones believes in firm potting. For pot plants cane stakes are used, but for bench plants Fred Burki runs string lengthwise and uses a wire stake to each plant, fastening it to the overhead string.

For black fly fumigating once a week with tobacco stems and a liberal use of fresh stems about the floors and under the benches is practiced, also freely dusting the tips of the shoots with tobacco powder. The parks use tobacco paper for fumigating, letting it smoulder for hours, but Fred Burki says this is too expensive for commercial purposes.

Our next meeting will be on Tuesday evening, December 6 and it is to be a smoker. E. C. Reineman and Gus Ludwig have been appointed a committee with full power to get it up, so if any of our florist or gardener friends throughout the country happen this way about that time, just drop in to see us. Guess you won't be sorry. PREX.

WORLD'S FAIR AWARDS.

The individual nature of the information which has come to hand with regard to the World's Fair awards in the Departments of Horticulture and Agriculture prompted a request on the management for a complete and official list of the awards. The following is the reply of Chief F. W. Taylor, dated November 3:

"Replying to your letter, I have been very much disturbed at the way in which the giving out of awards information has been handled, but it has seemed impossible to do it in any other way. As a matter of fact, it now stands so that I am under orders not to give out information as definite until some questions pending between the national commission and the management are settled. I regret more than I can tell you this condition and will be glad to give you information as soon as possible."

ROSES.

Watering.

One of the most essential requirements of a rose grower, or, indeed, of a grower of any kind of stock under glass, is a thorough knowledge of the art of watering. To a lack of this knowledge may be ascribed many of the failures in rose and carnation growing. The art can only be acquired by long practice, keen observation of the wants of the plants, deliberative and careful adjudication of attending conditions, accompanied by a knowledge of the real service that water performs in supplying the plants with food. That plants require water, every man employed in a greenhouse knows, but the reason why is often beyond their reach. Unfortunately there are among the craft a large number who are content to be copyists, and either deluge or withhold, according to copy, without using their own judgment in the matter.

A year or two ago Mr. Scott gave a most practical and scholarly article on this very subject, but, as the ordinary reader is so prone to forgetfulness, I do not think I am treading on William's patch if I remind my particular readers of the importance of attention to this particular study.

With the shorter duration of sunshine and less intensity of heat there will be a corresponding decrease in evaporation, and, as evaporation means increased root activity, there will of necessity be less and less need of water as the days shorten and the hours of sunshine continue to diminish.

The supply of water necessary to transform the ingredients of the soil or mulch into an assimilable food for the plants when root activity is at its lowest ebb should be carefully considered and the grower who safeguards himself against over-watering at this season will reap the full benefit in future crops.

After mulching, especially where the pipes are under the benches and close to the roots, there is great danger that without a careful inspection every day, as the mulch absorbs and retains the moisture, the bench will have the appearance of being moist enough, when in reality the soil may be quite dry at the bottom. This state of matters will retard crops, weaken the plants, causing a loss of foliage, abnormal buds and make them susceptible to any or all troubles in the list.

The soil should always be moist enough clear through so that by a gentle squeeze of the hand all the particles may adhere and not crumble. Even a little wetter than this, if the temperature and other conditions are right, is desirable and will greatly aid the plants in furnishing good foliage, strong flower stems and put them into condition to utilize any stimulant or chemical food of which they may stand in need. RIBES.

TIME TO FEED.

Please explain your meaning as to using liquid manure when the crops are in the right condition. Rose crops seem to come on and off every six weeks or so. If the roses are to be watered at certain stages of the crop, when and how often should we do it?

A big grower, speaking of feeding solid manure during December and January, said it does not do to cut and feed heavily at the same time. Is it generally customary to feed very little when the heaviest cutting is being done?

R. M. S.

The time when roses enjoy liquid feeding is during the period of growth, between the time the young stems have attained a length of five or six inches and the time the buds show color. Feeding when the crops are fit to cut has a tendency to injure the keeping qualities of the blooms and will certainly destroy the color of such varieties as Bridesmaid, Chatenay and Beauty. RIBES.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

The Chrysanthemum.

Two more weeks and the fascinating mum will have again passed its prime. Bench room will be plentiful and our Christmas plants will engage our most earnest thoughts. I can't help but digress a moment to speak of the thrill of pleasure with which we admire a bench of Maud Dean or Appleton, or perhaps we are progressive enough for it to be a batch of Wm. Duckham or F. S. Vallis. If so, the joy would be still more exalted. Then comes the reaper in the shape of sharp knife and a desolate scene follows.

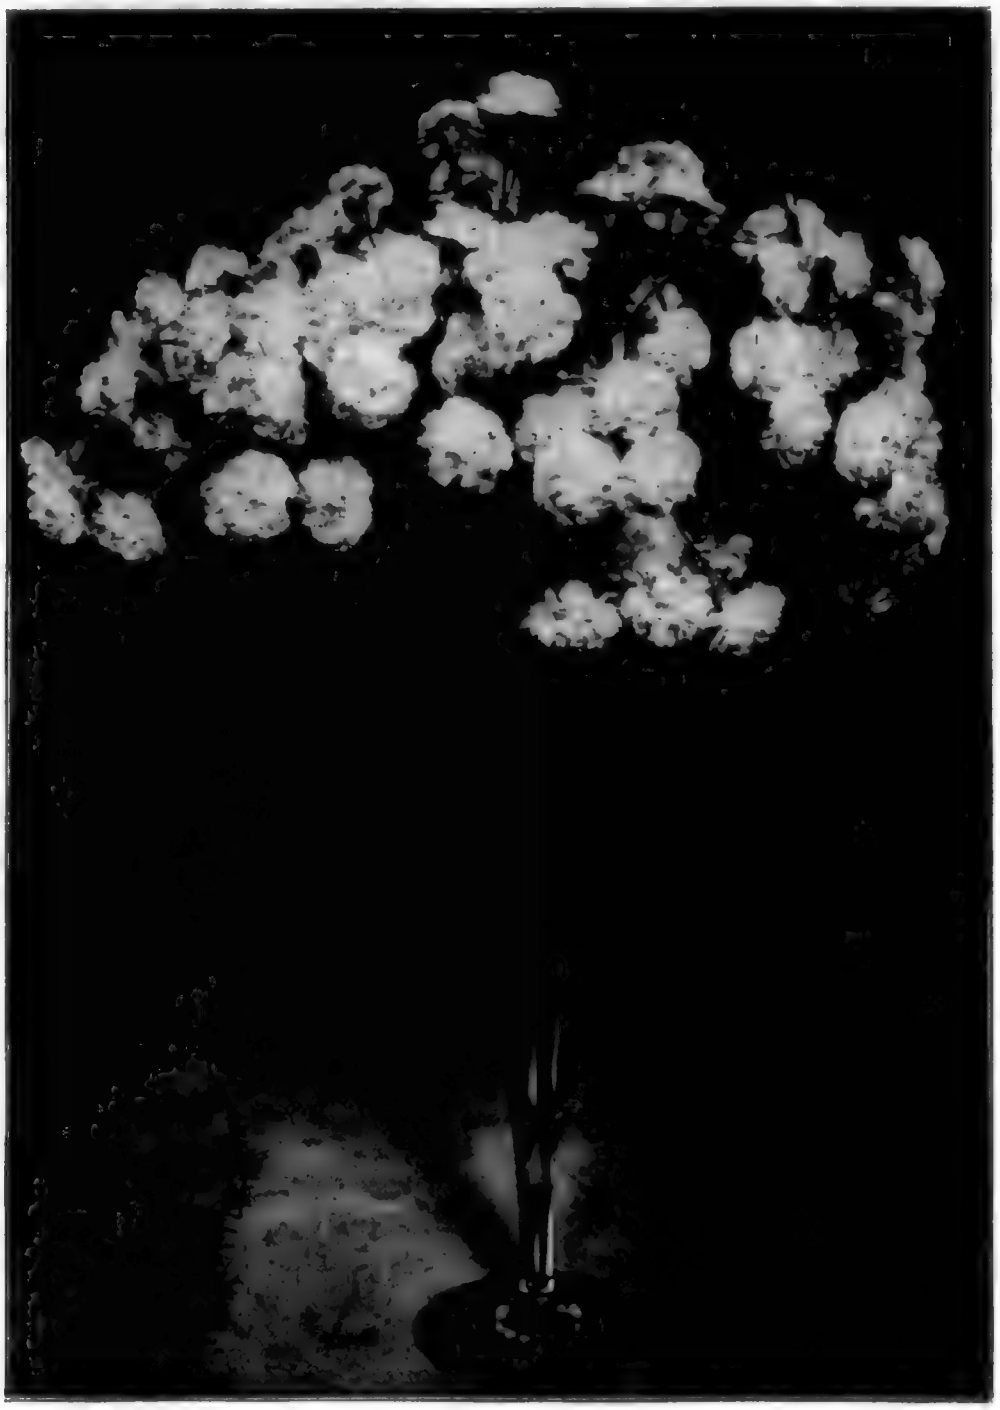
Unlike our roses, carnations or violets, this is no cut and come again crop, and gorgeous and magnificent as are the modern chrysanthemums, it is exactly right that it should be just as it is. If we had them with us more than a few weeks they would not be wanted at all. They leave us not surfeited, but with regret at their flight, and with appetite for another feast and resolved to acquire this and that wonderful variety or still further improve on our culture. It's not alone the dollar they have brought you that has been the pleasure. If you are a born gardener your achievement in producing the grand blossoms and pure love of your plants and flowers will be the mainspring of your future efforts.

Nothing in chrysanthemum lore can be better written, more practical or up-to-date than the notes of "Brian Boru." Everybody who knows the man knows that he knows most thoroughly what he is talking about, and he will excuse me if I drop a hint for the benefit of friends and relatives near home.

I notice too frequently that the chrysanthemum plants that are saved for stock are treated as if it were a tropical plant. I have in one instance seen flats of these old stubs freshly lifted from the bench and placed a few inches above a coil of 4-inch pipes. This is barbarous! Can you expect healthy, vigorous cuttings under such conditions? Don't you realize that the chrysanthemum is almost a hardy plant? The pompons are quite hardy.

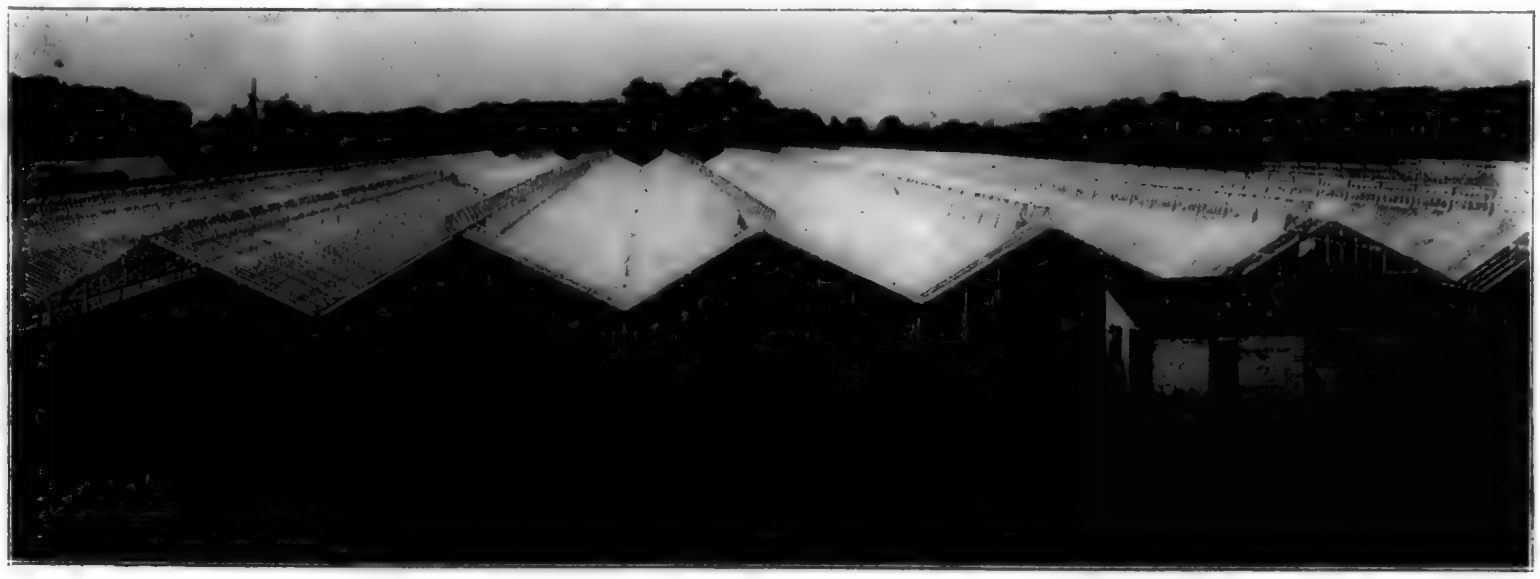
After flowering the plant should rest and be dormant. Therefore a temperature a few degrees above freezing or, say 40 degrees F., and light is what they want. If this rest is given them until the end of February you will get more and better cuttings after you do start them up.

This is meant, of course, for those who have plenty of old plants for stock. For those who may have but one plant of a valuable variety and wish to increase as largely as possible, "B. B." will tell you how to do it, but that is another story.



Berried Plants.

Berried plants are, with many, nothing but the species and varieties of solanum. Although delighting in our hot summers, they are now in fruit and nearly all plants like a lower temperature when in fruit than when in flower. At night 50 degrees will suit them all, with the fullest light, and syringe frequently to keep down spider and thrips.



Ardisia crenulata in moderate-sized, compact plants is the handsomest of all berried plants, either as a single plant or in the basket of mixed plants, so fashionable where the wealthy do congregate. A temperature of 50 degrees is plenty high enough and its chief enemy is the brown scale, which should be removed by a syringing with nicotine solution.

Poinsettias.

It is now weeks past the time when you can with safety disturb the roots of these tropical plants. If you neglected to shift them, say from a 4-inch to a 6-inch, don't do it now or you will lose the foliage, even with the greatest care. Rather, feed them with liquid manure. If you did not make up pans enough, don't do it now. Take care of the little plants in 3-inch or 4-inch pots and put them in the pans or azalea pots a day or so before you expect to sell them. There is no fraud in this, but if you disturb the roots at this date ever so slightly you will have no foliage at Christmas, and without its setting of tropical foliage the poinsettia is a mockery.

From now on, the greatest enemy of this plant, the dirty mealy bug, will make its appearance. You may have no other plant infested, yet among the nectar cups and true flowers of the poinsettias this pest will appear. If you have thoroughly sprayed the crown of each plant they may have been kept away. A spraying of some nicotine solution occasionally would also have kept them away, but if the bracts are partly developed and the bugs have once a good lodgment among the flowers it will pay to take each plant and, while one man holds the plant, another with a sharp, fine stream from the hose, thoroughly rid them of their enemy. One good cleaning in this way will usually suffice and to spray them on the bench with any good results is almost impossible.

The writer has often remarked that the loss of foliage is more often due to starvation of root than a low temperature. When in pots they often are starved and exhausted; planted on a bench for cutting, seldom. About 60 degrees at night is high enough and on a bench with active root growth I have seen them keep most vigorous with 55 degrees at night.

Azaleas.

The importations are unpacked and seem to have crossed the briny ocean safely and arrived in fine condition. Don't delay a day in getting the few varieties into heat that are wanted for Christmas. Be sure that water enough is given at the root at all times to keep the ball of roots moist. The fresh soil you used around the ball of roots and on the surface may appear moist when the roots are not. Look carefully for this and with these early forced plants err on the side of moisture. Spray twice a day until the flowers are showing color. Direct sunlight is not so essential, but they should have light. You must be guided by the earliness of the bloom as to heat. Some individual plants of the same variety, even the precocious Deutsche Perle, will need more heat than others. About 60 degrees now will do and increase another 5 degrees later on if needed.

The summered-over plants and the newly imported plants that are not wanted until Easter you can keep but a little above freezing, if you have the means to do so. Remember the lateness of Easter and how difficult it will be to keep many of the finest varieties for that late date. A house with a northern aspect and a very low temperature is the place for them to winter, particularly this winter.

Cyclamen.

The critical time with cyclamen is past and the earliest are sending up flowers. From 50 to 55 degrees at night is the temperature. Spray the foliage lightly every fine morning. The lightest bench you have will now suit them. I still think it pays well to spread three or four inches of tobacco stems between the pots. It saves much fumigating. By no means should the foliage of the plants be crowded. The bloom is the chief attraction of the cyclamen, yet the handsome foliage and well rounded form of the plant counts for much. The common green fly is very troublesome on the cyclamen, but there is no excuse for it, as tobacco in its many forms, both as an extract and the fumes, will keep them down.

Two years ago we had a number of cyclamen on a shelf at the east end of a rose range. There was no opportunity of spreading stems among the pots, although they had been plunged in stems all summer. The roses were fumigated with the tobacco dust burned in pie dishes (no better plan, I think) and no aphis appeared on the cyclamen. When this combination of dust and the dish is once tried it will, I think, abolish many fussy methods now in vogue.

Easter Lilies.

The earliest forced Bermuda Harrisii are just coming in, but if they come in plentifully after the mums are gone, that will do. Tobacco smoke or the fumes from the dust will easily keep the green fly away from the buds after they are once above the foliage, but when the cluster of small buds is hidden by the leaves it is not easy to reach the aphis and an occasional spraying with a weak solution of nicotine by a Scollay sprayer into the center of each plant will do much good. A bright house and 60 degrees at night will bring most of these early lilies into flower during December and up to New Year's, but they will stand more forcing if necessary.

Indications of these early lilies point to a disappearance of disease, or at least great improvement in the health of the bulbs. Not any more than two per cent have yet shown the "yellow jaundice," or "spotted fever." WILLIAM SCOTT.

THE POEHLMANN PLACE.

Of all the great greenhouse establishments which have sprung up so quickly in the vicinity of Chicago none has been marked by a greater celerity of growth than that of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Morton Grove. The way this place has grown has been one of the wonders of the day. They now have about 600,000 feet of glass, the greater part of which has been built during the last four or five years and is constructed on the most modern lines and in the very best of producing condition. In fact it is asserted that none of the large places of this country produce more heavily per square foot of bench space and in none is closer attention given to producing stock of good quality.

The accompanying illustration shows seven houses 500 feet long built this year and planted to carnations. These are high houses, Garland iron gutters being used, set on seven-foot cast iron posts. There are ventilators on both sides of the ridge and sixteen-inch glass is used. Each house contains four benches each five feet wide and four twenty-inch walks, the economy of space being apparent.

Carnations were planted in this range before the completion of the houses, as is shown in the illustration. They are now in very fine shape. Beauties are largely grown, also tea roses and all the seasonable items of stock, chrysanthemums for fall and bulbous material for spring. It is already stated that another large range on similar lines to the last one is contemplated for 1905.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—A. Hauge has worked up a large stock of two new varieties of coleus, Wilhelm Pfitzer and Anna Pfitzer. These are of last year's introduction and Mr. Hauge considers them among the best ever sent out. They are dwarf and stand the sun and drought in good shape. The past summer was one of the dryest ever known in this part of the south.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Timely Preparations.

The middle of November ought to see stock firmly established and growing vigorously. The flowering shoots will be running up to fair length from now on, requiring the last tier of supports to be put in place. Strenuous days of somewhat monotonous work, such as the removal of dead leaves, for instance, will soon give way to routine work. Attention then can be given to that most important and not far distant task, propagation.

Lay in a good supply of sand and be particular that it is free from impurities, such as sticks, paper and vegetable or animal matter.

Store in a cool, dry place until wanted; it will then keep sweet and can be easily handled.

Give the propagating bench a thorough cleaning and be liberal with the lime and sulphur wash. If you have a house devoted to this work take extra pains to have the roof tight; also provide against drip on the benches from condensation. This is many times the cause of loss of valuable cuttings.

While it is not absolutely necessary to build a bench expressly for propagation, it is obvious that any improvement not too expensive is not only an advantage but a good investment. The one I will describe is inexpensive, since it can be constructed by any grower, and from use has given perfect satisfaction for several years.

The bottom and sides are brick, laid on 2x3-inch cypress running crossways of the bench, the narrow side up, and placed at such distance apart that an inch of each end of a brick bears on each crosspiece. The bricks are laid flat, end to end, and of course the bench can be made any number of bricks wide that may be desired. The sides are brick laid on edge and cemented to the bottom and where ends butt with Portland cement.

Such a bench, being porous, cannot become soggy. The bricks will absorb heat from the pipes underneath and in giving it off impart a uniform heat to the sand. Being practically indestructible, there is no need of repairs for years.

Instead of cypress for crosspieces, or, in fact, any part of the frame, if desired and circumstances permit, iron can be substituted for wood. Another advantage of brick is their power of absorbing the sulphur solution present in the lime and sulphur wash. The gentle heat from below will liberate the fumes in some degree, although perhaps imperceptible to the smell, thus guarding against fungous diseases.

As before stated our experience with this form of bench leads me to highly recommend its use to those who wish an ideal propagating arrangement.

Some growers do not approve of bottom heat for carnation cuttings but, like many things, it is the abuse and not the use that does the harm. One's own ingenuity will devise means for regulating bottom heat that an excess may not occur, but it will be found with brick that there is less liability of great fluctuation.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Notes on the Varieties.

While it is yet too early to pass final judgment on the new varieties sent out last spring, yet one cannot help beginning to compare them with the older varieties, and with each other, when they come in the same class or color. While making these comparisons we must not fail to bear in mind that in most cases these varieties are handicapped to some extent, in fact, to a great extent, by several conditions which naturally work right against their showing their very best the first year. So we must be as charitable toward them as possible. First of all, if you got cuttings which were put into sand in late February or March it would be unjust to expect them to do as well as your own cuttings, which were put in in January, or even December. If the variety had a large sale and the stock was limited the later batches may not have had the vitality which the variety originally possessed and it will take a year or two of careful selection to get it back to its best. And, as I have often repeated, our own ignorance of its possible peculiarities may stand in its way. Any or all of these things may cause a fine variety to prove disappointing to us the first year.

Perhaps the largest seller last spring was the new scarlet, Flamingo, as great things were expected of it. The cuttings we received were very large and soft and it did not make a good growth in the field. Since it was planted inside it has made a good, strong growth and, while the plants are not in shape to bear quantities of blooms, yet it will have a chance to show its quality. Another season, with cuttings of our own, it will get a better start.

Crusader made a much better growth and, while the color is a little light, it looks as though it might displace Crane, as the bloom is larger and the plant healthier.

Marion Beauty makes a nice bloom, of a good shade of crimson, but up to date it does not compare with Harlowarden in freedom.

Daheim made very small plants in the field but is picking up rapidly. The blooms to date are too sleepy to use but cold weather may remedy that.

New Daybreak made some nice blooms, of a pleasing shade of Daybreak pink. The growth is much better than Daybreak.

Lady Bountiful looks to be all that was claimed for it. It is a nice grower and very free. The blooms come a little single and flat early, but we knew that before we bought it. The crop that is coming now should be of fine quality.

The Belle made better blooms early and is making fine blooms now, but the growth is not as good as Bountiful. A good variety, nevertheless.

Moonlight is proving itself what we expected, a fine early, free and continuous bloomer. The blooms are of good size and pure white and are borne on long stems. So far the blooms are of good form and fullness.

The Bride is a variety which we have taken a decided liking to on account of its beautiful, pure white blooms, and its fine habit. The plant is compact and bushy and the stems, while they are a trifle short, are very wiry and strong. It was troubled some with stem-rot, but that may not be the variety's fault altogether. We shall certainly try it another season.

Our own Indianapolis promises to be as good as ever this year. Our own stock was from rather late cuttings, so that the plants averaged small, but they are picking up and by Thanksgiving we expect a good crop. We hear of some fine batches of it on other places, much better than our own.

All these varieties were shown in fine shape at the exhibitions last winter and showed very high quality, but this year they will have to make good as money getters if they want to stay in the race. Another three months will have to pass, at least, before we can be positive as to their worth.

ELISHA N. PEIRCE.

Not a word of the death or even failing health of this dear friend reached us till we saw the obituary notice in the Review. And so this dear, witty, good and great old soul has passed to the unknown. The brief outline of his career, in the Review, is doubtless all facts and well written, but to those who had spent many hours in Mr. Peirce's company, it left an awful lot unsaid.

Mr. Peirce was not, I think, nearly as well known to the great army of florists as he deserved to be. I don't remember seeing him at many national conventions; but for a good many years he was always seen at the carnation meetings and here is where we learned to know and keenly enjoy his company. Perhaps it was because Mr. Peirce took to floriculture somewhat late in life and had with his massive brain a becoming modesty, that he was not more often heard in our discussions. He was there to learn and not to talk; still he talked enough at Detroit in the business meetings and at the banquet to amuse, instruct and delight all within the sound of his delightful Yankee drawl. A voice and accent that just suited his drollery and wit, but this wit and humorous descriptions with which he embellished his yarns and anecdotes was only the effervescence of his character. The weakest judge of human nature could see in him a great, broad, deep, shrewd, but kind character. Perhaps others have noticed what the writer has, that in features, particularly the large bright eyes and the massive forehead and head, Mr. Peirce greatly resembled the late Lord Salisbury, the premier of Great Britain. Farmer Peirce he loved to be called, but he had a classical education and was deeply read. He could quote from modern and ancient authors and his memory was prodigious. The florists had only begun to enjoy his wit and counsel and we often thought of the great treat in store for us at future meetings where Farmer Peirce would be bound to be a conspicuous character. For many years he must have been the life and inspiration of camp fires, and although a member of the Loyal Legion Commandery, he said he liked the camp fires of the plain old soldier best. He liked to say that he had lived near upon 300 years in Massachusetts and his build and character were such that made you love and respect the name, New England Yankee. Shortly after seeing him in Detroit last March we received a kind invitation to visit and stay with him a week or two. If we did not want to sponge on his hospitality we could advise on laying out his front yard of 60 acres, and so on. We shall ever cherish that kindly friendship he must have had for us and deeply regret that we could not see our way to accept his kind invitation. One of the greatest treats of our later years was to listen to Mr. Peirce's anecdotes and reminiscences of the war or of his winter visits to the West Indies, Mexico, Bermuda, etc. He spread merriment, light and wisdom wherever he was. I could say much more of our dear old friend, and what little I have said is prompted, because outside of his New England friends, thousands of our brothers do not know and never will realize that in the death of Elisha Peirce the florists have lost one of the very brightest, broadest, deepest, wittiest and withall kindliest of men. We admire and respect many men of our craft, but none did we love as we did dear old Farmer Peirce.

CYMBIDIUM LOWIANUM.

The accompanying illustration of Cymbidium Lowianum is from a photograph of a plant in the collection of Harry G. Selfridge, Lake Geneva, Wis., whose head gardener, C. H. Gebhardt, supplies the following description and cultural details:

"The stems of Cymbidium Lowianum pseudo-bulbous, four to six inches long, leaves linear ligulate, twenty-four to thirty inches long; racemes robust, arching, bearing eighteen to twenty-five flowers three to four inches across transversely; sepals and petals similar, oblong, lanceolate, greenish yellow with reddish veins; lip three-lobed, the side lobes roundish oblong, erect, light buff-yellow, the intermediate lobe red crimson with buff-yellow margin, white at the base.

"Cymbidium Lowianum is from Burmah. We pot them in a mixture of two-thirds chopped fibrous loam, one-third chopped osmunda root fibre, a little sand and a little chopped live sphagnum moss. We give plenty drainage, of broken pots, not less than one-third of the depth of the pots. We give them ample pot room, as the roots are thick and fleshy and freely produced. We also add, for strong plants, one part of old rotten cow manure. The flowers will last on the plants for three months and if cut for six weeks in a cool room.

"The watering must be regulated according to the season of the year, plenty in summer and on the dry side in winter. We keep them all the year around in our Mexican house, which is in winter at night from 50 to 55 degrees and 5 degrees higher in the day time. In summer we give plenty of ventilation from top and bottom. We shade heavily and syringe twice a day and damp down the paths three times a day in summer but only once a day in winter. This cymbidium could be grown successfully in any other cool greenhouse with similar treatment. It is of easy culture and if given good care it pays well."

RECORD KEEPING PAYS.

I noted with pleasure some notes in the last issue, I think it was, regarding record keeping, and while it was not written in reference to violets, nevertheless it is a subject that I have mentioned before, and which bears repetition. If in this way I can persuade some one to commence keeping records this season who has heretofore neglected to do so, I shall have done a good work.

Get a convenient sized blank book and rule it to suit your individual needs, which will vary with different establishments. The most simple way is to keep a total of daily cut, but where there is more than one house it is much better to keep the cut of each house separately, thereby enabling you to determine which house is doing the better and, if in the charge of different men, giving you a pointer on which is the better grower, always taking into consideration other things being equal. It is also conducive to some good natured rivalry, which never comes amiss and does all good, both employer and employe.

But, leaving these considerations out of the question, unless growing a very limited quantity, it is the proper thing to keep complete records if you would know thoroughly where you are at. You will find it a very useful and interesting record if you elaborate it still farther and keep the temperature, both inside and out, in connection with the figures showing the daily cut.

These are suggestions which everyone can carry out more or less fully to meet his individual needs, but whatever you do, keep at the very least a record of the daily cut of each variety.

Use Care in the Packages.

Everyone is now settling down to the regular routine work of picking, packing and shipping and this brings to mind the fact that violets are even more particular than are most of cut flowers about their surroundings. Never take any chances about where they stand when picked, or about the packages that you ship them in, for if there is the least foreign odor there, the violets will be sure to absorb the same, to their ruination, for violets without fragrance have lost half their value and with an odor of soap from the boxes they are worthless, for most people buy them for their own fragrance and not for their looks.

For your retail trade have a special violet box and never allow them to go out in candy, shoe or other boxes of that kind, as I have sometimes seen done, for if you do it will surely react on your trade sooner or later. Besides, if for no other reason, the appearance of the packages that go out of your place nowadays goes a long way toward the continued patronage of your customers, and you can never be so certain of retaining them as by perfection in detail each time they buy or order.

Be sure to have plenty of white waxed tissue paper to wrap violets in when packing. Never use ordinary tissue, as it is not at all suitable, for many reasons. It is also very appropriate and in keeping to use purple cord to match the violets in tying up a retail order.

Keep Up to the Mark.

In the houses take good care of the ventilation and do not thoughtlessly or otherwise let the temperature run up too high some of these bright, pleasant days. Remember that the violet is always a lover of plenty of cool, fresh air. "The more the merrier."

Again, by the time you are perusing these notes you will be approaching Thanksgiving day and, as every holiday means extra work in the sales department, be sure and go over the houses at once and thoroughly clean out poor, yellowing foliage, etc., so that it will be in shape to carry through the week without attention, aside from the airing and watering necessary. This will never be an extended job provided you keep the plants up to the mark all the time. And after delivering all those boxes of violets, to say nothing about the other flowers, you will want time to pick that turkey, and a violet grower needs the relaxation if ever any poor mortal needs it, for he can always see work ahead of him, and much of it not of the easiest.

R. E. Shuphelt.

AN EARLY YELLOW MUM.

During the present season there have been no varieties of chrysanthemums which have been so profitable as the early yellows. A new sort in this class is Merstham Yellow, an introduction of W. Wells & Co., the well known English growers, last season. It was given a gold medal at the Royal Horticultural Society of Great Britain and was awarded the certificate of the Chrysanthemum Society of America when exhibited in New York, October 8 this year. It is of the largest size. Chrysanthemum Merstham Yellow is the subject of the title page of the current issue of the Review.

NOTES ON 1904 NOVELTIES.

It is safe to say that never before were so many fine varieties sent out in one year as were distributed this spring, and the record they are making at the exhibitions is wonderful indeed. Chief among these is, of course, the matchless Duckham. No variety ever sent out can show such a record in the time. At every exhibition it is the same story, nothing to touch Duckham in pinks. Lenox, Madison, Red Bank, Boston, Tarrytown, all bear eloquent witness to this fact. Commercially, where fancy blooms are asked for, Duckham is distinctly "It." This variety has wholesaled at $9 per dozen in New York for special blooms and it is safe to say that this is the highest price obtained for many years, in the wholesale market.

Leila Filkins and F. A. Cobbold are both very prominent in the pink section, Filkins beating Morel everywhere they were shown together.

The red varieties were somewhat of a disappointment, S. T. Wright burning badly when exposed to the open sunlight. Some blooms were shown at Boston by Mr. Thos. W. Head that were perfect in color and finish, evidently taken on a later bud; but on the crown bud Wright did not live up to the promise of his youth. Maynell was much better and has been shown very fine everywhere.

Henry Barnes was set up in wonderful shape at Oceanic, but this variety, though the most beautifully colored of all the reds, is too weak in the neck for any but the short vase classes.

Mary Inglis has come in for some criticism, but the way it was shown at Boston shows conclusively that the fault is more with the grower than with the variety. Grown right it is an immense flower, one of the very largest.

Donald McLeod has also found many friends. It was one of the largest flowers in the Lenox show and its bronzy effect is very telling in a collection. One of the largest New England commercial growers tells me that he likes it exceedingly for cut flower work and will grow it more largely next year.

Cheltoni has made a great name for itself this year. It has beaten Appleton in several competitions and when grown from crown buds builds up into a magnificent flower. It is rather early for any but the first exhibitions, but in its season, October 15 to 30, it is unequalled as a yellow for either private or commercial use.

Mildred Ware showed too much neck for our American ideals of a fine variety, and we are afraid it will not be grown largely again. The color is good for a collection, but it is a tall grower and we can find something else in its color more acceptable.

Ben Wells has been shown very finely at several places and as a purely exhibition flower, it is grand. Immense in size, with a stem like a walking cane, it is one of the easiest things to handle ever grown. When the flower begins to age it looks like nothing so much as a bunch of paper ribbons loosely bundled together. General Hutton was also shown very finely and will doubtless be set up again in New York this week. The bronze color has not shown so much this year and the flower appears more as a pure yellow and it makes a splendid variety to set up on long stems.

Dr. Enguehard is hopelessly outclassed as an exhibition flower, being far too small, though it finds friends in some quarters for commercial use. A very good vase was on exhibition at Boston that had been taken on a later bud which showed neat flowers of good character. I could never understand why this variety when it was sent out last spring, was advertised as a flower that never came sprung centered. What is a sprung centered flower anyway?

Some of the older varieties are being dropped as usual, white Eaton being hardly seen at all this year on the exhibition boards. Change is necessary and as the older kinds run down, so will the young fellows take their place, and a cycle of a few years sees an entirely new set of varieties in the exhibition hall.

PRICE OF GLASS.

Word comes from Pittsburg that a new association of window glass manufacturers and jobbers has begun a fight against the American Window Glass Company by cutting the lowest prices offered by that company 2½ per cent. The executive committee on November 5 announced the new discounts, which are 90, 20 and 2½ per cent off the manufacturers' list for the first three brackets, and 90, 10 and 2½ per cent for all sizes above the third bracket.

Salida, Colo.—A. A. Wood says business is very good and everything indicates a prosperous season. Stock is coming along nicely. He is experimenting with Actinella Richardsoni and thinks it will take a prominent place among commercial plants.

THE LAST CHANCE

THE REVIEW of November 17, will reach all the trade by Saturday, November 19, just when Thanksgiving orders are being mailed. Later issues will not reach the Trade until after orders have been despatched. Thanksgiving is November 24.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Prices have been rather on the downward grade the past week and little betterment is likely until the avalanche of chrysanthemums ceases. American Beauties hold previous quotations, but Brides, Bridesmaids and other varieties are weaker. Best fancy carnations have sold at $4, while ordinary grades have gone as low as 75 cents to $1. Violets are now coming in very fine quality, those coming to the Park Street Market from William Spilsbury, of Woburn, being splendid. Paper White narcissus is coming in more freely. Some chrysanthemums get as low as $3, but good stock goes higher. Bonnaffon averages $6 to $8. Balfour, in pink, brings $16 and first grade yellows the same price. There is a very brisk demand for green stock, especially Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus.

Various Notes.

Mum has been the word the past week. The attendance of florists and gardeners from all parts of the state was very large. The establishments of Sim, Fisher, Nicholson, Patten, Waban Conservatories and other well-known growers were visited by many of the visiting florists.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the greenhouses of H. H. Rogers, Fairhaven, on November 8. James Garthley, the gardener, entered a fine house of pot chrysanthemums for the society's prizes. On November 10 a visit was made to the estate of Joseph H. White, Brookline, where James Wheeler, the new vice president of the C. S. A., is head gardener. The visit was very much enjoyed.

Newtonville Greenhouses are shipping a very fine lot of Bon Silene and Safrano to the Park Street Market.

John Mutch, of Newtonville, who is an expert in orchid culture, has had a grand lot of Cattleya labiata. He has cut to date over 10,000 flowers.

At a meeting of the board of trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, on November 5, it was voted to recommend the same appropriations for prizes for 1905 as in 1904, with the exception of a substantial increase for the spring show, when the American Rose Society meets in Boston. Several new members were elected. It was unanimously voted to send a cordial invitation to the American Carnation Society to meet in Boston in 1906.

A. F. Estabrook, one of the nominees for the presidency of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, has declined to serve if elected. William H. Spooner has been nominated in his stead. The other candidate is W. W. Rawson, of Arlington. The election occurs on November 19.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will elect officers at its next meeting, November 15.

Over 500 people attended the public demonstration at Arlington on November 5, given under the auspices of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for the purpose of educating those interested in how to fight the brown tail and gypsy moths and San Jose scale. Instructions were given by Prof. A. H. Kirkland and H. L. Frost. The big sprayer of the Boston park system was used. The meeting was attended by many florists and was one of the most interesting and instructive ever held in the vicinity of Boston.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The flood of mums has not abated during the past week and the receipts of fancy stock have been rather more than the market could assimilate at quoted rates. As a matter of fact, the good small stock has made better comparative values than the big blooms. The Beauty crop is up to all requirements and quality good. All grades of teas are plentiful, from very poor to very good, the proportion of the latter on the increase in spite of unseasonable warm weather last week. Maids are a little off color. Liberty is good and selling well. Carnations, like everything else, are coming in heavily and the quality shows little effect of the bright sun, although Lawson is seen in all shades of color, also Enchantress. Violets have not been largely in evidence the last few days, the growers evidently holding back for a Thanksgiving supply. Some good Hudson river stock comes in every day, but Tuesday, there being usually no receipts on that day. Valley goes slow, also greens.

Trade has been quite good, else the huge receipts would have piled up mountain high. A change to cool weather and the near approach of Thanksgiving, coupled with the flower shows, should help to stiffen the market next week. A good Thanksgiving is in prospect.

Various Notes.

Next week the flower show will be on at the Fine Arts building. Everything promises a good exhibition. The daily papers are giving considerable space to the fact that a flower will be given each visitor. A supper is on the program for one evening, many trade visitors being expected. John Degnan has charge.

This week nearly every wholesale house, and many of the greenhouses, are contributing one or more to swell the crowd at St. Louis. Reports are that it is a great show.

Fred Weber has his new establishment in splendid shape. He has two houses 27x300 in Beauties. It is worth any Beauty grower's time to go and see them, not that by mere looking can the secret of Beauty growing be learned, but it will give an idea of what skill and a very great deal of work can accomplish. The place is clean and the growth wonderful. The cut is not large at present but there is abundant promise. The cut goes to E. C. Amling.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. has harvested a fine crop of the new aster, Benthey's White and Benthey's Pink, and will distribute it to the trade this winter. The seed was grown at New Castle. It was the best selling variety offered in this market and at St. Louis this summer.

Leonard Kill, of Peter Reinberg's, went to St. Louis last Friday night, intending to stay a week and visit Memphis before returning.

N. J. Wietor says the mums are ten days or two weeks earlier than usual; they expect to be well cleaned out by the Thanksgiving demand, where last year the cut carried quite a ways into December.

C. M. Dickinson, of E. H. Hunt's, has been experimenting with coloring cape flowers until he has the art of dyeing these difficult subjects down to a fine point.

Mrs. R. Jahn, of the Butler Floral Co., says business is much better than she expected it to be so soon after opening. She has a wide acquaintance and gets a great deal of business over the telephone.

At the Thompson Carnation Company's place at Joliet they use recording thermometers and carry the temperature right on a line all night. Two styles of thermometers are used, one which contains a clock and must be just so to work, and the other made by the Parker Mfg. Co., Boston, which works under any and all conditions.

J. A. Budlong has a crop of tea roses just coming on.

Weiland & Risch sent some of their fine Brides and Maids to the Joliet show last week.

Vaughan & Sperry are getting some unusually good Kaiserins.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott's, says business for October, particularly the latter part, was better than he ever knew it to be in a campaign year.

The Lincoln park flower show is on this week and a particularly goood showing is made.

Mrs. Horton and Andrew Benson are at St. Louis this week, looking after Bassett & Washburn's exhibit.

W. N. Rudd is sending the E. F. Winterson Co. his carnation, Phyllis, in fine shape.

C. W. Kellar is handling a fine lot of dendrobiums as well as cattleyas.

George Reinberg is getting a very fine cut of fancy carnations.

Percy Jones is handling some especially good home grown Princess of Wales violets.

A. L. Randall Company says that where they last season averaged 11 cents on a certain grower's chrysanthemums, the cut this year brought an average of 14 cents.

Sinner Bros. are cutting some very good roses in several varieties.

There were many visitors in town on Sunday and Monday en route to the World's Fair flower show. Visitors on other errands were: B. Eschner, Philadelphia; E. Benard, San Diego, Cal.; Miss Gertrude Blair, Des Moines, Ia.; John C. Chase, of Benj. Chase Co., Derry, N. H.

MALTA, OHIO.

W. C. Scovell has the past season built a carnation house which is modern in every respect. It is 23x70 feet, with side wall seven feet high and fourteen feet to ridge. The glass in the side walls comes down to the bench level. The house contains three benches five feet wide and four walks two feet wide. The benches, or rather, beds, have concrete walls twenty-four inches high and the walks are also concrete. Tile and gravel give a good drainage. The purlin supports are iron. The house was erected by Mr. Scovell and costs, exclusive of his labor, $700. Business is very good with him. He is now cutting fine carnations and chrysanthemums.

CAMBRIDGE CITY, IND.—Thomas Peet, who recently purchased the greenhouses of Howard & Lively, has the place in nice shape with good prospects for business.

CANANDAIGUA, N. Y.—The Canandaigua Gardeners' and Florists' Society will give its annual show November 15 and 16. The officers are: President, Joseph Jones; vice-president, Robert H. McKerr; secretary, Fred C. Hawley; treasurer, Albert O. Lucas; hall committee, Joseph Jones, Robert Balantyne and Robert H. McKerr.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business has not been very good. The optimists say it is better than a week ago; the pessimists say it is not "worth a row of pins." With the mid-season chrysanthemums and the election out of the way, conditions are slowly improving. The mountainous wagon loads of flowers coming into town are appalling. Gallantly have the wholesalers worked to get them out of the way, with only fair results; they come in very fast.

This is show week and chrysanthemum is queen. The Leo Niessen Co. reports the varieties of the week to be Timothy Eaton, Mrs. Robinson and White Bonnaffon, white; George W. Childs, red; Col. Appleton, Major Bonnaffon, Yellow Eaton, yellow; Balfour, Byron, Chamberlain (new English), Maud Dean, Barclay and Dr. Enguehard, pink. Ivory is useful, but not a fancy. The Cut Flower Co. had their first Eatons on Wednesday and a number of the above sorts in fine form. Among other additions to the list are Philadelphia, lemon yellow, at Wm. J. Baker's; Golden Wedding, orange yellow, at Berger Brothers; Mrs. Nathan Smith, white, Cheltoni, lemon yellow, at S. S. Pennock's.

Roses and carnations continue dull; violets are fair stock, with prices a little better. Orchids are becoming more of a factor. S. S. Pennock stated that he can fill an order for 400 white orchids or cypripediums, an impossibility not long ago.

There Is Room at the Top.

The feature of the November meeting of the Florists' Club was an exhibit of fancy chrysanthemums and carnations made by Edward A. Stroud, of Overbrook and Strafford. There were four large vases of chrysanthemums, all very fine and all of recent introduction. The varieties were William Duckham, pink; Mrs. Nathan Smith, white; Cheltoni, an improved Nellie Pockett, and Ben Wells, white. The carnations were Judge Hinsdale, white with carmine markings, large, rather globular; Enchantress, pale pink, in fine form; Mackinac, a splendid white, large flower on stout stem, a beautiful bunch. This variety is considered their most prolific sort. This display was greatly admired by the many members present. It reflects great credit on the energy and enterprise of Mr. Stroud and on the skill of his foreman. It is of especial interest, as the varieties are all commercial sorts that are bringing good prices in these days of over-production.

Ranstead Street.

Ranstead street runs west from the junction of Fifteenth street and South Penn Square. It is known floriculturally as the business home of Edward Reid. Improvements have been added from time to time, until now the place is seemingly arranged to the best possible advantage, every square foot of space being utilized. Two floors are used, the upper having the sales room, the capacious ice-box, the cooling room for carnations and the office, where Miss Evans presides over the books and the mimeograph. The lower floor contains another large ice-box, used chiefly for roses and valley, a large cool room, well filled with shelves for carnations and other flowers and duplicate desk, shipping facilities, etc. A compartment of the upstairs ice-box has just been equipped with a complete set of trays for greens that are very convenient. Mr. Reid carries a very fine lot of stock, which he is always ready to show.

Gardenias.

The wholesale market has been somewhat unsettled on the gardenia lately. The price stood at 20 and 25 cents in the end of October. The supply shortened and it advanced to 30 cents. It has today reached 35 to 40 cents. A private family living on a large estate some distance out of town, desiring to secure better returns for their gardenias, sent their daughter to the city to sell. See the returns. The first retailers offered her 35 cents for her gardenais. The next retailer created a sensation by offering 50 cents each for her best blooms; possibly with a view to exclusive control. So the price of gardenias today has reached double that of a week ago.

A Chat About Bulbs.

The roomy store of Johnson & Stokes is filled to overflowing with all sorts of things to rejoice the heart of a true gardener, with just enough plants around to add a touch of life to the scene. Upstairs W. J. Sherry made time to give Phil a cordial welcome and a few ideas about bulbs. Despite heavier importations, Mr. Sherry said narcissi, especially Von Sion and tulips, are scarce; so are crocuses. Named hyacinths of good varieties are still to be had in quantity, but that is possibly due to the late Easter next season. By December it is likely these two will be marketed, making the season a leader on bulb sales.

Hightstown.

Charles E. Meehan, the hustling manager of the Flower Market, and D. T. Conner, with Lord & Burnham Co., paid a visit to Hightstown, N. J., last Friday, thoroughly enjoyed by both. They went there on a freight train, not for an election wager or to save expense, but just because it so happened.

They visited Pierson & Bodine, a new place with a fine house, 16x250, devoted to violets in excellent shape. Nothing was said about who put up the house, but Mr. Conner's interest is very significant.

Joseph P. Johnson was next. He has a half-dozen houses devoted to violets, chiefly Lady Campbell. They are very fine and the blooms are much admired at the Flower Market.

Then came Black & Son's place. Elias Black received the visitors. Besides good violets, there are plenty of carnations. Scott is grown as well as in its palmiest days. Queen Louise, Enchantress and Mrs. Lawson, all looked well.

Tracy Norton came next, He had violets galore. They can grow violets at Hightstown, Mr. Meehan says so; he has been there and he ought to know. In talking about the violet market this fall, Mr. Norton said: "The warm weather was due to the warm weather." If you can guess what he meant when quoting this sentence you are very much smarter than Phil.

Darkness came next, much to the disappointment of the visitors who wanted to see Richard Norton, Chas. Black and Pierre, but you can't do all the places when you travel by freight.

Various Notes.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., returned on Monday from a very successful fall trip. The firm is tremendously busy, shipping orders all over the country.

John I. Heibeck, of Chester county, will offer his greenhouses for sale next week.

Wm. J. Baker is receiving some exceptionally well grown chrysanthemums from M. J. Brinton, of Christiana, Pa. Philadelphia, Major Bonnaffon and Maud Dean are among his varieties.

The Leo Niessen Co. had a large order for the white chrysanthemum Mrs. Henry Robinson this week.

Wm. J. Moore has been visiting the growers lately.

The chrysanthemum show in Fairmount park was thrown open last Sunday to a tremendous crowd of visitors. It will be continued as long as the flowers remain in good condition.

The display at Gimbel Bros.' store, described last week, has been continued this week. It is attracting great crowds of people. Hugh Graham used a considerable quantity of flowers to keep the decoration fresh. His work was greatly admired.

A. M. Campbell, with Edw. Reid, who was ill last week, has returned to his post.

In last week's Riverton notes Viola cuculata should have been Viola cornuta, the tufted pansy. PHIL.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business is steadily improving and the outlook is good for a busy season from now on. There seems to be plenty of work for social affairs, also in funeral designs. Several of the leading retailers report large wedding orders for next week. Last Saturday was a very busy day. Chrysanthemums are in great abundance. They always are when show time approaches. The finer quality are now upon the market. There are so many of the better sorts now in that fancy prices are out of the question, and it is only a question of "how many can you use and we make a price to suit." About all that can be obtained for the very best chrysanthemums is $3. The next grade can be had from $1 to $2. The big show at the World's Fair should help the sale of cut stock considerably.

Roses are not much looked after during the mum season and unless they are extra fancy they are hard to dispose of at satisfactory prices. White and American Beauties are the only sellers now. Plenty of red and pink are going to waste for want of demand. Fancy teas do not bring over $6 per hundred. Good quality of roses can be had from $2 to $4, and even cheaper in 1,000 lots. The prices asked for fancy Beauties are $3 and $4 per dozen, and $6 to $10 per hundred is the price for the stock with shorter stems.

Carnations are also plentiful. There seems to be a general complaint that stock goes to sleep over night. Of course, the retailers are only buying for their daily sales. One retailer reports that he dumped 500 that were bought for fancy at 3 cents; they were worthless the next morning. The cause has not as yet been explained. It is not merely one man's stock, but all.

Violets are having a great sale, both single and double, and not enough come in to supply the demand. Californias sell at 50 cents, and doubles at $1. In bulb stock, valley, Paper Whites and callas are fine, with a fair demand at their usual price. Of greens the market has plenty.

Various Notes.

As the time for the opening of the big show approached everybody was busily at work in the conservatory at the World's Fair getting things in shape for the opening. The prospects for a successful show are very flattering, as the daily papers have given it some great notices and have gotten the general public to talking about it. Manager Hauswirth, of Chicago, and Fred Meinhardt, of this city, have been busy all of the past week. Great wagon loads of plants from the local florists were placed in the building on Sunday. Taking everything into consideration, it will be the largest flower show ever held in this country.

On Wednesday, October 26, the First National Conference of Horticultural Society Officers and Workers was held in the Horticulture Building, World's Fair. The conference was called to order by President C. F. Hale, of Michigan..

George E. Kessler, chief of the landscape department of the World's Fair, returned Friday to St. Louis from his home in Kansas City to attend the meeting of the park restoration committee, which will confer this week regarding the question of restoring Forest park after the fair closes.

Some of the street fakirs are still selling flowers on the street corners, despite the order from the city officials and the great efforts of the downtown florists, who say that they will not molest them if they keep within certain limits.

The club meeting this week will be held Thursday in the Horticulture building at the fair, so that out-of-town visitors can take part in the proceedings. This was decided at a meeting on Monday.

The opening of the new city hall on Friday night was a social affair. All the offices were decorated with plants and flowers, mostly chrysanthemums, the ladies carrying large bunches of flowers. The opening must have been a profitable one for the local trade. J. J. B.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market during the past week was unworthy of the name. All the wholesalers were flooded, Prices at times were bottomless; stagnation was universal. Never was stock more perfect and never, it is claimed, has so discouraging a week been experienced in the street's record. The present week shows no improvment at its opening. With the election over, the weather seasonable and the demand of society once more in evidence, the close of the week may see the longed-for turn of the tide. That it may be so is the sincere desire of the REVIEW, to whose patrons and friends we wish abundant reason now and always for unlimited Thanksgiving.

Various Notes.

Cleary's Horticultural Hall is now an established enterprise, ably managed and with every indication of permanent success. A big sale of hardy roses in the near future is announced and every Tuesday and Friday the auctions will continue until Christmas. Ambrose Cleary is a model auctioneer.

The Hinode Co., of Whitestone, L. I., is now rejoicing in the completion of its new greenhouses. Their stock of Easter lilies will be enormous and their sales of the tiny Japanese plants have been far above their expectations.

Alfred Dimmock, of Sander & Sons, St. Albans, England, is enjoying a very successful season among his many American customers and gracing the fall exhibitions with his breezy presence.

Wm. H. Siebrecht, Jr., of Astoria, has hung out his shingle at 277 Broadway as a full-fledged attorney at law.

Sigmund Geller's new store on the ground floor is proving a great convenience, and an additional zinc-lined room just built gives him one of the most complete establishments in the supply line in the country.

Alex. Guttman's new red carnation, Victory, grows in popularity wherever exhibited. Boston demonstrated its faith in the future of this flower. It will be exhibited at the next meeting of the New York Florists' Club, Monday, November 14, with many other attractive novelties. This meeting promises to become one of the best of the year. In the afternoon the bowling club will meet and lunch will be served in ample time for the evening meeting. All out-of-town visitors are invited.

It is hardly to be wondered that enthusiasm as to a New York exhibition similar to those which have proved so costly to their promoters, is a hard thing to materialize, and yet the show under the auspices of the American Institute, which begins on Thursday and continues for ten days, promises to break the spell and renew the record breaking attendances of other years. Not only flowers, but everything pertaining to horticulture will be displayed. Many thousands of complimentary tickets are distributed and the officials place their estimate of anticipated attendance at 100,000.

Right opposite the big hall, above Macey's where the show takes place, is M. A. Bowe's, where for some weeks, with orchids and mums in abundance, most beautiful windows have been created.

Arthur T. Boddington has large importations of hardy roses, peonies, lilacs and nursery stock generally arriving and shows some fine wedding bells. White Romans are going fast. The depletion of all kinds of bulbs is decidedly encouraging.

F. R. Pierson's artistic hand was in evidence everywhere at the successful Tarrytown show. His new fern is winning recognition wherever exhibited.

Ghormley's facilities for handling his immense shipments were never so good as now. The immense ice box is now complete. Mr. Ghormley has entirely recovered his health and is quite hopeful as to an immediate improvement in business.

L. Wertheimber & Co., 39 Barclay street, are making a specialty of Alpha Christmas bells, for which they find a heavy demand, last season being entirely unable to fill their orders.

Warrendorff opened a fine branch at One Hundred and Twenty-second street and Seventh avenue last Saturday. Several branches will be established in other desirable parts of the city during the winter. The business is to be incoporated under the title of The Warrendorff Co.

Ehmann is celebrating his fifth anniversary by installing electric lights, while a block away David Clarke's Sons have elaborately decorated and filled their immense establishment for Thanksgiving. For Scottii they find a great and increasing demand. They consider this the best commercial fern in the market.

Mrs. Warrendorff, Sr., has been very ill for several weeks but is convalescing slowly.

The sixth annual flower show in the Central Park greenhouses is now open.

F. H. Traendly was a visitor at the Boston show and dwells enthusiastically upon the fine exhibits, the new seedling carnations at Peter Fisher's and the grand stock of Patten and Nicholson.

Ford Bros. are receiving some splendid Appletons, Jones and Maud Dean from O. Boehler, of West Hoboken, and their Enchantress, Dorothy and violets are as fine as the finest.

Capt. Fenrich has his store spick and span for Thanksgiving and is fast building up a business that promises to compare favorably with many of the veterans.

The orchid's popularity grows and prices are again normal and the supply none too abundant for the universal use that seems inevitable. McManus handles many varieties daily and is ready for the certain shipping demand that he has done so much to develop in other cities, shipping them from Montreal to New Orleans and Chicago.

Charles Millang's special conservatory is ablaze with light and color and his greenhouse stocked with an abundance for the city retailers.

Jos. Millang, manager of the Cut Flower Co., maintains his reputation as "the Beauty king," the special stock he is now handling being as fine as any that has ever reached the New York market.

J. K. Allen is increasing his sources of supply this fall, many new growers having been added to his clientele.

The Clucas & Boddington Co. has about completed one of the busiest seasons in its history. The nurseries at Sparkhill have been developing rapidly this year.

Lecakes & Co. find their cut flower department, under the management of John A. Foley, a very profitable addition to their large fern and galax business. They also handle plants of all kinds and will have some fine holly for Thanksgiving.

Reed & Keller report a fine run on their novelties and inventions, many of them especially adapted for the holiday requirements.

Schloss Bros. have many handsome novelties this fall. They have only satisfactory criticisms to make as to the increase in their business during 1904.

Leikens' store on Thirty-third street is a little gem and his prospects for a big business this winter encouraging.

Condon's chrysanthemum show is drawing large crowds in Brooklyn.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The near approach of the election seems to have affected business the past week, as there was considerable complaint among the retailers. However, if the regular business was slow, there were quite a few large affairs which at least made a fair week for those who were lucky enough to have the orders.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met November 2 with mums on the table. A. Herrington, president of the national society, exhibited some very fine specimens, as did also Nathan Smith & Son and Wm. K. Harris. R. Vincent, Jr. & Son exhibited pompon varieties. The local people did themselves proud on this occasion, and it was the first time that they brought in a better display than we have had from our out-of-town friends. Among the home people, Mr. Jenkinson, gardener for A. R. Peacock; John Jones, the Schenley park gardener; the Godwin boys, the Florists' Exchange, Mr. Zimmermann of Dixmont, the Sewickley Cut Flower Company, G. & J. W. Ludwig, for Wm. Kasting; Blind Bros. and the Pittsburg Cut Flower Company each displayed very creditable stock.

After discussing all these, President Falconer introduced Fred Burki as the man who grows mums at a profit and called on him for some remarks as to his method. The meeting was one of the best attended for some time, almost every chair in the hall being occupied. All were well repaid for the time spent.

Various Notes.

Breitenstein & Flemm had the decoration at the banquet given to the English steel manufacturers by the Westinghouse Co. This was one of the big things this week, about 650 being seated.

A. W. Smith had the Chamber of Commerce banquet at Hotel Schenley. This was on a more extensive scale than usual on account of the foreign guests.

Randolph & McClements had several large weddings this week, as well as a large banquet at the Schenley given to the British steel manufacturers.

G. & J. W. Ludwig had the decorating for the opening of the Gaiety Theater.

Mrs. E. A. Williams has a beautiful and novel decoration in her large window—mums, Japanese lanterns and posters. It was indeed beautiful and attracted a great deal of attention.

Geo. A. McWilliams has installed another sixty-horsepower boiler at his Natrona plant.

F. R. Pierson & Co., of Tarrytown, N. Y., sent a box of their new fern, which arrived one day late for the club meeting, but has been on exhibition at the Pittsburg Cut Flower Company. They have been much admired.

E. C. Ludwig is receiving large quantities of pompon chrysanthemum blooms of many colors, which sell readily.

FLORIST MAN, Everywhere. EVERGREEN, ALA., Nov.

Dear Sir:—DON'T YOU BELIEVE you will be held accountable for all your little slips, even to "apparently justifiable, judicious cursings?"

Do you think for an instant you will escape a chalk mark against you for the very genteel job of CURSING you "PUT UP" on account of failure to get that last or several lots of SOUTHERN SMILAX, you so guilelessly looked for and depended upon?

DON'T YOU BELIEVE IT ! ! !

IT WAS YOUR OWN FAULT.

You should have ordered from ONE who could supply it, AND YOU WILL BE HELD ACCOUNTABLE JUST THE SAME.

Be warned, Oh, Brother, there is only one way to avoid trouble (and cursings).

The Market.

After the bright prospects of last week, it would seem to be rather discouraging to have the market slump; but slump it did and the poor mums had to stand the blunt of it all. The good prices that were being obtained for them have dropped nearly one-half, and now, unless they are A1, it is hard to move them at anything like a paying price. There can be no other explanation of this than that the retail stores are doing very little business. The weather is entirely too pretty. We are having ideal fall weather and that is not the kind that tends to make business. We want a cold, rainy spell and then, I believe, trade will be all right again. The closeness of the election may have had something to do with it, but we will soon be able to judge of that.

Medium and small mums sold best, but all kinds sold at very low figures.

Roses also suffered. Beauties that have been doing so well were dropped a few notches in price. Other varieties were coming in large numbers and quite a few had to be disposed of at job lot prices.

Carnations were more plentiful and they are suffering the least of all, but prices obtained are not up to last year. Other stock is the same as last reported.

Various Notes.

On November 12 will take place our annual mum show. There is no question but that it will be very good this year. Several out-of-town growers will compete in the various classes and besides many seedlings will be exhibited.

The store of Rusconi & Myers, at Avondale, was broken into last Saturday night and the money drawer ransacked, but although it contained over $12 in cash, nothing was taken.

Mr. John Evans was a visitor.

VISITORS TO THE CHICAGO

FLOWER SHOW

ARE INVITED TO MAKE

OUR PLACE HEADQUARTERS.

FOR QUALITY AND VARIETY of stock our place is a good sized flower show in itself every day during the season. In eight years of business-like dealing we have gained and held the loyal support of the very best growers for the Chicago market. We have large supplies at all times, in all grades wanted.

Beauties, Fine Tea Roses, Carnations,

IN FACT EVERYTHING SEASONABLE.

Plenty of VIOLETS, home-grown, single and the cream of the large, dark doubles from the Hudson River district.

Chrysanthemums of all grades up to the best exhibition stock.
CHOICEST VALLEY, ADIANTUM CROWEANUM and an unlimited supply of ASPARAGUS, SMILAX and SPRENGERI.

A considerable number of buyers have found that with us they can depend on getting the most satisfactory service in wholesale cut flowers, but we would like to impress upon others the fact that we can serve them also, and serve them well.

We cater especially to the shipping trade, finding it to give a steadiness to demand in times of large supply which compensates for the effort necessary to meet requirements in time of scarcity. Our space is large, our facilities adequate to all needs in the line of prompt service and the experience of our employes is a guarantee of careful selection, packing and shipment.

Lilium Longiflorum JAPAN GROWN

SELECTED STOCK "SPECIAL" LATE DUG BULBS

For five years past we have received direct from our grower in Japan a Special Stock of Japan Lilium Longiflorum, which has given, in every instance, more than usual satisfaction. This "SPECIAL STOCK" flowers simultaneously, and grows an even height of about 3 feet, with abundant foliage. It can be flowered by Easter, even when planted late in November. The flowers are of good substance, and more prolific than ordinary stocks of Lilium Longiflorum. We have a limited supply of this special stock of Lilium Longiflorum and parties wishing any quantity should order promptly.

LINCOLN, ILL., MARCH 7, 1903.
DEAR SIRS:—Your late delivered Longiflorums (Special Stock) have proved healthier and earlier than any other stock we had. (Signed)
W. H. GULLETT & SONS.
These bulbs were received November, 1902, and flowered before others received September.

LINCOLN, ILL., FEB. 13, 1904.
GENTLEMEN:—Your late delivered "Special Stock" Longiflorums are again surpassing any other stock we got, both in forwardness and healthiness.
(Signed) W. H. GULLETT & SONS
These bulbs were received November, 1903, and flowered in time for Easter, although very early.

WILLIAMSVILLE, N. Y., FEBRUARY 26, 1903.
SIRS:—The Longiflorum Lilies (Special Stock) that you sent me are extra fine, and for health and uniformness excel anything I have seen in this section (Buffalo) this season. (Signed)
C. B. SHISLER.

LATE DUG BULBS A large shipment has just been received in perfect condition, and, if planted now will flower in time for Easter Sunday, April 23, 1905 (very late).

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Trade has been fairly brisk the past week. Mums are holding sway and making inroads on sales of other stock. Theo. Boettcher is sending in some fine Philadelphia and Pennsylvania. C. Johansen has some large yellow and white Eaton. H. Schwebke is also cutting some fine Golden Wedding and Eaton. Nic Zweifel has a fine crop of Enchantress coming in. This variety seems to have been heavily planted by most of the local growers this season and the quality is exceptionally fine. Red carnations appear to be scarce. Violets are coming in more freely and of improved quality. There are plenty of valley and sweet peas to meet requirements. The supply of roses is about equal to demand, but demand is rather unsteady. Mum plants appear to be selling better than last season.

Various Notes.

The chrysanthemum show at Mitchell park drew a very large crowd the past week. Flowers and plants were all staged in the main conservatory and in such shape as to show off a great array of colors, from a dark red to the purest white. Aug. Gerlach, the gardener in charge, is now keeping the men busy propagating spring stock, as most of the plants used in the park are supplied from these greenhouses.

The Florists' Club had a well attended meeting November 1. Nic Zweifel read a paper on "Carnation Culture" and an interesting discussion followed.

Fred Schmeling has purchased a fine Beagle hound and engaged a blind at Puckaway lake and is awaiting the flight of ducks from the north.

The Florists' Club is awaiting the opening of the new bowling alley and expects to start a series of games for the winter between growers, wholesalers and retailers. Fred Schmeling rolled three games over 200 last week and will bowl with one of the league clubs in Wauwatosa. He will probably join the G. A. R. team.

We expect to have a delegation of about fifteen to the Chicago mum show.

Fred Schmeling will read a paper of Christmas plants at the next regular club meeting. INCOG.

BUFFALO.

Very beautiful weather has mostly prevailed of late and any dullness of business could not be excused on that score. Mums have of course been the flower, both to decorate the shop window as well as to fill an order. We see no abatement of their popularity and only notice that quality is now sought for more than mere size, which a few years ago was the principal attraction. However interesting abnormally large blooms may be at an exhibition for the buying public, the limit in size has been reached. And so it has not only been in the chrysanthemum, but also in the rose and carnation. A tea rose larger than a first-class Bridesmaid would be coarse, and a carnation larger than Enchantress is not wanted. There are many qualities which can be added to the best of our leading flowers besides size.

Roses are improving in quantity and carnations are coming in freely, many not high in quality. Violets are rather plentiful and cheap. A touch of winter will stiffen them up in price.

The first large wedding of the fall occurred last week. Large quantities of mums, pink roses and American Beauties were used. Business all around has been quite fair.

W. J. Palmer & Son are making great alterations and improvements in their lower store (the old stand). William is bound to keep in the very front of the procession.

We are all looking forward to the H. A. Meldrum Co.'s show which begins Wednesday the 9th. Mr. Keitsch, the active manager, reports that the entries received assure its success and those received from many out-of-town growers were the most gratifying part of it. We anticipate seeing a fine display and meeting many old friends. This is indeed a great week and many of the big lights must wish they had the power of the high-class Hindoo fakir and could be in Boston, St. Louis, Chicago and several other places all at the same time. We should like much to see St. Louis and hope for its unqualified success, but health, as well as other reasons, forbids. W. S.

NORTHFIELD, MINN.—C. P. Nichols has completed a new greenhouse on the site of the old one. It has 3,200 feet of glass. The walls are of hollow concrete blocks plastered with cement into practically one solid piece. He says the house seems practically air tight save for the ventilators.

KEEPING INSECTS DOWN.

Tobacco in some shape or form has been for years, and, to a certain extent, is still, the great stand-by for the prevention and destruction of insect pests in the greenhouse. The distribution of tobacco stems throughout the house is one of the best preventives we have, but, as these soon loose strength, they need to be renewed every two or three weeks to be effective. The cleanest and best way to use the stems is to tie them in bunches and suspend them under the benches. For killing aphides, tobacco smoke generated either by the burning of the stems or powder is largely used. The smoke cannot be applied in sufficient strength to finish the fly at once without causing damage to tender plants, such as tomatoes, but must be applied lightly two or three nights in succession to be effective. Tobacco paper, of which there are several good ones, are among the latest forms in which the fumes of tobacco can be applied. This is clean and easy of application and is about as effective a way of using tobacco as we have yet tried.

The newest and most effective insect destroyer is hydrocyanic gas. If this is carefully used, I believe it is the cheapest and best insect destroyer that can be employed. Up to about a year ago I was somewhat sceptical about the handling of this poisonous gas, but experience teaches me that it is just as safe as anything else, so long as it is carefully used. My first experience with it was in a house of tomatoes. I used one quart of sulphuric acid, one quart of water and five ounces of cyanide of potassium to a house containing 2,000 cubic feet. Although no great damage resulted, the tips of the more tender leaves were scorched. The next time I had occasion to use the gas, I used just half the quantity to the same space, and found that it killed the fly just as well, while my plants were unharmed. Since then I have used gas on all classes of plants, allowing one pint sulphuric acid, one pint water and two and one-half ounces of cyanide to 2,000 cubic feet, and find it effective as an insect killer, but harmless to plant life. I have used it on chrysanthemums when the flowers were half open without the slightest damage, while tobacco smoke used strong enough to kill green fly, with the flowers at the same stage, would certainly have hurt the blooms.

The great point in the use of this gas is to have the foliage dry and the temperature of the house not over 60 degrees. On account of its being deadly poison, extreme caution must be used in its application. I place the acid and water together in a stone jar near the door, drop in the cyanide and get out and lock the door as soon as possible. I leave it thus till next morning, the application always being made in the evening, when the house can safely be entered and the ventilators raised. An hour or two of air will dispel all smell of the gas. W. S. Croydon.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Department of Registration.

Harvard Crimson is offered for registration by Frederick A. Blake, Rochdale, Mass.; a decidedly novel and pretty shade; it is a very free bloomer, with fine stems and flowers that seldom measure less than three and one-half inches and are good keepers; the plant is strong and healthy. Albert M. Herr, Sec'y.

Threshing and Curing Onion Seed at J. M. Kimberlin & Co.'s, Santa Clara, Cal.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

A TOUR AMONG CALIFORNIA SEED GROWERS.

No seedsman who visits Santa Clara will fail to enjoy meeting Charles Parker. He is a grower of the old school. His operations cover a considerable acreage of Santa Clara, as well as "up the river." In company with him, inspecting crops was a profitable experience at both places, especially so at Santa Clara, where he had onion bulbs growing that were to be set out for the next year's seed crop. The onions were being grown from seed furnished by him and the product of the seed was to be delivered to him at a stated time. They were being grown under contract, the contract giving him the power to discard any that were not of the right type at harvest time, as well as to supervise the caring for them during growth. Land especially adapted to the growth of onions is selected and as a rule a good crop of bulbs is the result. This same method is pursued by the rest of the growers to a greater or less extent. Mr. Parker's plantings, however, being the only onions that we had the advantage of inspecting in an intelligent way for type on this particular trip, it is due him that a note be made of it. As a grower of lettuce, radish, spinach, beet and sweet peas Mr. Parker is known to be reliable and his experience covers a good number of years at Santa Clara. It may seem superfluous to state, and it does not belong here any more than in any other part of this article, but it is a fact, which applies to California, or anywhere else where seed is grown, that the greatest care in selecting the bulb or the plant, and the largest knowledge in the proper methods of planting, growing or harvesting, may be set at naught by loose methods in tagging the lots before and after the threshing, and in making a bulk of two or more lots of the same variety.

F. A. Wilcox is another Santa Clara grower who had some good fields to show, onion, lettuce, radish, etc. He also operates "up the river" in the vicinity of the fields of Chas. Parker. The interests of the two seem to be more or less combined, although each works independently.

In this connection the Braslan Seed Growers' Co., which has a large interest in seed growing at Santa Clara and vicinity, as well as elsewhere, should be mentioned. The head of this company is well known to the seed trade, both in this country and abroad. Chas. P. Braslan has probably had as varied an experience in all lines of the seed business, for his years, as any man in it. With headquarters, as before mentioned, at San Jose, the Braslan Seed Growers' Co., operating in conjunction with experienced growers at Santa Clara, or wherever mutual interests will warrant, has quite an extensive acreage to draw from to supply the seed needed by its customers. It is a well conducted organization, up to date in its business methods with a resourceful, keen and hustling manager. Some up-hill work has been done by this company of growers, and its advancement has had the usual bumps; nevertheless it reports progress from time to time and seems well able to take care of the interests of its customers and itself.

Not far from Santa Clara is Agnew Station, where the Agnew interests are located. Sugar beet seed took up a part of the home ranch, with onion, lettuce, etc. "Up the river," this firm also had plantings that were well looked after and gave promise of good returns.

At Mountain View where was formerly a Miss Gallimore, who had quite a seed ranch, but her place was not found on this trip. It was explained that fruit growing had taken the place of seed growing in that immediate vicinity.

Next week we will pursue our journey north, stopping first at Palo Alto.

THERE is a lull at present in the onion set market.

THE present fine weather suits the sweet corn growers.

LEONARD SEED CO., Chicago, will introduce a new potato the coming spring.

FROM all reports sweet corn and cucumber seed will be normal crops this year.

MOST of the California deliveries on the contract basis are being shipped in full.

WHILE there are plenty of Harrisii, longiflorums give every evidence of being good property.

BEANS thus far received at the cleaning warehouses are of good quality and the color of sample bright.

THERE seems to be no great scarcity of anything in what is termed small garden seeds except American-grown egg plant.

THERE has been a good deal of rivalry among seed sellers in the onion marsh districts lately. All seem to be anxious to sell onion seed for present or future delivery.

W. W. JOHNSON & SON, Boston, England, have five novelties for next season, a bedding nasturtium called Daylight, a poppy, a sweet pea, the Pearl potato and a round early pea called Diamond.

WE learn that the Royal Dutch Bulb-Growers' Society, at Haarlem, Holland, intends to hold its quinquennial exhibition of bulbous flowers from March 17 to 21, 1905. The schedule which has been published shows that a large number of prizes are being offered. It is the intention to make this show the most interesting ever held. Interested parties can have further particulars on application to the secretary of the society, Jos. de Brent, at Haarlem, Holland.

LEBANON, N. H.—The Haskell Floral Co. has just put up a greenhouse 30x130 and will at once install a new sixty horse-power boiler beside the others.

31 BARCLAY STREET,
NEW YORK.

PHILADELPHIA.

D. L. Sloan, of D. L. Sloan & Son, Palo Alto, Cal., was a caller this week.

The 1904 crop bean deliveries are very disappointing. We are promised from 20 to 30 per cent on Wardwell's; on Davis Wax, from 25 to 35 per cent; Red Valentines, 60 per cent. This is a New York grower's estimate. Quite a few bean contracts were placed with New Jersey farmers this season and they are equally disappointing.

Plenty of sugar corn is being offered by the farmers. They report no outlet for it for seed, and many are converting their sugar corn seed into pork. How different from a year ago!

The crop of egg plant seed is below medium.

It is reported that one of the leading catalogue houses will commence mailing catalogues December 1.

Henry A. Dreer is erecting a large seed warehouse at 710 Locust street to accommodate their large increasing trade.

MAILING CATALOGUES.

Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia., president of the American Seed Trade Association, has sent out a circular with regard to the mailing of catalogues in bulk without stamps affixed. This has to do with additional regulations of the Department, from which, as Mr. Page points out,

> It will be seen that the wrapper may have any advertising matter printed on which is desired so that the type conforms with the regulations. While Section 6 states that the mailer must tie the separately addressed packages in bundles of 50, 100, 200, 500 or 1,000 pieces, our postmaster here says that a mail bag may be considered a bundle and it is not necessary that each bag contain the same number of pieces, but the sender may put any number that he desires in each bag provided the bag is tagged with statement of the actual number contained in it. Thus it will be convenient to put catalogues or circulars going to each state in separate mail sacks and thus expedite the handling at the post-office.
> Before acting on this statement, however, it would be well to inquire if your postmaster takes a like view of the ruling. This new law will be of advantage in the mailing of circulars weekly price cards and samples of seed as well as in sending out catalogues. It will save the expense and time involved in affixing and canceling postage stamps and insure mail being forwarded more expeditiously.
> It is to be hoped that during the coming session of Congress the law originally asked for will be passed permitting the sending of all such matter at the bulk rate of eight cents per pound.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

An event of more than passing interest was the opening, with a chrysanthemum show, November 3, of the new flower store erected by A. Washburn & Sons the past summer. Eighteen years ago Andrew Washburn leased the south window in T. J. Willever's crockery store which occupied the same lot that A. Washburn & Sons' new building now occupies. After a few months this building was sold and Mr. Washburn leased the east window in J. B. Dunham's notion store. The business was afterward moved to the old Windsor hotel building and about a year later, Mr. Washburn realizing that he did not have a greenhouse establishment large enough to back up a store, gave up the store end of the business and spent the next few years in building up the greenhouse plant. Ten years ago a store was opened in the place just vacated by them on North Main street. The business has grown rapidly since that time and it is rather an unusual coincidence that after so many years they would return and occupy the whole building where they started in such a modest way.

FORT DODGE, IA.—P. L. Larson gave a chrysanthemum show November 4 and presented each visitor with a flower.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—H. W. Buckbee issued invitations to the public to visit his greenhouses November 3 to inspect his chrysanthemums prior to the shipment of the exhibition stock for the St. Louis show.

HERE IS A BUSINESS BOOK FOR BUSINESS MEN

NO SCIENCE BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE.

It don't tell you the botanical classification but it does tell you how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

It don't list every plant in cultivation but it does tell you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

The articles are arranged alphabetically so that when you want to see what Mr. Scott says about Cannas you turn to the Cs and in an instant you have it.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

Caxton Building, CHICAGO.

The book treats of over 200 subjects and is freely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings.

It is a book that you need in your business just as you need any other useful labor and money saving implement or device.

The price is $5.00, carriage prepaid.

There are only a few copies of the work left. If you have not already obtained a copy order one to-day or you may be too late.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.....Caxton Building.....CHICAGO.

Are all flower growers liars?

SURELY this cannot be true; well, we have over 100 growers who have written us, a large majority without request, their opinions; we publish a few of these letters in the columns of this paper; see on pages 1257-58-70-77. what they say about the FUMIGATING KIND TOBACCO POWDER. All began with a five-pound trial bag at our expense, which gave them an opportunity without cost to prove its GOODNESS and our assertion that it was the most effective, cleanest and quickest, as well as cheapest (10 cents per 100-foot house) article to fumigate with, and that all kinds of aphis can be killed in one night. Let us send you a five-pound trial bag by express, it will cost you nothing but the express charges on it, and be convinced that what your brother growers say of it is true. Our booklet tells of it; we mail it on request.

PACIFIC COAST.

WITH CARNATION GROWERS.

As I stated last week, there will be more carnations than ever during the coming season. Many houses formerly devoted to rose growing have been changed and replanted to the easier grown flower. The reasons given by some of the growers are as follows: One told me that his houses were too old and leaky to devote longer to roses. Another stated that after having grown them for five years he concluded his soil was not suitable for roses. Another remarked that his houses were not built right for roses, although he had been using them for that purpose for several years. Two growers complained that practical greenhousemen who understood forcing were too hard to secure in California. From my observations I am sure there will be no excess of roses this season, although some of the places have fine stock and plenty of it.

But to return to carnations. In white sorts Flora Hill easily predominates in the amount of stock planted. It seems to be the standby with the larger percentage of growers. Queen Louise comes next and finds favor with many. Wolcott is grown in most of the larger places, with varying success, but it has evidently come to stay. The flowers at present bring about twice what is obtained for other white sorts. White Cloud finds favor in a few places but has been discarded by many.

Prosperity is said by many to be a very shy bloomer but I find it extensively planted again this season. The flowers bring the highest prices of any variety at present.

With pink sorts Lawson is still the champion here and bids fair to remain so. I find Enchantress to have made wonderful strides since last season and many growers are planting it heavily. Triumph I think is next on the list, followed by Cressbrook, although this variety does not find favor with some growers. E. Schwerin is a good winter bloomer and has many friends. Ethel Crocker has been discarded on account of its reluctance to bloom in the winter. Mrs. Joost, although a comparatively small flower, is an abundant bloomer and is grown in many of the smaller establisments. Wm. Scott comes under the same head. Genevieve Lord I found only in a few houses.

With scarlets Estelle has almost superseded everything. America has been discarded and Crane is only occasionally seen. Mrs. Palmer and Harlowarden do not seem to find much favor and Portia is only planted in a few places.

Pingree and Gold Nugget are out of business but a few houses are still planted to Eldorado.

In variegated sorts Bradt seems to have almost disappeared, likewise Armazindy, Stella and Gaiety. The finest I have seen are John Carbone and Iris Miller and several unnamed seedlings. The majority of growers do not interest themselves much with variegated, although they usually bring good prices.

There are several other sorts that are grown in a few localities but the list given here represents the varieties in about the proportion they are grown. The prospects for an unlimited winter's supply are excellent. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business is still very quiet and the weather is such that flowers are being brought to the stores in unprecedented quantities. Chrysanthemums are still in their prime and they are making the store windows and the baskets of the sidewalk venders very showy. Outdoor stock has been sold as cheap during the past week as twenty dozen for a dollar, good quality of flowers. Without frost the supply will last about three weeks more, by present indications. The quantity of roses is lessening considerably and better prices are being paid. The majority of the first crop is over and those that are now being offered are of much better stem. American Beauty is scarce and still brings a good figure. The stores are paying from $1 to $2 per dozen. Brides and Maids are selling wholesale at from 50 cents to $1 per dozen and Testout and Liberty a little less. Carnations are plentiful and, except the fancy varieties, there is no great demand for them. Violets are just about in sufficient quantity to fill the demand. Outdoor stock has almost disappeared and with the advent of frosty weather, which we may expect in a few weeks, the price will take a sudden rise. Quite a quantity of Paper White narcissi are seen. This is an unparalleled happening in the history of the trade here. The great downpour of rain in September, which came two months before its time, started the dormant bulbs and we will have a large portion of our bulbous stock a good many weeks earlier than usual.

I saw in a prominent Sutter street store this week a large bunch of beautiful white lilac. This is another freak proposition. Fancy cutting a quantity of lilac outdoors in California at the middle of November.

Some of the florists have already been visited by the Christmas tree dealers and it seems impossible to realize that we are almost to the end of another year. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1905.

MANY cemeteries are in the market this fall for considerable quantities of nursery stock.

NOW that the alarm about the San Jose scale has in a measure passed, it is time to get up some excitement over the gypsy moth. Many consider it the more dangerous pest.

THERE is a good demand for Tritoma Pfitzeri, it having been used by florists in a number of notable decorations this fall. North of Philadelphia it is safer to lift the plants in November and store in a cellar. It needs a well-drained situation.

THE freight steamers from Rotterdam sail very irregularly and there is much complaint at the delay suffered by perishable goods. The boats of the Netherlands-American Co. sail regularly every week and many shippers find it advisable to use these steamers.

HENRY HICKS says, in an article in Country Life, that growing box in this country is fighting nature; when you compare the climates of Old and New England the wonder is, not that box fails, but that any evergreen from England succeeds here; we should look to Manchuria or Korea for a broad-leaved evergreen to displace box.

THERE is an indication that, with the more general demand for ornamental material, the call for large specimens will be overshadowed by the requests for smaller stock. The rich man will pay for immediate effect but the planter of moderate means wants a good many plants; he thinks he gets more for his money than in specimens and besides he does not lose so much if part of the stock dies and he can afford to wait.

THE BEECH.

When is the best time to move the purple beech? I. E. B.

The beech is not our easiest tree to transplant, but that depends largely on the condition of the roots. If you are sure the tree has been transplanted within two or three years you can move it now; if not, wait until early spring.

RED SPORT OF MACEO

The New "Bread and Butter" Red Carnation.

Gen. Maceo Carnation is known the country over as the most prolific, healthy and easiest doer, with the hardiest constitution of any Carnation that was ever introduced. We have a brilliant "Crane" Red Sport of this variety, now in its fourth year, that retains all the characteristics of the old variety except color. Growing side by side, it will be noticed that RED SPORT has a little stiffer stem, a larger flower and a heavier growth than the old variety.

WHAT WE CLAIM FOR "RED SPORT."

RED SPORT will produce as many blooms to the square foot of bench room as any other variety, of any color, ever introduced.

RED SPORT is an early and continuous bloomer that produces its heaviest around the Christmas holidays and during the Winter months when reds are in demand.

RED SPORT does not split; in fact we have never seen a split calyx on it.

Every bloom is of a brilliant "Crane" red color, just the shade to show to best advantage under artificial light.

It will travel farther and keep longer than any other red to date. Blooms shipped to Chicago have kept a week in perfect condition after they were received.

RED SPORT is not large enough to be classed as a fancy, but the color, form and stem are all so good that it sells at sight.

This variety brought $6.00 per 100 all last January in Washington City.

The flower with ordinary culture is 2¼ to 3¼ inches across, on wiry stems, 18 to 20 inches in length, that well support the bloom.

The plant makes no superfluous grass, is an upright grower, and can be planted close.

RED SPORT is perfectly healthy, and is entirely free from all forms of disease.

RED SPORT is highly recommended, without exception, by every florist who has seen it growing.

Do not take our word for it; come and see RED SPORT growing and be your own judge. We are only an hour and a half out from Washington on the Bluemont Division, Southern Railway, with four trains each way daily. Write, 'phone or wire and our carriage will meet you at station.

We have a large stock from which to select cuttings, and every cutting sent out will be grown cool, and rooted without bottom heat, and will make a good healthy plant.

As we are offering a strictly commercial variety, suited to the need of the average florist, or grower who wants a red that will produce good bloom in paying numbers in the Winter months, we propose to offer it at a popular price, that will enable the grower to buy it in quantity.

PRICE FOR JANUARY, 1905, DELIVERY (Orders filled in strict rotation.)

12 for $1.50, postpaid; 25 for $2.50, postpaid; 50 for $4 00, postpaid; 100 for $6.00; 1,000 for $50.00; 5,000 for $237.50; 10,000 for $450.00.

We guarantee all stock sent out to be well-rooted and to arrive in good condition.

DISEASED PALM LEAVES.

Kindly state the name of the insect or disease of palm and what is its cause, from being planted out all summer? What is the remedy? I. W. G.

A portion of a leaflet from a palm, apparently a phoenix, accompanied this query, and an examination of the specimen shows that the plant is affected by the phoenix fungus, Peronospora Phoenixæ, a trouble that is not uncommon with these plants.

This is one of those fungi that makes its growth within the tissues of the leaf and frequently escapes notice until such time as the spore-bearing branches of the fungus appear above the surface of the leaf, as shown by the leaflet forwarded. In all probability the plant in question was affected by this fungus before it was planted out, but the comparatively cool and damp summer has favored the growth of the fungus and its ravages are now more clearly shown.

There is no absolute cure known to the writer, but careful culture, including a less quantity of moisture on the foliage during the winter, plenty of fresh air and a night temperature of 60 degrees will tend to strengthen the plant and check the fungus. W. H. Taplin.

Our Introduction for 1905

A Grand Pink Carnation
Lighter in Color than Lawson

With no cerise or magneta shadings. A color that withstands the brightest sun's rays without the objectionable shadings or bleachings at the edges of the petals. The true merits of this variety are summed up in four points:

1st. A strong free growth and of easy propagation.

2nd. Large 3½-inch flowers of a beautiful dark shade of clear pink. No imperfect or faded blooms.

3rd. Comes into flower with the earliest bloomers, and produces freely and continually throughout the season. Has never shown any cropping tendency.

We have a large stock and can guarantee early delivery.

WE TAKE PLEASURE IN ANNOUNCING THE

New Carnation=Fred Burki

Which Will be Disseminated in 1905—Commencing in January.

Fred Burki is the result of a cross between Lawson and a seedling of much merit; the latter being the seed parent. It possesses all the good qualities to induce the most conservative growers to include it among best whites.

HERE ARE A FEW OF ITS MERITORIOUS POINTS:

1st. The blooms come perfect and uniform, averaging 3 to 3½ inches in size.

2d. The stem measures from 20 to 30 inches, being stiff and erect and resembles that of Lawson.

3d. It never crops, but yields continuously from November until July.

4th. The calyx is perfect; showing no tendency of bursting.

5th. Its keeping qualities, a point not to be overlooked, are second to none and equal to the best.

6th. It transplants easily and roots like the proverbial weed.

Those who saw it growing are unanimous in declaring the FRED BURKI the ideal white in every respect. It scored 88 points at the Detroit Carnation Convention, receiving a certificate of merit. Don't hesitate placing your order for FRED BURKI. It will prove a good investment.

PRICE—$12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. 250 at 1000 rate. Orders filled strictly in rotation.

WRITE FOR PHOTOGRAPH OF 1903 CHRISTMAS CROP.

B. K. & B. Floral Co., Richmond, Ind. Joliet, Ill., Oct. 15, 1903.

Gentlemen:—We now have two blooms open on the plants which we have of Richmond Gem, which were sent us for trial. Of course, you understand it is very hard to judge a carnation with but six plants. From the appearance of the blooms now, we would not class it as a fancy carnation, but we are very much impressed with the habit and growth of same, also the long stiff stems, and think it will be a free bloomer. The bloom is a little undersize but the form is good, and the color is all that can be asked for in a scarlet. At the present time we consider Estelle the best scarlet in the market, as it is a free bloomer, and cannot be beaten for color, being a better color than Adonis, and judging the Richmond Gem, we will take Estelle as a standard. The color of the Richmond Gem is equally as good as Estelle, but we think it will give more blooms than Estelle, the habit is better and the stock is equally as healthy, and in fact, more so, as it is not inclined to rust. I wish you would send us, upon receipt of this, six of the best blooms you can pick of the Richmond Gem, that we may compare them with the two we now have. The writer expects to visit Richmond soon and see it growing, and if it impresses us as favorably as it does now, we will place an order for 10,000.

J. D. THOMPSON CARNATION CO.

The B. K. & B. F. Co., Richmond, Ind. Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 15, '04.

Gentlemen:—We feel confident that your Richmond Gem will become one of the standard commercial varieties as soon as it is generally disseminated. As a commercial scarlet it certainly is superior to anything we now have. The color could not be improved upon, and in freedom it is ahead of anything we know of. You ought to have no trouble in selling all that you can supply.

BAUR & SMITH.

B. K. & B. Floral Co., Richmond, Ind. Hartford, Conn., Jan. 18, 1904.

Gentlemen:—As to the result of the trial of six plants of Richmond Gem you sent me, I have to say that when housed the third week in July they made rapid growth and, while topped once after benching, the first flower, measuring two and one-half inches, was cut September 25. Since then there has been no let-up in the production of blooms. Habit of plant is ideal, stem just right to carry the flower gracefully, while the color, to my mind, surpasses anything yet produced in scarlet. It has been a pleasure to watch its behavior, and from experience can unhesitatingly say that you are warranted in recommending Richmond Gem to the trade as a strictly first-class commercial variety.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

B. K. & B. Floral Co., Richmond, Ind. Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 16, 1904.

Gentlemen:—The plants of Richmond Gem you so kindly sent me for trial made fine plants in spite of the most unfavorable season I have had since embarking in business, thus showing great vitality and vigor as a grower and, although they had this set-back in the field, they have made a good crop of good flowers, and the color is much more desirable than most of the scarlets offered for our investment. The flower in size is not a 4-inch one but it is of fair size and promises to produce four flowers to one as compared with most of the extremely large flowered sorts.

ALBERT M. HERR.

B. K. & B. F. Co., Richmond, Ind. Cincinnati, O., July 25, 1904.

I want to say to you that your Richmond Gem scarlet carnation is the best keeper and best seller of any carnation of a commercial sort I have ever handled, of fine color, splendid calyx and stem. I predict for Richmond Gem a large sale.

E. G. GILLETT.

☞ PLACE YOUR ORDERS early, as we have already sold over 52,000. Our stock is large and in fine shape. Come and see it growing. AND NUMEROUS DIPLOMAS AND CERTIFICATES OF MERIT

The beauty and value of this new fern to be introduced Spring of 1905, can best be appreciated by seeing it. It is a sport from the Pierson Fern (Nephrolepis Piersoni), but it is very much more beautiful and of greater commercial value. It is as different from the Pierson Fern as that is from the Boston. The small side pinnae are again subdivided, producing an exquisite and beautiful effect, changing the entire character of the fronds, which measure less than half the length and about twice the breadth of the fronds of the Pierson Fern. The fronds also assume an entirely different form, the side pinnae standing at right angles to the mid-rib of the frond, on edge rather than flat, as is usual, making both sides of the frond equally beautiful—entirely different from any other fern.

The plant is very dwarf, only about half the height of the Pierson Fern, and of very much more compact habit. Taking it altogether, it makes one of the most exquisite plants and one of the most valuable for table and house decoration that has ever been introduced. The cut fronds, on account of their beauty, will be in great demand for table decoration, design work, and for use in boxes of loose flowers. Well-grown plants make most magnificent specimens. We think there is nothing in the fern line that is so handsome as this beautiful fern when well grown. It is a wonderful improvement over Nephrolepis Piersoni in every respect, both in regard to beauty and habit of growth.

We will be glad to mail full description, etc., to our friends who do not have the opportunity of seeing this Fern. We shall have plants to offer, not only in small sizes, but also in large specimen plants in 6, 8 and 10-inch pans. Prices on application.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.
STOCK PLANTS.

HEALTHY MUMS

Health is the foundation of all success. So is it in Chrysanthemum Culture. Most florists could improve the quality of their cut by starting with healthy stock. Chrysanthemums deteriorate rapidly grown inside the year 'round, especially so if stuck under a bench in winter. Realizing these facts we have for some years applied the remedy—field culture for stock plants. We select the healthiest plants bearing the finest flowers, then transfer some of the young stock into the field where plenty of room, clean culture, broad sunlight, pure air and unlimited root action will build a constitution. Our stock plants are then chosen from the field, thus securing healthy mums. Wintered cool and in full sunlight, our stock is really pedigreed and toned up.

THAT THE PRICE ASKED IS VERY REASONABLE. ALL FLORISTS WHO HAVE PURCHASED, HAVE SO EXPRESSED THEIR OPINION.

TO INTRODUCE

Nephrolepis Scottii

To more customers, florists who have not yet seen the fern, I make this special offer. I will sell one plant of each size at the following prices, and will also prepay the express charges:

4-inch	$0.50	7-inch	$2.00
6-inch	1.25	8-inch	3.00
10-inch	$5.00

One plant, or one of each size only, will be sold under these conditions.

I make this offer in order that those who are unfamiliar with SCOTTII can see and judge for themselves, that there is no comparison between this fern and any other variety of Nephrolepis, for commercial and decorative purposes. SCOTTII has at least four times as many fronds per plant in any size pot as any other commercial Nephrolepis that was ever introduced.

READ CAREFULLY WHAT THE NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB SAID:

The committee of award of the club visited the establishment of John Scott, at Flatbush, N. Y., on October 6, for the purpose of inspecting the stock of his new fern, NEPHROLEPIS SCOTTII. Seven members of the committee attended, also the president and vice-president of the club. The initial exhibit of this fern was made at the rooms of the club at the November meeting, 1903. The committee which examined it at that time was so favorably impressed by it that they unhesitatingly awarded it a certificate of merit, and did not ask to see it growing; a request to examine the stock was only recently sent to the club by the exhibitor. The committee made a thorough examination of the stock both in pots and in the bench, and character. It was growing in all sizes from plants in 4 inch pots up to specimen plants in tubs, and it was absolutely uniform, and were highly pleased at its condition form in all grades, the characteristics of the large specimen plants being evident in the smallest specimens on the place. The most careful scrutiny failed to discover any tendency whatsoever toward reversion, and it seems as if the character of the plant is absolutely and indelibly fixed. It is in essence a condensed form of the Boston fern, with valuable characteristics added, which are not evident in the parent. Your committee took an average plant in an 8-inch pot and found by actual count that there were 200 fronds in it, not counting the undeveloped and small ones which were in the center of the plant. The fronds of the plant in question averaged about 20 inches in length and three inches in width at the widest point; the pinnæ are very closely set, so that they overlap, making a more finished frond than the parent. The plant in question had a spread of three feet. Plants in 4-inch pots showed a spread of 18 inches and a height of 10 to 12 inches.

The committee was unanimously of the opinion that it is a most valuable introduction, and that it will become a plant for the florists to grow universally. It has a crispness and hardness about it which is superior to the parent, and which is one of its very valuable characteristics. It propagates very freely, and because of the fact that its character is established in the smallest size, it should find ready sale in all grades. After a thorough examination, your committee unanimously agreed that it was worthy of the highest award by the club and therefore voted that it be awarded the silver medal of the club, and herewith recommend same for your approval.

(Signed) Patrick O'Mara, John Birnie, Alfred H. Langjahr, Wm. H. Siebrecht, Chas. Lenker, John Dowsett.

In awarding it the GOLD MEDAL, the COMMITTEE OF AWARDS at the St. Louis World's Fair, said of NEPHROLEPIS SCOTTII: "A sturdy, Dwarf and compact form of NEPHROLEPIS, very symmetrical and handsome, either in small plants or quite large ones. A great acquisition, with excellent qualities as a house plant. Worthy of Gold Medal."

PRICES: 4-inch, $7.00; 6-inch, $15.00; 7-inch, $24.00; 8-inch, $36.00 per dozen; 10-in., $5.00 each

A BUSINESS PROPOSITION.

All the talk of there being enough glass to supply the demand for cut flowers, particularly in the middle west, simmers down to a plain business proposition. One man of experience who had not previously owned his own place figured it out that by growing Beauties there were wages, interest on the investment and a good profit to be had. So last spring he put up a range covering 16,500 square feet. He used a little over 400 boxes of glass because he built high houses and spared no reasonable expense. The result was that his place stood him a little over $9,000, but he had room for some more houses and heating capacity to double his plant. He benched 8,000 Beauty plants. There are growers who talk about returns of $1.25 a plant, but this man's experience leads him to count on from 70 to 90 cents as the return in an ordinary season with $1 in an exceptionally successful year. At 70 cents it will give $5,600 for expenses and profit, and at 90 cents $7,200, which should make it a good business proposition. Interest on the money invested may be figured at $540. Expenses, of course, will vary with the severity of the winter. The net ought to pay for an addition to the glass next year which can be operated at little additional expense and will still further improve the investment for a careful, capable grower.

TO-BAK-INE

FUMIGATING POWDER.

This powder contains a definite amount of nicotine and will be found uniform at all times. Slow burning. Sure death to Aphis.

TO-BAK-INE FUMIGATING POWDER has kept down all signs of aphis in carnation and rose houses. It leaves no odor on the flowers and has not in the slightest hurt either flower or foliage on the roses, as does burning tobacco stems.—WILLIAM SCOTT, Buffalo.

TO-BAK-INE FUMIGATING POWDER killed the black fly on the chrysanthemums.—GEO. A. RACKHAM, Detroit.

NAMES OF FERNS.

I enclose the fronds of two ferns of which I should be glad to have you give me the names. F. J. U.

The Maidenhair fern frond is that of Adiantum gracillimum, a very beautiful member of the cuneatum group that was introduced about the year 1875. This fern comes true from spores, and is useful as a cut frond where delicate greenery is required, but is not largely grown commercially.

The second specimen is a frond of Nephrolepis davallioides furcans, a fern that makes an admirable specimen in an 8-inch or 10-inch pan, a strong-growing variety that may be well grown in company with the Boston fern, and one that finds a ready market with many growers and decorators.

ASTERS IN ENGLAND.

Annual asters have of late years acquired so high a degree of popularity in the markets as to induce cultivators for commercial purposes to largely extend the area devoted to them. It is estimated that upwards of 5,000 acres have this year been devoted to their cultivation for the production of blooms for sale in a cut state. They have been largely cultivated by growers in touch with the seaside towns, where their flowers find a ready sale during the late summer months at remunerative rates. The colors most popular are white, pink and purple, and the bold, loosely arranged blooms of the Comet varieties meet with more favor for decorations than those of a more formal shape, but for the making of funeral crosses and wreaths the flowers of the white and purple varieties of the Victoria type are the most largely used.—Gardeners' Magazine.

It Stands Alone!

THE MOREHEAD RETURN TRAP is the only mechanism which insures an absolutely perfect circulation in greenhouse heating coils. : : : : : : : : : :
The saving in fuel during the first winter it is used more than pays for the cost of installing Trap—and the saving goes right on year after year. .· ·. .· ·. .· ·. .·

THE GEO. WITTBOLD CO., CHICAGO, SAY:

"Regarding the Morehead Return Trap recently sold us, we wish to say it is doing its work so well, and we feel so grateful in having found an apparatus that returns the condensation to our steam boiler without any attention on the part of fireman or engineer, that we gladly offer our name as reference to our fellow florists who are in need of an apparatus of this kind. We hope many will avail themselves of the apparatus."
Repeat orders from the Wittbold Co. bear testimony to their continued satisfaction.

THE DETROIT (MICH.) FLORAL CO. WRITE:

"The Morehead Steam Trap we are using for returning condensation to boiler has proved a success in every way, the saving in fuel paying the cost of the trap in a very short time. It can be seen working at our place at any time by anyone wishing to do so. We are getting a great deal more heat from our pipes now than we did before using it."

GEO. REINBERG, CHICAGO, STATES HIS EXPERIENCE AS FOLLOWS:

"I am in receipt of the No. 1 Morehead Return Trap. This makes two traps I have bought from you—both give elagent satisfaction. Your trap takes care of the condensation without giving it any attention, whatsoever. A steam system with your trap is the same as a hot water system where no pumps or traps are needed.'

Peter Reinberg's opinion of the Trap will be found on page 1119 of the October 27th issue of the Review. If you did not read it, it will pay you to look it up.

Dear Sir:—The refrigerator you built for us recently is proving entirely satisfactory. It maintains a very uniform temperature of 42 degrees, and flowers keep in it well.

We find it well constructed and a highly attractive ornament to our store.

Yours very respectfully,
E. Nagel & Co.

White Enamel Refrigerator Co.,
St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Sir:—Since using your ice case in our retail flower department we have saved 30 per cent in the consumption of ice. Our saving in flowers we cannot accurately determine, but should estimate conservatively 25 per cent. Not only this, flowers keep with us as they never did before, and retain their salable appearance longer. Your box is certainly a boon to the florist and we predict a wonderful sale on them, especially to the florists, when their qualifications become known.

Yours truly,

Kleinhans & Mason are breaking ground for an addition to their plant to be completed by early spring, for rose growing. They already have 4,500 feet of glass, with the stock looking very good, and are producing carnations and other stock for a rapidly increasing demand. They will also force some lettuce this winter and grow a large stock of vegetable plants for spring sales. Their location is a good one for a business in hardy plants and they expect to develop this feature in the near future. When building last spring they provided heating facilities for considerable more glass.

H. J. Huesman & Son, of the Brookside cut flower store, are getting in some fine mums. They are doing a very fine trade, much funeral work and many orders for shipment as far west as Pittsburg. They have to go outside of town for much of their stock. They have several times had at one shipment 1,000 Brides, 1,000 valley, 1,500 carnations, 1,000 violets and a big lot of mums from the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co.

Hoskins & Giles are also doing a large trade this fall, including decorations for a number of fashionable weddings. They are cutting a large number of very fine mums.

THE MOST MONEY←

To get the most money out of your business you must produce the best stock at the lowest possible expense. Are you sure there is no waste in your business? Are you sure every one of your methods is the cheapest as well as the most effective?

The best stock isn't always the most costly to produce. It's more often in doing the right thing at the right time. And that's what keeps you posted on. It is a $10 book for $5, and the best investment you can possibly make, no matter how large or how small your business.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO., 520-535 Caxton Bldg., CHICAGO.

WOOD ASHES.

This is practically the only American source of potash that is abundant enough to be of any commercial importance as a fertilizer, and this supply is now so limited as to restrict their use. Potash in wood ashes is in the most valuable form of the carbonate. Wood ashes, besides furnishing about five per cent potash, also contain one to two per cent of phosphoric acid and thirty to thirty-five per cent of lime, which are also valuable as fertilizers. The quality of ashes varies considerably with the kind of wood used to produce them and the care with which they are preserved. The difference in quality is so great without any change in appearance that the only safe way to purchase is upon guaranteed analysis.

Good wood ashes which have not been exposed to the weather or otherwise wet, such as may be described as house ashes, weigh about forty-eight pounds to the bushel and carry about eight per cent potash and two per cent phosphoric acid. Canada unleached wood ashes as sold by the carload are rated at forty-five pounds to the bushel and run from four to six per cent of potash and about one per cent phosphoric acid. Leached or weathered ashes are much less valuable, as they contain only one or two per cent potash.

H. J. Patterson.

SPARTANBURG, S. C.

Chas. A. Moss, the only florist in this city, had a large wedding decoration on October 20, using 1,500 chrysanthemums, 700 carnations, 300 tea roses, fifty Beauties, 600 valley, fifty cattleyas, fifty strings of smilax and ten cases of southern wild smilax. It was the finest job ever seen in this section of the country. He had the church and house. Mr. Moss has about 7,000 feet of glass and grows quite a good deal of outdoor stuff. Mrs. Moss is his assistant and a good one. O. A. C. Oehmler, from Washington, was down to assist on the wedding job and took a stroll through the cotton fields. He predicts a great future for Mr. Moss. There has been no rain in this section for nine weeks.

I would say that many of the articles in the Review are of great value to me and I would not feel that I could do without it were the subscription price thrice what it is.—A. E. Kennedy, Algona, Ia.

South Bend, Ind., April 4, 1904.
"Superior to any Hot Water Boiler we have ever used. You certainly have placed the right name to your Boilers; no effort at all to keep the temperature at desired points when zero weather comes. PAINT ON GLASS.

What is the best material to take paint off glass? I want to clean the north side of a fern house, white lead paint that has been on all summer.

C. U.

Put two tablespoonfuls of lye (potash) in an ordinary pail of water. Tie a a bunch of rags on the end of a pole and saturate with the solution. Rub the rags on the glass and it will loosen the paint. You should have a helper with a good stream of water from a hose to wash the glass clean as quickly as the paint is loosened. Next time you wish to shade don't use oil with the lead. Use white lead and naphtha. If you wish the shade densely mix it thickly. If only a light shade is desired, then use less lead and more naphtha. W. S.

MR. VANDERLIP'S FORECAST.

Frank A. Vanderlip, vice-president of the National City bank, of New York, made an interesting forecast of business conditions in an address before the Illinois Bankers' Association at St. Louis the other day.

He made his reputation as a prophet two years ago in an address to the bankers at Wilmington. Then he deplored the financial extravagance and overcapitalization, and foretold a bursting of the bubble. It was a note of warning, and the country had good occasion to recall his words soon afterwards.

In his speech of last week Mr. Vanderlip sounded no similar warning. He sees in the industrial and financial conditions of today only the prospects of continued improvement and another period of trade expansion. He showed the increase in the total wealth of the country, the stock of money, the mineral and agricultural products, the steel output, and the staggering increase in the export trade, which, as he said, "made economists seriously to consider what was to happen to the rest of the industrial world if this march of progress went on." It is to be hoped that Mr. Vanderlip will continue to live up to his reputation as an accurate financial prophet.

Messrs Lord & Burnham,

Gentlemen.—

I wish you would put in two of your largest boilers to accomadate the additional range of glass you have just built for us
The Burnham Boilers we had in before gave entire satisfaction for the old range.
I particularly noticed what quick circulation we got, and I must say they are very easy to clean out and I consider them the most economical boiler I have ever used during my twenty-five years experience.

TWO GRAND NEW ASTERS
BENTHEY'S WHITE
BENTHEY'S PINK...

THE ABOVE CUT shows a vase of BENTHEY'S WHITE with flowers from four to five inches in diameter, and stems from thirty to forty inches in length. These two varieties will produce more first-class salable flowers than any Aster now in commerce. They are pronounced by both grower and consumer THE FINEST ASTERS EVER SEEN IN CHICAGO, and were the FAVORITE ASTERS IN THE CHICAGO AND ST. LOUIS MARKETS the past season. Read what some of the prominent Florists say:

"The Asters received are a fine lot—the best we have ever seen." JOHN BREITMEYER'S SONS, Detroit, Mich.

"We have handled the Benthey Asters in large quantities the past season and found it the best seller we have ever handled, and sold at double the price of any other variety in the market." P. J. HAUSWIRTH, Chicago, Ill.

"It is the best Aster I ever handled both for cut flowers and design work. Hope you will have more next season, as I know the demand will be great." J. J. BENEKE, St. Louis, Mo.

"We have seen the New Benthey Aster, and consider it the best in the market. When you are ready to place the seed on the market kindly inform us, as we are anxious to grow some next season." NANZ & NEUNER, Louisville, Ky.

☞ The Seed of the TWO VARIETIES will be ready for distribution January 1, 1905.

THE CHICAGO EXHIBITION

Perhaps it was because Chicago had no show last year and everybody missed it that the response of the exhibitors was so liberal this year. At any rate the thirteenth exhibition of the Horticultural Society of Chicago was shown to be unlucky in one respect hours before the doors were opened to the public. Manager George Asmus began to realize it long before the work of staging the exhibition had begun. He had one of the handsomest halls in the United States in which to display the wealth of exhibits which were placed in his hands, but it was a hall very inadequate to the needs of the occasion. It is in reality four halls, one of them in the Fine Arts building and the other three in the Auditorium Hotel. Had the splendid banquet hall been twice or three times its actual size it would have been none too large for the best display of the very large amount of material. As it is, and with the best arrangement which it would be possible to suggest, the space left for visitors is far short of what it should be and the exhibits are already so crowded that much of the effect is lost. What it will be later in the week when carnations and floral arrangements are added to the display which was already on the tables Wednesday evening, one can only surmise. The indications are that the display of carnations will be the largest ever seen at any exhibition other than the annual meeting of the American Carnation Society.

The private establishments responded more liberally this year than heretofore, Mrs. Pullman, Martin A. Ryerson, Arthur Orr, E. G. Uihlein, H. G. Selfridge, John J. Mitchell and others sending large quantities of decorative plants, chrysanthemums, etc. Mr. Selfridge's group of orchids is a marvel, easily the finest ever seen in the west. H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, and Vaughan staged some very fine large chrysanthemum plants. John Scott, of Brooklyn, brought a splendid exhibit of Nephrolepis Scottii and a splendid group of pandanus, etc. The class for fifteen geraniums in not over 10-inch pots brought out three very fine exhibits. Lorraine begonias were never before so well shown in Chicago. J. A. Peterson also set up some fine plants of Begonia Turnford Hall, a white sport of Lorraine, and there was a handsome group of Nephrolepis Piersoni elegantissima. Lincoln park also staged a large decorative group and there are many other smaller exhibits. All of these lose in effect by lack of room for their proper display. And it is a fact that the manager declined with thanks fully half the decorative stock which was offered him.

The cut blooms of chrysanthemums were mostly staged in a room by themselves at the south end of the main exhibition hall, but this, too, was inadequate to the needs of these classes and some of the handsome large vases were scattered through the other rooms. The quality of these exhibits was as a rule very good, but they lose in effect by crowding and the visitors are bruising them by brushing against them in the narrow passage ways. The class for 100 blooms brought out several very fine entries, including Timothy Eaton of immense size and Mrs. Jerome Jones of superb finish.

The attendance started in very satisfactorily. The show is on the tenth floor of the buildings, but the elevator service is entirely equal to all requirements and the fact that the exhibition is far above the street level does not seem to have any deterrent effect. Should there be, however, anything like the large attendance at the World's Fair Flower Show in the later days of the week the space will be inadequate for the accommodation of the crowds and there is already regret heard that the Coliseum was not used for this exhibition.

The judges are William Duckham, Madison, N. J.; Paul Dailledouze, Flatbush, N. Y., and W. A. Kennedy, Milwaukee. The awards up to the time of going to press were as follows:

Cut Chrysanthemums.

Twenty-five white, Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., first, on W. H. Chadwick; Weiland & Risch, second, on Eaton.

Collection forty varieties, Smith & Son first, H. W. Buckbee second.

Vase of 100 blooms, one or more varieties, H. W. Buckbee first, with Mrs. Jerome Jones; Weiland & Risch second, with Eaton.

Vase of 100 blooms, not to exceed four inches in diameter, John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, first; W. J. & M. S. Vesey second with mixed varieties.

Twenty-five sprays pompons, Breitmeyer's Sons first, Smith & Son second.

Twenty-five sprays anemone pompon varieties, Breitmeyer's Sons first.

Twenty-five sprays anemone varieties, Breitmeyer's Sons first.

Chrysanthemum Plants.

For one specimen plant H. W. Buckbee was first for pink, with a fine plant of W. Duckham, second for white, yellow and best in the show, Vaughan's greenhouses being first on all these, also on "any other color," single and anemone flowered varieties. Vaughan was second on pink and Martin A. Ryerson, John Reardon, gardener, second on "any other color."

For three and five standards Vaughan was first and Buckbee second, but the additional premium for the best plant entered in the two classes was given one of Buckbee's. Vaughan was first for five specimens, with Buckbee second, for five specimens single varieties and for ten specimen plants. Buckbee was first for twenty-five single stems and M. A. Ryerson second. Vaughan was first for groups of chrysanthemums arranged for effect, M. A. Ryerson second. Vaughan was first for grafted plant.

Orchids.

E. G. Uihlein, H. Skoldager, gardener, was first for collection of cut blooms of orchids.

H. G. Selfridge, C. H. Gebhardt, gardener, was first for collection of orchids in flower.

Miscellaneous Plants.

For fifteen geraniums M. A. Ryerson was first, Anton Then second.

For collection of ferns the Geo. Wittbold Co. was first, J. F. Kidwell & Bro. second.

For ten palms the Geo. Wittbold Co. was first, E. G. Uihlein second.

For five foliage plants in five varieties H. G. Selfridge was first, E. G. Uihlein second.

For the best palm the Geo. Wittbold Co. was first, Albert Fuchs second.

Araucaria, A. McAdams, first, Vaughan second.

Croton, J. J. Mitchell, Geo. Woodward, gardener, first.

Dracæna, E. G. Uihlein first.

Best decorative plant, J. J. Mitchell first, E. G. Uihlein second.

Boston fern, Anton Then first.

Fern other than above, E. G. Uihlein first, J. J. Mitchell second.

Six araucarias, Vaughan first, George Wittbold Co. second.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Vaughan first, George Wittbold Co. second.

Best flowering plant other than mum, Vaughan second, no first.

Wednesday's Awards.

On Wednesday the exhibits were shifted and some of them removed to make room for the roses and table decorations of chrysanthemums. The latter were for display only, no premiums being awarded, and the result of this plan was the best showing of this very attractive feature seen in some years. The exhibitors were, Joseph Curran, W. J. Smyth, O. J. Friedman, John Mangel, S. Muir and C. A. Samuelson.

The awards for roses were as follows:

Twenty-five Beauty, Poehlmann Bros. first, Peter Reinberg second.

Forty Liberty, Peter Reinberg first, Wietor Bros. second.

Forty Golden Gate, Poehlmann Bros. first.

Forty Kaiserin, Peter Reinberg first, John Breitmeyer's Sons second.

Forty Bride, Poehlmann Bros. first, Chicago Carnation Co. second.

Forty Maid, Poehlmann Bros. first, Bassett & Washburn second.

Forty Meteor, J. Cook first, Wietor Bros. second.

Forty Perle, Poehlmann Bros. first, Peter Reinberg second.

Twenty-five "any other," Poehlmann Bros. first, with Chatenay; Peter Reinberg second, with Pere von Godesberg.

Fifty Beauty, Poehlmann Bros. first, Bassett & Washburn second, Peter Reinberg third.

Seventy-five Liberty, Peter Reinberg first, Benthey-Coatsworth Co. second.

One hundred Gate, Poehlmann Bros. first, Peter Reinberg second.

One hundred Bride, Poehlmann Bros. first, Wietor Bros. second.

One hundred Maid, Poehlmann Bros. first, Benthey-Coatsworth Co. second.

One hundred "any other," Poehlmann Bros. first, with Chatenay, Peter Reinberg second, with Sunrise.

Twelve blooms of a rose never before exhibited, Peter Reinberg silver cup on No. 51, deep pink.

A silver medal was awarded to the E. G. Hill Co. for Rose Richmond, formerly known as Etna.

A certificate of merit was given the E. G. Hill Co. for Rose Rosalind Orr English.

The attendance on Wednesday taxed the capacity of the halls. Early in the afternoon one of the elevators fell several floors but none of the passengers was injured.

THE BUFFALO SHOW.

The H. A. Meldrum Co.'s show was all that we expected it to be, perhaps not larger in quantity of blooms than last year, but in novelty and quality of flowers it was far ahead. We were gratified to see an increase in exhibitors from a distance. Among them were Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., and W. J. & M. S. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind. R. Vincent, jr., & Son, White Marsh, Md., sent a large lot of pompons. We think they were field-grown and were not as bright and clean as those of Smith & Son, which, of course, were grown under glass. We were also very glad to see these plucky firms sending so far capture the majority of the premiums in the classes they entered. If it were not for these expert growers sending their superb flowers we should be inclined to think we were the only people on earth and our local florists should be grateful to the enterprise that affords them a sight of the latest varieties and to what perfection they can be grown.

Everything went off smoothly. Charles H. Keitsch, who has worked for months to make the show a success, did not let up until the last moment on Saturday and Mr. Siler, the advertising agent of the H. A. Meldrum Co., and to whom the firm largely leave all details of the show, was continually with the boys and making things pleasant generally. Messrs. Bell, Crowe and Cowell did their judging carefully and well and no dissenting voice was heard. There was a good sprinkling of florists from near-by towns and on Thursday evening a spread was served at which about thirty sat down, about half of whom were visitors, which made it all the more enjoyable. W. F. Kasting presided.

One more feature to be thankful for: On Friday, the day the show was complete, the firm gave as a conservative estimate of the number of people who ascended to the fourth floor to see the mums, as 20,000. So in the four days the number must have been at least 50,000. After so many things to be thankful for, including the presence of Elmer D. Smith and Judge Vesey themselves, we can stand a trifle of criticism. The first can't very well be helped in such a building. It was much too warm and the great crowd made it still warmer. More space and a lower temperature is needed. The next regret could be helped, and that is the comparatively weak competition among the local florists. It is not easy to say why this is. True, there are many small growers who do not attempt to grow anything like exhibition flowers, but there are at least half a dozen growers who could have entered who did not. And in the baskets and 100 blooms arranged for effect another half dozen retailers could have come in. Any one of these local artists will tell you, and they believe themselves, that they are unapproachable as designers, that their "work" is always superior to the fellow's down the street. If it's pure indifference that keeps them away, then they are foolish and selfish. If it's because they are afraid of being second to some other fellow, then they lack the true sportsman's spirit. Perhaps it's so in every city, more's the pity.

Now I am aware that except locally it's of little interest who captured the prizes, so I will boil it down as much as possible.

In the class confined to growers within fifty miles of Buffalo, C. F. Christenson, of Eggertsville, took first for fifty white and for fifty pink, second for twenty-five white and for twenty-five pink. David J. Scott, of Corfu, second for fifty white, third for fifty yellow, first for twenty-five white, second for twenty-five yellow, first for twenty-five pink, first for twenty-five "any other color." Wm. Ehman, of Corfu, was first on fifty yellow, third for twenty-five white, third for twenty-five yellow, third for twenty-five pink, second for twenty-five "any other color." The Wm. Scott Co. took second for fifty yellow and for fifty pink, first for twenty-five yellow.

In the open classes Nathan Smith & Son took first for fifty white with Convention Hall, beating out mammoth flowers of Nellie Pockett; second for fifty yellow, second in display of 100 blooms in twenty-five varieties, first in fifty blooms varieties of 1904, first in fifty blooms varieties undisseminated, first in display of pompons. W. J. & M. S. Vesey were third on fifty white, first on fifty yellow, second on fifty pink, second on 100 blooms arranged for effect, first on two vases of carnations, 200 blooms. William Scott Co. took second on fifty white, third on fifty yellow, third on fifty pink, first on fifty "any other color," third on 100 blooms twenty-five varieties, second on fifty blooms of 1904, first 100 blooms arranged for effect, first on handle basket chrysanthemums, second on dinner table decoration, first on twenty-five blooms Wm. Duckham. Charles Sandeford, gardener to J. J. Allbright, was first on display of 100 blooms in twenty-five varieties, second on handle basket of chrysanthemums, second on 200 carnations, first (silver cup) for basket of flowers other than chrysanthemums, first for collection of plants. Gunnar Teilmann was first for fifty pink and second for collection of plants. Wm. Ehman was second for fifty blooms "any other color." Charles H. Keitsch was third on 100 blooms for effect, first for dinner table, second on twenty-five blooms Wm. Duckham, second on 100 American Beauties, first on 100 red roses (Meteor).

Wm. Kasting captured first on 100 American Beauties, first on 100 white roses (Brides), second on 100 pink roses (Killarney), second for red (Beauties). J. Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, won first for 100 pink roses (La Detroit). C. Peake, Buffalo, won second on handle basket, third on 100 American Beauties.

Now I haven't given the varieties except in a few cases, but it was very evident the judges went for the more compact flowers of distinct color, for instance old Viviand-Morel beat out poor colored Duckham and Dr. Enguehard. Colonel Appleton beat out F. S. Vallis, General Hutton and Thirkell. Convention Hall, by its pure whiteness and perfect form, won over some grand Nellie Pockett and unripe Eaton. Old Maud Dean was first in fifty pink over Duckham and Mrs. Coombes. The heat was against the large loose flowers and a little wilt counted against them. We still think Wm. Duckham is a wonderful variety and there were some grand flowers grown locally. W. S.

THE NEW YORK EXHIBITION.

At this writing the New York exhibition, under the auspices of the managers of the American Institute, is progressing and it is safe to say that never before has such an exhibition been held in this city, if anywhere else in the country. The quality in every section is superb and the number of competitors in every class, and more particularly in the chrysanthemum cut flower classes, is phenomenal. Many of the classes calling for vases of ten or six blooms have from ten to fifteen competitors and the quality in every instance is of a calibre that would easily score first at any show in the country. All the principal exhibitors in the east are represented. A. Herrington was the king of the classes calling for fifty blooms in one vase, scoring first for fifty, any variety, with fifty Appleton, every flower of which was perfect. The same exhibitor was first also for fifty flowers in three kinds with Appleton, Eaton and Chadwick, and again for twenty-five blooms yellow, with Yellow Eaton. For twenty-five white A. Herrington won the award with Eaton; for twenty-five pink with Mrs. Barclay; for twenty-five any other color with Lady Roberts (one of the most striking vases in the hall); and for twenty-five any new variety the same exhibitor was first with W. R. Church.

This latter variety was also shown in splendid condition by Wm. Turner, Geo. Hale, Thos. W. Head, W. Duckham and Wm. Kleinheinz and judging by the admiration it elicited from the general public, there should be a commercial future for this variety.

The prizes for ten flowers and six flowers of a variety, of which there were some sixty classes, were divided very evenly between the gentlemen just mentioned, with Robt. Allen, gardener to E. C. Benedict; Samuel Riddel, gardener to Mrs. F. A. Constable, and Howard McNichol, gardener to Geo. E. Rand, Esq., also included; some four or five first prizes also falling to James Fraser, gardener to O. H. Kahn. The class of six yellow won by Mr. Allen contained probably the largest flowers in the show, the variety being Mrs. Thirkell. They were truly enormous, as were also the Yellow Mme. Carnot exhibited by Mr. Riddel.

Other magnificent vases through these classes were Mary Inglis from Wm. Duckham, Merza from Wm. Turner, Geo. Hale, Guy Hamilton; W. R. Church from Thos. W. Head which scored him first in several classes and the Appletons and Eatons from Wm. Kleinheinz. The date was too late for the variety Wm. Duckham to be shown very largely, though James Fraser easily scored first in the pink section with flowers of the largest size and most perfect finish. This variety must be taken on an August crown bud, when it develops splendidly. Those growers who complain of its showing an eye, have in every case taken terminal buds.

A few of the earliest of the birds of passage from the St. Louis show that got home Saturday morning, threw up their hands when they saw the cut mums and declared that the western exhibition was not in the race at all.

The novelties for next year were not largely shown, though a vase containing blooms of Mrs. W. Duckham, Mrs. D. V. West, J. H. Doyle, J. H. Silsbury, Dora Stevens and Merstham Red were much admired. The prize winners in the chrysanthemum cut flower classes are enumerated elsewhere in detail and space forbids any more extended mention here, but I must say that it was the best lot of flowers I ever saw in an exhibition hall.

In the classes for hardy chrysanthemums grown in the open, the number of vases shown would alone have filled a good sized hall. R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, was the principal exhibitor and prize winner. John N. May and Thos. Meehan & Sons also exhibiting largely. Mr. Vincent made application for 500 feet of space and the display he made was a riot of colors that drew great applause from the artistic element in the audience. As shown by Mr. Vincent the hardy section of the chrysanthemum is a most beautiful one and great credit should be given him for his enterprise in bringing from Maryland such an immense collection. It is one thing to see pompon and anemone chryanthemums represented by one or two sprays in a vase or growing in scattered clumps around a dwelling house and quite another thing to see them represented as shown by the Vincent firm set up in great masses and apparently endless variety. It is almost absurd to pick out individual varieties, though the following caught my eye more particularly in scanning the exhibit. Northumberland, Conestoga, James Boon, Joppa, Hamlet, Sunset, Lady Percy, Orange King, Arizona, The Czar, Ontario, Mermet, Annie Eliza and Sheridan.

There were some eighty specimen chrysanthemum plants in the hall, bush and standards, and they were all of the highest quality, such growers as Peter Duff, D. F. Roy, Robt. Marshall, J. Schaffer and Herbert Dumaresq all being represented. Mr. Schaffer, gardener to Richard Mortimer, was the largest exhibitor, having some thirty plants, his specimen standards of Dr. Enguehard being particularly fine. Peter Duff, gardener to J. Crosby Brown, had two splendid bush plants in A. J. Balfour and R. Hooper Pearson, both of which won prizes. D. F. Roy had Theo, The Bard, Black Hawk, Hooper Pearson and Garza, all in wonderful shape, the latter plant carrying over 900 developed flowers. Wm. Anderson, gardener to Herbert Dumaresq, had Arethusa and Mrs. C. B. Freeman as his best plants and Robt. Marshall, gardener to E. W. Converse, set up Louis Boehmer and Mrs. F. A. Constable wonderfully fine.

Plants in 6-inch pots were well shown by Peter Duff, Thos. W. Head and others, Mr. Duff's Merza showing his expert skill to the highest degree. Whether shown as a pot plant or cut flower, Merza was invariably the finest white in the show.

The rose classes were not so well filled as some of the others, though the quality was excellent. For twenty-five tea scented white and twenty-five pink, L. A. Noe and Charles H. Totty were first and second in each class with Bridesmaid and Bride, L. A. Noe also coming first for American Beauties.

In carnations several novelties were set up. Guttman & Weber's Victory is a splendid scarlet and also the red John E. Haines. A. B. Jenkins, gardener to Geo. Van Qualen set up a new seedling of Melba Cook with round flat petals. The color is a lovely pink and this variety has probably come to stay. Regret was heard that Fiancee was not represented, though the introducers are probably busy enough taking care of the western shows.

Violets were not represented in any large quantity, though the Hudson river men, as usual, managed to capture everything in sight.

Orchids were shown in immense quantity and variety by three prominent growers, Messrs. Lager & Hurrell, Julius Roehrs and Siebrecht & Sons. The first named were awarded first for the collection having some sixty species, Cattleya labiata alba, Cypripedium insigne Sanderæ and other scarce kinds making a beautiful showing. Julius Roehr's exhibit was particularly noticeable for immense sprays of Oncidium varicosum, Vanda Cærulea and Cattleya Dowiana. Siebrecht & Sons showed among other choice things some of the finest Cattleya labiata I have ever seen.

Any one of these exhibits was worth ten times the value of the prize and could not be seen outside of New York.

In the classes for groups, single specimen palms, bay trees, etc., Julius Roehrs, J. Lewis Childs, J. H. Troy, Bobbink & Atkins, Siebrecht & Sons, F. R. Pierson Co. and several other eastern cracks were largely represented and it goes without saying that the quality was A1 in every instance.

In the collections of crotons, dracænas, Lorraine begonias, Rex begonias, etc., Roehrs, J. L. Childs and Siebrecht & Sons were largely to the front.

In the class for conifers in pots or tubs, Bobbink & Atkins, J. H. Troy, Julius Roehrs, Wm. A. Moon Co. and Siebrecht & Sons were all extensively represented and these exhibits formed magnificent backgrounds for other classes of lighter colored material.

The fruit exhibits were a show in themselves, Ellwanger & Barry, of Rochester, alone filling a table fifty feet long with apples, not to mention pears and various other fruits. There were much larger exhibits in this line than I had before seen in New York and they were uniformly fine.

Grapes grown under glass were a special feature and resulted in much argument and discussion as to who should get first prize. Four entries that were the finest in quality were from Charles S. Smith, J. P. Sorensen, gardener, and J. D. Smith, Thos. Harvey gardener; Mrs. F. A. Constable, Samuel Riddel, gardener, and Mrs. O. Hoyt, William Slack gardener. The first prize, I believe, was finally given to J. D. Smith.

First Prize Group of Chrysanthemums at Boston, Staged by Wm. Thatcher, Gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner.

General View of the Exhibition of the American Institute, New York, November 10-17.

Table after table was filled with vegetables some thirty-six classes being devoted to this section and the classes were well filled in every instance, cauliflower, parsnips and celery being particularly fine.

J. M. Thorburn & Co., the seedsmen, had an immense exhibit of vegetables with their new potato, Noroton Beauty, as a star attraction. Farm crops in the line of cereals, seed and root crops took up considerable space and were a great attraction to the farmer element among the gathering of the clans. This exhibit received a silver medal.

In the line of special exhibits all the novelties seen at the various exhibitions throughout the country were to be found. John Scott had a splendid group of Scottii and also a very handsome exhibit of his salable sizes of dracænas, palms, etc.

F. R. Pierson showed the new sport from Piersoni and also a large collection of palms, foliage plants and cut chrysanthemums.

The Hinode Florist Co. had an extensive display of Japanese dwarf plants which attracted much attention.

Thos. De Voy & Son, of Poughkeepsie, showed flowers of their new geranium Telegraph which seems to be in a class by itself.

John N. May showed pompon chrysanthemums. Arthur Boddington had a fine sample of all kinds of bulbs and J. L. Childs, of Queens, had very large exhibits of palms, foliage plants and novelties of all descriptions. A grafted chrysanthemum from Vaughan's Seed Store gave the daily paragrapher his chance to work off the old joke about "pulling the show for grafting."

F. Weinberg, of Woodside, L. I., had a large collection of cactus and they sold well as a novelty. There were several novelties in carnations already spoken of, and doubtless many other things that did not catch my eye, as the exhibition was an immense one and covered a good deal of space.

Dr. Hexamer and his corps of assistants deserve every credit for the getting together of such an exhibition. It was most attractively laid out, with broad walks to permit of easy handling of large crowds of people and the hall was handsomely decorated.

The judges in the chrysanthemum cut flowers and plants were Eugene Dailledouze, Charles H. Totty and Wm. Scott.

In the groups, roses, carnations, violets, etc., Jas. T. Ballantyne, F. Morton and J. T. Withers. The list of prizes in detail would fill a volume. B. B.

The seventy-third annual show of the American Institute takes the palm from any of its predecessors. In fact, it is very doubtful if a better exhibition has ever been given in this country. It closes on Thursday of this week, with a record for extent, beauty and perfection of arrangement unequaled, and a record for attendance that will go down in history as a discredit to this city and for which there is no possible excuse. A prize list of over $3,000, with medals, certificates and diplomas unlimited, with a generous distribution of thousands of complimentary tickets and a unique booming of its merits by the city papers; all were as effective as the proverbial "pouring of water on a duck's back." No better hall for the purpose can be found in the country.

Many out of town visitors, a host of market gardeners and some experts in carnation growing were on hand, many of them daily. J. H. Troy added much to the "filling" with lemon trees, bamboo, anonymous evergreens and kentias. J. H. M. Cook had his hive of busy bees and an abundance of honey, which some of the wholesalers tested often. The Springfield Moulding Works showed a practical portable greenhouse that was voted a good thing. Arthur T. Boddington's display of bulbs and orchids was the only independent exhibit of its kind.

The banks and benches of palms and decorative plants of John Lewis Childs, Julius Roehrs, F. R. Pierson Co., Siebrecht & Son have never been excelled. The orchid displays of Lager & Hurrell, Roehrs and Siebrecht were all of the highest quality and variety. Noe's and Totty's roses and DeVoy & Son's violets were of the first class and Weber's, Nye's, Allen's, May's, Haines' and Guttman & Weber's carnations the center of admiring crowds. Julius Roehrs' Begonia Glorie de Lorraine and his new Turnford Hall were superb. Weinberg exhibited 350 varieties of cacti, a most creditable display. Robert Craig & Son's new mum, Baby, is a pretty novelty.

Fraser, Herrington and Duckham, of Madison, as usuual, captured much of the first prizes in mums, and deserved them. Your chrysanthemum expert has told you all about it.

The Hinode Co. showed a bank of Japanese plants, ranging from 1-inch pots to veterans several centuries of age. John Scott had a grand bank of Scottii and one of palms and decorative plants, especially some fine dracænas and Pandanus Veitchii. The F. R. Pierson Co. also had a grand bank of plants, palms, conifers, etc., as well as a fine exhibit of Piersoni elegantissima. Bobbink & Atkins had an immense assortment of conifers and evergreens of every size and description and W. H. Moon Co. showed a fine display of the same.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Son were here in person and their exhibit of hardy mums included over 200 varieties, all named, the whole contribution being the best ever shown in this country. Thos. Meehan & Sons and John May also had fine exhibits of pompons. The vegetable, fruit and grape exhibits were extensive and of the highest grade. Ellwanger & Barry, of Rochester, were much in evidence.

J. Austin Shaw.

Among the awards were: A silver medal to John Scott for Nephrolepis Scottii. A silver medal to F. R. Pierson Co. for improved Piersoni.

Diplomas to R. Vincent, Jr., & Son for collection hardy chrysanthemums and to DeVoy & Son for new geranium, Telegraph.

Certificates to Guttman & Weber for Carnation Victory, to Thos. Meehan & Sons for hardy mums, to J. N. May for Carnation Phyllis, to Geo. Van Qualen for seedling carnations, to J. E. Haines for carnation of that name and for Imperial, to Vaughan's Seed Store for Baby Rambler, to Robert Craig & Son for Chrysanthemum Baby, to J. Breitmeyer's Sons for Chrysanthemums Adelia and Majestic, to A. T. Boddington for bulbs.

WORLD'S FAIR FLOWER SHOW.

Inclement weather for three days caused the World's Fair Flower Show to fail of the great financial success, hopes of which the very large attendance on the first two days had raised in the management. The opening day saw almost 6,000 paid admissions, the second day over 7,000 paid admissions, but on Wednesday there came a downpour of rain which reduced the attendance to only 2,000, and the weather changing to very cold and raw, the record for the succeeding days was below that of the opening day, until Saturday, when there was the largest attendance of the week. The total comes very close to, if it does not wholly equal, the total of premium moneys and expenses, so that no one identified with the association feels other than satisfied with the result.

Chief Taylor expressed the pleasure of the exposition management at the drawing powers of the flower show, which he said were fully up to their most sanguine expectations and he felt had done much to bring the Department of Horticulture into the light in which it should stand before the public. He felt that the success of the show had done much to secure for horticulture the consideration which it should receive at the hands of any other body of men planning a great industrial exposition.

The visiting judges at the show, Messrs. Herrington and Duckham, expressed both surprise and gratification at the extent of the exhibition. Mr. Herrington said: "The extent of this show is something surprising. It is the greatest which it has been my pleasure to attend. We in the east stage specimen chrysanthemum blooms of higher perfection, but seldom in greater quantities and the display of roses is something which was never approached by a November exhibition in the east. It eclipses all eastern records, not only the number of entries but in the general quality of the exhibits. And the same thing might be said of carnations."

Mr. Duckham, the newly elected president of the Chrysanthemum Society, said: "The extent of this exhibition is beyond the very great expectations raised in me by the reputation for energetic action which has been earned by the gentlemen who conceived the idea of this show. The number of exhibits and the size of the exhibition hall are in perfect accord and the arrangement is one which reflects the greatest credit upon the manager. This is the most effective display of cut flowers which I have ever visited and I have nothing but praise for the roses and carnations."

Manager Hauswirth had his own troubles in providing for the arrangement of the great quantities of material. One of the pleasures of the exhibition, however, was the keeping qualities which all exhibits showed. Nearly everything was in a surprising state of freshness when the exhibition closed on Saturday night. Particularly noticeable was this in the class for 100 blooms of American Beauties. There were seven entries in the class where quality alone counted and four entries in the class where arrangement was considered. This made 1,100 Beauties staged at one time, probably the greatest number that was ever seen at any other exhibition, and all were fine. Some of the flowers came from as far away as Tarrytown and all but one vase remained in perfect condition throughout the week.

One of Mr. Hauswirth's difficulties was in securing vases for the staging of such a large amount of stock. It was necessary to purchase papier-mache pots for the smaller material and for the big vases 12-inch vitrified sewer tiles were used, with one end sealed with cement. It was a happy idea and solved a most perplexing problem in the most satisfactory manner. Nothing better could have been asked.

On Thursday the interest centered in the many good seedlings exhibited and the growers gained many good points. On Friday floral arrangements were shown and some first-class work staged. The awards announced subsequent to the publication of the Review last week were as follows:

Final Awards.

Thursday was seedling day. There were three contestants for the silver cup for the best new rose, the award going to Etna, exhibited by the E. G. Hill Co. This is the new red, a rival of Liberty. The same firm also exhibited Rosalind Orr English and the Minneapolis Floral Co.'s light pink was also shown. The above varieties were also judged for certificates, with Joseph Hill and Mildred Grant and Shellem's Seedling. Etna was the only variety scored to the requisite point.

There was a large showing of seedling chrysanthemums, including both American and imported varieties. The silver cup for the best variety not yet in commerce was awarded to Nathan Smith & Son for No. 42-2-02, a beautiful white flower, but it had not stood very long when it showed signs of a weak neck. The E. G. Hill Co. was given a certificate for a white seedling and for Souv. de Calvat Pere, exhibited in the class for "any other color."

The E. G. Hill Co. was also given certificates for Prefet Boncourt, white; Mlle. Anna Debono, cream white, and Mme. Emile Lemoine, pinkish white.

Fred Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, was given a certificate for No. 12, an incurved yellow which looks good.

There was a good showing of novelties for the silver cup for the best fifty blooms of a carnation not yet in commerce. The award went to Fiancee, as did a certificate in the class for light pink seedlings. In red Victory was certificated, scoring 86 points after having come from Long Island, N. Y. Bassett & Washburn exhibited a scarlet seedling, No. 10, which many thought highly of, but it scored only 83 points at the hands of the judges, being deficient in form. It is practically a scarlet Lawson.

There were four magnificent vases of 100 Beauties staged arranged for effect. The premiums aggregated $250 and were awarded to P. J. Hauswirth, F. C. Weber, W. L. Rock and Bassett & Washburn in the order named. The winning vase, while entered in the name of P. J. Hauswirth, was really the work of his son, Ed, and was his first attempt at competition. Peter Reinberg furnished the Beauties. Weber's flowers came from Poehlmann and Rock's from Joseph Heacock, Wyncote, Pa.

There were three fine vases in the class for 100 mums arranged for effect, F. C. Weber winning with White Bonnaffon from Poehlmann. W. J. & M. S. Vesey were second and W. L. Rock third. In the class for fifty blooms in not less than ten varieties W. J. & M. S. Vesey were second; no first.

On Friday floral arrangements were in order. Two baskets of roses were shown, F. C. Weber getting first with a basket filled with Poehlmann's Chatenay, rather too many flowers but otherwise very good. W. L. Rock was second with a basket of Sunrise.

W. L. Rock was first on basket of carnations, using a low basket with Poehlmann's highly colored Lawson and Sprengeri, a splendid effect. Fred H. Rowe, Joliet, Ill., was second with a high-handled basket of Fiancee.

F. H. Rowe was first, W. L. Rock second and F. C. Weber third for bride's bouquet, each using valley and Rock introducing some white orchids. Mr. Rowe's bunch was the only one with a shower. Bertermann Bros., of Indianapolis, sent a bride's bouquet which arrived too late; it quite likely would have made a difference in the awards.

H. N. Bruns was first and A. Jurgens second on valley. Both are Chicago growers.

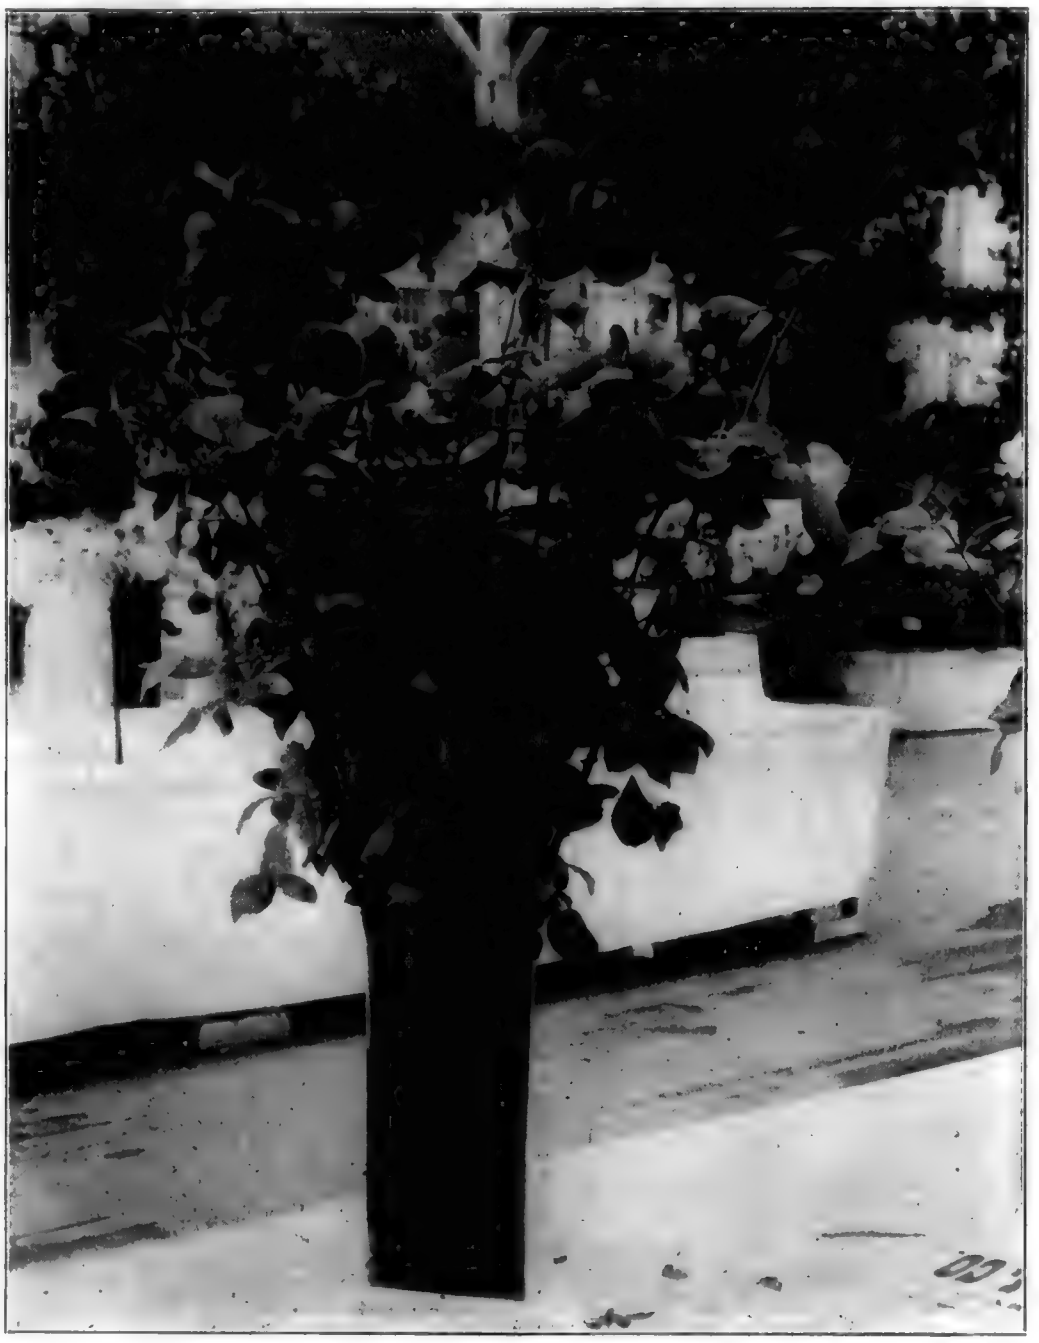
Eli Cross, Grand Rapids, put up a very fine large display of violets, including Marie Louise, Campbell, California and Swanley White, and was awarded first prize. Wm. Winter, of Kirkwood, was third; no second awarded.

W. L. Rock was second for vase of longiflorum lilies, Schray & Sons third; no first.

In class 69, fifty blooms yellow carnations, which had previously been overlooked, first was awarded to the Chicago Carnation Co., for Herrington's seedling.

J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, was highly commended for Pandanus Veitchii. He had a new white begonia, a sport from Lorraine, entered for a Shaw medal, over which the lady visitors and the judges disagreed. While the latter gave it no recognition the ladies paid it fully as much attention as the pink variety.

The Missouri Botanical Garden was highly commended for Rhapis flabeliformis.



P. Maurique was specially mentioned for collection of cacti and a special award of $25 was recommended for A. C. Grenier, for cacti.

A protest was filed in class 18, twenty-five blooms chrysanthemums in twenty-five varieties and the second and third premium collections, belonging to E. G. Hill Co. and Breitmeyer's Sons respectively, were disqualified, as they contained undisseminated varieties. This gave second to Nathan Smith & Son and third to W. J. & M. S. Vesey.

In class 19 a protest was filed and E. G. Hill Co. disqualified because their collection of twelve varieties contained seedlings. This advanced H. W. Buckbee to first. Smith & Son withdrew, as by error they had included two blooms of the same variety, and didn't want to be disqualified. W. A. Chalfant was thus advanced to second and W. J. & M. S. Vesey third.

In class 58, for 100 light pink carnations, a protest was made that the judges had disqualified Gibson Beauty as not belonging in that color. The executive committee sustained the protest and ordered rejudging, which did not change the awards.

The exhibits were all scored for World's Fair awards, L. R. Taft, the chairman of the department jury, assisting in the work. These awards cannot be announced until after confirmation by the World's Fair authorities.

Various Notes.

John Bertermann discovered that there were no cyclamens in the show and wired home for a dozen plants. They arrived on Friday and attracted no little attention.

E. T. Grave, Richmond, Ind., sent exhibits in several classes for 100 carnations. The boxes were in a wreck on the Vandalia and did not reach the exhibition hall in time for staging for competition. The quality of the blooms, however, won many compliments.

An exhibit which received little attention at the hands of trade visitors struck the greatest response from the public. It was the grafted chrysanthemum, which was the center of a wondering crowd all through the week. The St. Louis newspapers gave it space and several of them commented on it editorially. One paper remarked that "Governor-elect Folk visited the flower show yesterday and looked with equanimity upon this evidence of graft, the only time in history when he had been known to fail to raise his voice in protest."

It was a pleasure to many to see good old Viviand-Morel win out in the class for 100 pink mums over two good entries of William Duckham. Certainly the Veseys know how to grow that old standby.

John Breitmeyer's Sons thought they had their share of the honors in first for White Lawson and first on 100 white mums with Majestic, which is to be introduced next season, with Adelia, both of which varieties they purchased of H. W. Rieman, of Indianapolis.

A. J. Guttman came from New York to set up his carnation, Victory, in the seedling classes. It is a very fine scarlet in color and Mr. Guttman will see the benefit of his expedition westward in the orders which will result.

H. G. Selfridge, of Lake Geneva, Wis., came down to participate in the show, bringing his gardener, C. H. Gebhardt, and a fine collection of orchids. They were awarded first prize for their display of plants and special mention for some seedlings.

Bad counting and a failure to label some of the exhibits cost several exhibitors a chance at the big premiums. In the class for 100 Beauties there were seven entries but two were short count.

Of the St. Louis boys Messrs. Koenig and Meinhardt deserve special mention for the way they stuck by the job from beginning to end.

Nearly all the exhibits were sold to St. Louis florists, Messrs. Weber and Ostertag being large purchasers of plants.

THE PHILADELPHIA SHOW.

The specimen chrysanthemum plants and those in the larger-sized pots included many old and some new varieties of merit. Among the best were Merza, white, very fine; Wm. Duckham, lavender, which seems a good, all-around sort, though a trifle soft for cut flowers, and Major Bonnaffon, yellow, a very fine specimen. In groups A. J. Balfour was very well done. Mutual Friend, white, Peter Kay, yellow, and Geo. W. Childs, red, are seemingly still the best of their color, though S. T. Wright, red, reflexed orange, is a finer flower and makes a very showy plant. In the classes for plants in 6-inch pots grown to single stems Merza, Nellie Pockett and Neville showed great size and substance. Minerva, Yellow Eaton, Col. Appleton and Gold Mine were also good. John McCleary won first with Cheltoni, lemon yellow; Dr. Enguehard, pink; S. T. Wright, classed as red, and Wm. Duckham. Besides the prize winning group of F. Ibbotson mentioned last week, other noteworthy cut blooms were Eaton, white and yellow, Col. Appleton, Viviand-Morel, an old favorite, and Brutus, terra cotta, a very large flower with splendid foliage. This variety was also very effective grown to single stem. Brighthurst, a seedling of pleasing pink color, was shown for the first time. There were two plants of Marion Henderson, one with eighty-six, the other with eighty-nine blooms, trained to resemble an oval plateau. Other well-grown cut blooms were Nellie Pockett, Bigelow, Lord Salisbury, Rustique, Mlle. Liger, Yellow Eaton, La Fusion, Mrs. E. Thirkell, Lucy Evans, Queen Alexandria, J. Falconer and M. Inglis.

The geraniums considered worthy of a place at the head of the main stairway were Mary Beston, white; Andrew Lang, red; Mrs. Chas. Nolan, salmon; Alphonse Ricard, red; Mark Twain, Gertrude Pierson, pink; Marquis De Castellane, salmon, and Cyclops, deep color white eye.

The decorative plants were a very important feature of the display. The F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, captured the society's gold medal for their improved Piersoni, a very fine thing. Thos. Long maintained his reputation as a skillful fern grower with many fine specimens. John Thatcher showed some splendid decorative plants, including many rare specimens. The Henry A. Dreer group on the stage also contained, besides well-grown commercial plants, many novelties and species not often seen outside the largest private collections. To name all these would be superfluous. The specimen dracænas were, however, worthy of special note.

Cattleya Labiata Shown at Philadelphia by Julius Roehrs.

The Wm. Graham Co. exhibited a new trailing chrysanthemum with yellow flowers of pompon size, with good foliage, brought from their place at Olney, quite a curiosity which may be very useful in decorative work. Jno. N. May, Thos. Meehan & Sons and H. A. Dreer showed good collections of pompons.

The rose exhibit brought out strong competition in the Beauty class. Geo. Burton was easily first with twenty-five splendid blooms. Leo Niessen was greatly pleased with this success. "I think," he remarked to Phil, who stood near at hand, "that will look very well on the front page of the Review." The Liberties from Edw. Towill were excellent, while the Kaiserins from F. & H. Mergenthaler showed high culture, as did their Brides and Maids. Two new claimants for popular favor were Wellesley, a soft pink from the Waban Conservatories, Natick, Mass., and Thos. Field, a La France-like pink from Geo. Field, of Washington, D. C. A pretty plant of the new Baby Rambler attracted much attention.

The feature of the carnation display was the new bright red seedling Robt. Craig, from the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., which captured the Craig cup for the best variety not yet disseminated. Fiancee, from the Chicago Carnation Co., attracted favorable comment. Cardinal, from the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., was too late to be judged. It is a handsome flower, color as implied by its name, an improved Estelle. The carnation exhibit as a whole was unusually fine for this season of the year, the quality of bloom and length of stem nearly equaling the February standard.

The attendance was excellent throughout, including many visitors from out of town. The arrangements reflect great credit on Mr. Rust and his assistants. The judging was conscientiously and carefully done.

The Awards.

The following were the awards on chrysanthemum plants:

J. F. Sinnott, Gordon Smirl gardener, was first on six plants in six varieties, on two plants in two varieties, on specimen plant new variety, on specimen plants white and yellow, on four plants Japanese, in four varieties, on three plants, pink, in three varieties, on plant of Mrs. F. FORT SMITH, ARK.

This year's flower show was an unqualified success, the hospital under the auspices of which it was conducted clearing nearly $600. There were a large number of exhibits from out of town growers which were of exceptional quality and did much toward making the show a success.

The awards for twenty cut chrysanthe-

and a fine collection of orchids. They were awarded first prize for their display of plants and special mention for some seedlings.

Bad counting and a failure to label some of the exhibits cost several exhibitors a chance at the big premiums. In the class for 100 Beauties there were seven entries but two were short count.

Welsh Young second on six blooms Beauty. P. A. B. Widener second on three vases tea roses. Mrs. H. B. Jacobs, G. Morrison gardener, second on twelve Beauty.

The following were the awards on carnations: Cottage Gardens Co. first on fifty blooms of any variety not disseminated, on six vases in six varieties, silver cup for twenty five blooms best American seedling never disseminated. P. A. B. Widener first on twenty-five pink any named variety, on four vases of twelve each. C. H. Kuhn, Daniel Neely gardener, first on Enchantress, second on pink any named variety. J. Cheston, Jr., J. Fertsch gardener, first on twelve blooms each of Nelson Fisher and Mrs. M. A. Patten. J. N. May second on fifty blooms any variety not disseminated. Strafford Flower Farm second on six vases in six named varieties. C. B. Newbold second on four vases twelve each. J. W. Paul, Jr., second on Enchantress, on Nelson Fisher and Mrs. M. A. Patten.

Following are the awards on violets: R. N. Eisenhart first on Princess of Wales and Luxonne, second on Lady Campbell. T. H. Norton first on Campbell. J. Gillmet first on "any other variety," second on Princess of Wales and on Luxonne. W. Lippincott first on 100 cut blooms, pansies. E. L. Welsh second on "any other variety."

The awards for floral arrangements were: H. S. Hopper first on plateau of ferns and foliage. Geo. Faulkner first on plateau of chrysanthemums, second on basket of flowers. Wm. H. Rieder & Bro. first on basket of flowers, second on plateau of chrysanthemums.

Special prizes were awarded as follows: Silver medals to Edward A. Schmidt for best foliage plant, to George W. Childs Drexel for best fern, to Joseph F. Sinnott for best chrysanthemum plant, to C. B. Newbold for best palm, to John Wanamaker for group of ornamental foliage plants, to H. A. Dreer for collection of rare palms, to Louis Burk for collection of orchids, to Mrs. Robert H. Foerderer for two Pandanus Baptistii.

Special prizes to William Graham Co. for decoration in center of hall, to H. S. Hopper for specimen Boston fern, to Lager & Hurrell for specimen orchid plant, to H. S. Hopper for specimen palm, to C. B. Newbold for specimen fern, to Pennsylvania Hospital for cut chrysanthemums.

Certificates of merit for fine collection new varieties of chrysanthemums exhibited by E. G. Hill Co. for new Rose Wellesley exhibited by Waban Rose Conservatories for Carnation Red Lawson exhibited by W. J. Palmer & Son, for new Rose Tom Field exhibited by George Field.

Honorable mention for Carnation Fred Burki exhibited by John Murchie, for vase of well grown Lilium longiflorum exhibited by J. Kochler & Sons, for pink seedling carnation and vase of seedlings exhibited by John I. Haines, for pink sport from Violet Lady Hume Campbell exhibited by T. H. Norton, for fine collection of pompon chrysanthemums exhibited by Henry A. Dreer, Thomas Meehan & Sons and Henry F. Michell Co. for standard chrysanthemums exhibited by H. B. Rosengarten, for standard chrysanthemums exhibited by Gabriel Blum.

Gold medal to P. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y. for Nephrolepis Pierson elegantissima.

FORT SMITH, ARK.

This year's flower show was an unqualified success, the hospital under the auspices of which it was conducted clearing nearly $600. There were a large number of exhibits from out of town growers which were of exceptional quality and did much toward making the show a success.

The awards for twenty cut chrysanthomum blooms were as follows: Yellow, Pantet & Co., first with Calvat's Sun; J. H. Krone, Jr., second with Appleton; for pink, Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., first, Pantet & Co. second, each with Duckham; white, Pantet & Co. first with Silver Wedding, James Morton, Clarksville, Tenn., second with Eaton; bronze, James Morton first, Pantet & Co. second; for fifteen blooms, "any other color," Pantet & Co. first with Mrs. Rogers and second with Waldeck Rosseau. They were also first for anemone varieties.

James Morton had the best standard and the second best single stems. Pantet & Co., the best bush plants. J. H. Krone, Jr., also had a good exhibit of single stems.

Priece, D. J. Herrigan, gardener, took first and second with A. J. Balfour and Viviand-Morel. William Swan captured first for white with Eaton, J. M. Masury taking second for same variety. Shrimpton was the winner for reds, M. W. Pierce and W. B. Walker, Thomas Jack, gardener, being the exhibitors. The society's silver medal for the best display of cut blooms went to William Swan. The silver cup for the best twelve plants in not exceeding 10-inch pots was captured by J. N. Black, Axel Magnuson, gardener.

Mrs. H. L. Higginson, J. Clark, gardener, had the best Campbell violets, S. V. R. Crosby taking second. The Misses Loring, Cornelius Murray, gardener, led with Marie Louise and C. D.

D F. Roy's Plant of Chrysanthemum Garza, 800 Flowers.

The largest bloom in the show was Mrs. Thirkell, exhibited by Pantet & Co., beating Morton's Timothy Eaton. For twenty-five blooms of any colors Vaughan's Seed Store was first, Smith & Son second, James Morton third.

For American Beauty roses James Morton was first, C. C. Pollworth Co. second.

J. H. Krone, Jr., was first for collection of ferns, Pantet & Co. for palms, begonias and potted plants.

The carnation exhibits included two very fine lots from Joliet, Ill. The Chicago Carnation Co. sent a splendid vase of Fiancee and the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. sent seven varieties, of which Gibson Beauty attracted most attention, but Lady Bountiful was highly thought of by all trade visitors.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

The enterprising gardeners of the North Shore Horticultural Society held their annual chrysanthemum show in the Town Hall on November 10. The exhibition was admitted to be far the best the society has yet held and the quality of the exhibits was excellent throughout. It will soon be necessary for the members to seek more commodious quarters if the number of exhibits continues to increase.

The prizes in the plant classes were divided between Miss A. G. Thayer, J. McGregor, gardener; Mrs. R. C. Hooper, Wm. Swan, gardener, and J. M. Masury, Thomas Waldic, gardener. For vase of yellow chrysanthemums on long stems William Swan won with fine Appletons, J. M. Masury being second with the same variety. For pink M. W. Sias, J. Pater, gardener, for Princess of Wales. Mrs. H. L. Higginson was in the lead for collection of violets. C. D. Sias had the best Bride and Bridesmaids roses and was second for "any other variety" with Golden Gate, William Swan being first with fine American Beauty.

C. D. Sias was first for Lawson and Enchantress carnations and second for white and "any other variety." J. N. Black led for white with excellent Governor Wolcott and for a vase of mixed varieties and M. W. Pierce had the winning collection of carnations.

Miss A. G. Thayer received a certificate of merit for a fine table of cut blooms and W. B. Walker, Thos. Jack, gardener, a similar award for group of foliage and flowering plants.

For twenty-five specimens palms, foliage and flowering plants arranged for effect, William Swan won with a fine assortment which included some fine seasonable orchids. J. N. Black had the best specimen fern and a special prize offered for best specimen plant went to H. L. Higginson, J. M. Masury being second. Fred Jackson had the finest collection of winter vegetables. The exhibition was well attended, many of the prominent North Shore residents being among those present. W. N. Craig.

ORANGE, N. J.

The tenth fall exhibition of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held November 4. It was greatly regretted by the throng which filled the rooms from six until nearly eleven that the display had not had the larger hall which its merit justified and that the afternoon had not been used. Several of the patrons of this one promised to help provide better accommodations another year. The number of entries of flowers necessitated the display of vegetables and fruits being placed in a room by itself and the wide field from which the exhibits were gathered showed the growing influence of the society.

Pre-eminently a chrysanthemum show, the blooms and plants were of the highest order, yet the display of orchids almost eclipsed the autumn queen. The very fine exhibit of Henry Graves occupied an entire table. That from William Barr also occupied the greater part of another table, the two being separated by a stand bearing the large vase of carnations from the Colgates which received a first prize. John Crosby Brown's exhibit of trained and standard chrysanthemums rose from a mass of single stems in 6-inch pots remarkable for their uniformity. Some of these had captured six prizes at Madison only a few days before. These masses of color were relieved by the magnificent specimen plants of William Runkle.

The exhibit of orchids from Lager & Hurrell was particularly interesting, comprising plants amounting to over $1,000 in value.

Other trade exhibitors were John E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., who sent a good new red carnation named for himself and a fancy, Imperial; Swan Peterson, Gibson City, Ill., who sent two carnations, Gibson Beauty and White Swan; John N. May, who sent a collection of pompons, and Hale's Flower Store, Orange, which exhibited Maud Dean and White Maud Dean chrysanthemums. Each was given an award.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

The proceedings of the second annual meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, at Herald Square exhibition hall, New York, November 13, 1903, have been received. It is a pamphlet of 136 pages, containing also the Elmer D. Smith list of varieties of chrysanthemums. After the name of the variety is given first the name of the disseminator, then the name of the originator and the year in which disseminated. Mr. Smith states that he is certain that several of the many varieties have been omitted and a request is made to forward data as to these to Secretary Fred H. Lemon, Richmond, Ind., that the record may be made complete, but from an inspection of the list it would appear that Mr. Smith has covered the ground in a very comprehensive manner.

Work of Committees.

At New York, November 5, Bride exhibited by Lakeview Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y., color white, Japanese incurved, scored 69 points.

At Philadelphia November 8, No. 4 exhibited by Henry G. Standen, Haverford, Pa., color white, Japanese incurved, scored commercial scale 85, exhibition scale 78 points.

At New York November 11, a variety (name to be given later) exhibited by Howard Nichol, Yonkers, N. Y., color dark mahogany, gold reverse, Japanese, scored exhibition scale 89 points.

At St. Louis World's Fair Flower Show November 11, the following scores were made:

Souv. de la Ctess Reille exhibited by The E. G. Hill Co., color silvery pink, type of Morel, scored exhibition scale 83 points.

Souv. de Calvat Pere exhibited by The E. G. Hill Co., color white, shaded lemon and pink, incurved, scored commercial scale 83, exhibition scale 87.

No. 42-2-02 exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., color white, incurved, scored commercial scale 88 points.

No. 12 exhibited by Fred Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., color yellow, incurved, type of Dailledouze, scored commercial scale 86 points.

Mme. Emile Lemoine exhibited by The E. G. Hill Co., color pinkish white, type of Chadwick, scored commercial scale 87 points; exhibition scale 89 points.

Mlle. Anna Debono exhibited by The E. G. Hill Co., color creamy white, type of Morel, scored commercial scale 89, exhibition scale 90 points.

Prefet Boncourt exhibited by The E. G. Hill Co., color cream white, reflexed, scored commercial scale 88, exhibition scale 87 points.

At Cincinnati, O., November 12, Adelia, exhibited by John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, Mich., color white, Japanese incurved, scored commercial scale, 89 points. Majestic, exhibited by John Breitmeyer's Sons, color pure white, Japanese incurved and reflexed, scored 90 points commercial scale. Souv. de Calvat Pere, exhibited by The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., color white cream and blush pink (undecided white), Japanese incurved, scored exhibition scale 91 points. No. 37, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., color magenta pink, reflexed Japanese, scored exhibition scale 85 points. Mlle. Anna Debono, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., color white, Japanese reflexed, scored exhibition scale 85 points.

Preparations for Propagating.

As December approaches we should, in order to obtain success, begin preparations for the propagating season. To obtain stock from varieties which are new or scarce we should take cuttings just as early as we can get them, so as to increase our stock without punishing the plants too severely, and this can be done by having part of the propagating bench in readiness to receive cuttings as they mature. By having the bench ready, I mean having the house thoroughly clean from the ground to the roof, the benches in good order, pipes tested and ventilators adjusted.

Whatever material is to be used as a propagating medium should now be secured and stored, so that when required it may be handy. Pit, river or lake sand which contains no decomposing element is a safe and sure medium and can be used by the most inexperienced with good results, so long as it remains clean and fresh. I am frequently asked if it is safe to use the sand for a second batch of cuttings and if there is not danger from bench fungus arising from such a practice? This depends a good deal on the quality of the sand, the condition of the house and the temperature at which the house has been run during the rooting of the first batch.

I have frequently, for lack of material, been forced to use the same sand for three successive crops and have had to record no failures which could be attributed to this fact, while with some mediums which looked equally promising there was failure on the first trial.

With a sand which will give off no mud in washing there is little danger of having fungus with a first crop and if the house is run at a temperature of 50 degrees, with the temperature of the sand 12 degrees higher, with the requisite amount of ventilation necessary to keep the air sweet, there is no danger in running a second or even a third crop. Of course a good deal depends on whether the drainage is perfect, but if this is not as it ought to be there will be more or less of a failure with the first crop and the sand will be ruined for use for a next crop.

As the only use of sand or other mediums is to retain sufficient moisture to nourish the cutting until root formation has taken place and that only in such quantities as the size of the cutting demands, any other medium, such as charcoal, marble dust or the screenings of coke, which possess no poisonous or decomposing matter, are safe if they possess the quality of retaining the moisture for a sufficient length of time without becoming sour.

Cleanliness in the propagating house, both in regard to the house itself and in regard to ventilation are absolutely necessary, as many of the ills which in after life afflict the rose are acquired in the cutting bench, either through a poor material being used as a medium or ignorance of the laws of watering and ventilating.

That nothing may be wanting in the propagating house the question of shading should be attended to before the season begins. In far too many places the old method of shading with newspapers is still in vogue. This, at best, is but a poor makeshift, troublesome and uncertain, as the slightest puff of wind is apt to disarrange the papers and bring all of our efforts to naught, while at the same time the very fact that they encourage condensation and prevent a free circulation of air shows us that this is not conducive to the health of the cutting or to quick root formation.

Shading, to be effective, should be removed sufficiently far from the surface of the bench that the air can circulate freely and should be so arranged that it can be removed as soon as the sun ceases to shine on the bench, as cuttings which are rooted in a continual shade are always more weakly than those which are shaded only to protect them from suffering from too intense sunshine.

Any style of house or aspect is suitable for propagating purposes, so long as the interior arrangements of shading, conserving the heat under the benches and ventilation apparatus is perfect. The rest depends on the quality of wood used, the care exercised in making, inserting and in the general after treatment, in fact on "the man behind the gun."

As the propagating season advances I will endeavor to give a few hints weekly and will try to describe the latest methods of this act which will also include the newest and most successful methods of propagating by grafting.

MARKING PLANTS FOR STOCK.

The grower of violets, like the grower of any other plants, always has to be looking ahead and planning for the next season, and in doing so it is, in our opinion, always best to plan for the maximum, rather than the medium or minimum quantity of plants desired. Especially does this apply to stock plants of all kinds for filling the houses. It is much better to have a large quantity to choose from and much better to have a surplus to sell than to run short and to have to purchase, even if the stock you buy is equal to your own. But our experience is that boughten stock is never up to the quality of our own; in fact, we find it the rule, with very few exceptions, that we always have to breed up and acclimate, as you might say, all kinds of stock that we buy and sometimes it takes two or three years to get it up to an acceptable standard. Therefore, as I started out to say, it is time to estimate how many plants you will need next year, and at once commence to mark the best plants of those that you expect to take stock from; otherwise when you are ready to take cuttings you will not know which are the plants that have proven the best all the season and up to that time. Later on nearly all the plants will begin to feel the influence of the coming spring and will put on a growth that looks nice and proves deceiving as to their real worth as workers at a time when you want them to work most.

In marking your "pedigree" stock from now on, select the plants that in every way are the best, with plenty of large, strong foliage and that show the largest crop of flowers for the holidays, also taking into consideration the quality as well as quantity of the blooms, full big flowers and fragrant. Have a bunch of labels handy, near the door of each house, so that every time you go through the house you can mark the good plants. If you do not follow some such method, the days are likely to slip by until it gets too late to tell which are really the best plants.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Keeping Qualities.

Whether a retailer or wholesaler of his product, the reputation of turning out bloom of good keeping qualities is a valuable asset to any grower. While it is true that all does not rest with the grower, it lies with him to form the foundation of a lasting bloom. If all efforts are made to accomplish this result there need be no fear of slow sale or low prices, and should any complaint arise the true cause of trouble is easily traced.

Assuming that you are following up-to-date cultural methods and the plants are responding with a yield of prime blooms in goodly numbers, it must not be thought that care and vigilance end here.

It is as much to place the blooms on the market as it is to grow them. One must harvest the crop properly and handle it intelligently in order to preserve the enduring qualities.

Do not let the bloom fully develop on the plant. Cut when about three-quarters out, when you will not only further the end in view but reduce the drain on the plant. Always use a sharp knife and make a smooth, slightly slanting cut. It is preferable to perform the work early in the morning, before the sun has exerted any influence on the plants.

Have vases filled with fresh water before starting in and when fifty or less are cut plunge the stems immediately in water. This is important, since if kept exposed to the air very long after being severed from the plant the exuding sap becomes dry, searing over the cut and preventing the free passage of water into the stem.

Some growers cut each grade separately; others gather all qualities together, grading afterwards. With the former method there is no need of delay in getting into water; neither is there with the latter, but I am aware of the custom of grading before putting into vases and would caution against this needless delay.

Never use scissors to clip the stems; this mangles the tissues and reduces the capacity of the stems to draw water.

Have the water in the vases about the temperature of the houses in which the blooms are grown.

When graded remove to a place free from draughts but not close or stuffy. The temperature here should be about 45 degrees.

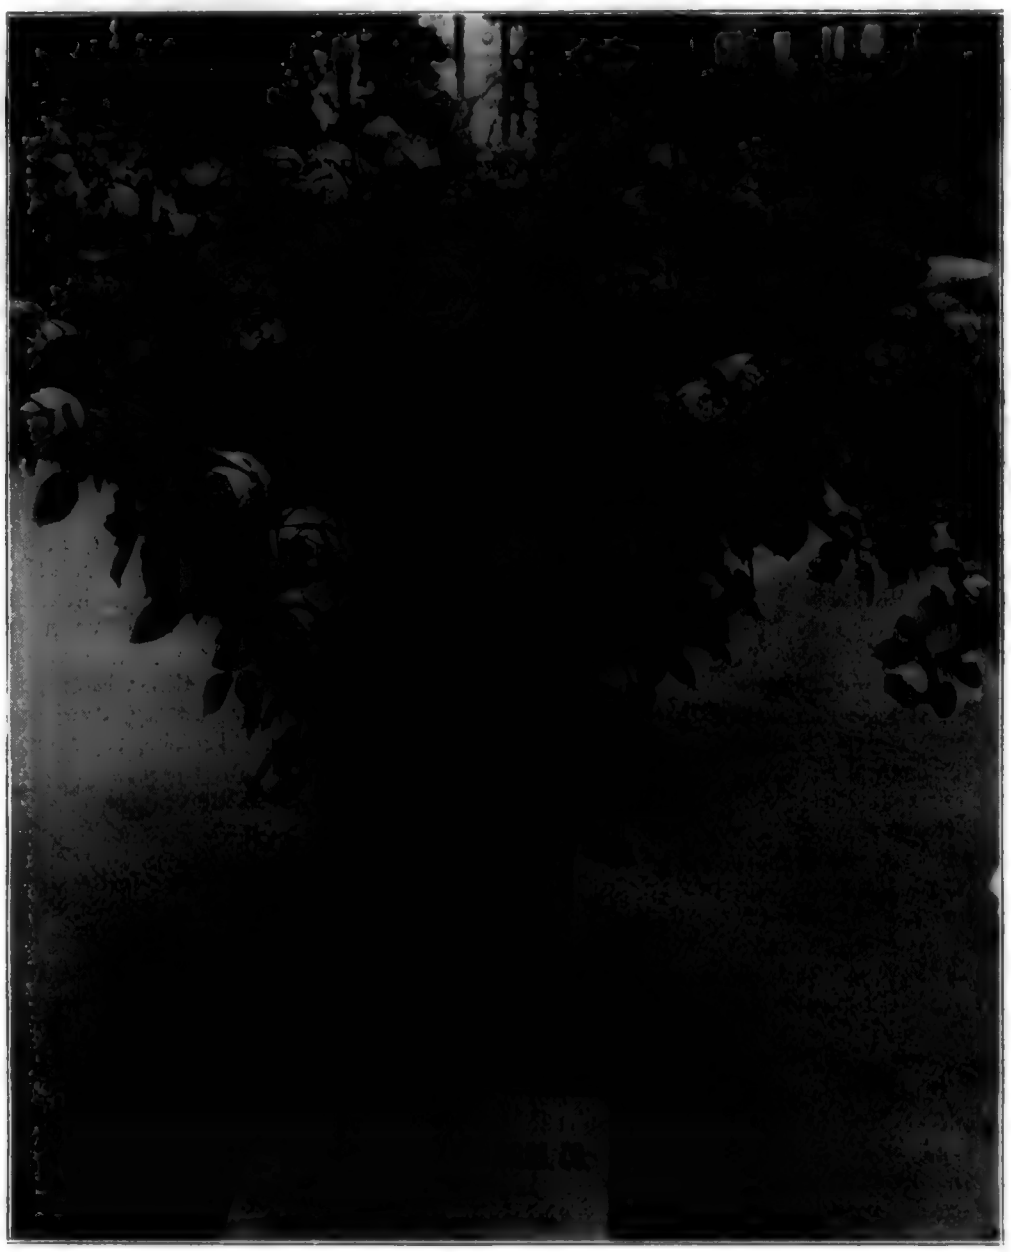
Remember these blooms will continue to develop, so do not crowd too many in a vase.

Flowers after being twelve hours in the cooling room will be in excellent condition to pack for shipment or to sell over the counter. Many small details will suggest themselves, such as maintaining a pure atmosphere and absolute cleanliness in all operations. Attention to these minor points will result in producing "the smile that won't come off," at least for a while.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

PROPAGATING NEW SORTS.

Last spring we bought a few of some of the new sorts for trial but our summer was so hot that they did not do well. However, we got a few plants to bench. It always takes one or two years to get plants from the north acclimated here in the south. We want to grow as much of these new ones as we can from these plants. Will it do to keep them from blooming and make them furnish cuttings? I mean will it have any effect on the blooming qualities for next season? You understand we do not want to mismanage and then throw anything aside which is really a good carnation. Any information to secure as many cuttings as possible without injury to next year's crop will be appreciated.



TEXAS.

There is no danger of impairing the blooming qualities if you are careful in selecting your cuttings and if you do not cut the plants down too hard each time you take cuttings. The blooming qualities will be impaired only just so much as the plant's vitality is impaired. You should bear in mind that in most cases when a variety makes a good record at the shows the demand for the cuttings is so great that the disseminator is hard pushed to make enough cuttings to fill his orders and seldom is his stock of the variety large enough to supply as many strong selected cuttings as he needs as early as we demand them. Consequently many a grand variety is sadly weakened before it leaves the disseminator's place and it would be ruinous to subject it to a second siege of overpropagating. However, if your plants are vigorous and in good health you need not hesitate to make all the good strong cuttings you can.

While it is a little early yet to fully make up your minds as to how many plants you want to bench of each one of the new ones next year, there may be some few which have struck your fancy and you will want all you can get, providing they do not develop some fault later in the season. I would not cut down all the plants for propagating this early, but leave at least a few plants to keep on blooming to see how it will behave throughout the season. You may possibly change your mind about some of them before spring, and think how sorry you would be next season with perhaps a whole bench or a houseful of a variety you would not have wanted at all if you had seen more of it while you had the chance. A dozen plants will give you a fair idea although of course a larger batch would be better.

Let each shoot on the plants show a bud before you cut it down to where the breaks will be strong. This will not give the plant any more check than cutting the blooms would and it will also prevent too many cuttings from being large enough to take off at one time, thus always leaving a quantity of growth on the plants while propagating. By going over the plants once in two weeks and taking off only the strong cuttings you will not rob them of too much growth and the plants will not be weakened. Whatever you do, don't take a lot of small, weak cuttings, as there is no surer way of weakening a variety than that. These small cuttings will grow into strong ones in a couple of weeks if left on the plants and the plants will be better off, too, by having them left on. If this method could always be adhered to by disseminators there would be less complaint about weak and soft cuttings, etc. Most of them begin propagating along that line, but usually long before the propagating season is half over the buyers begin to write for their cuttings at once, without delay, etc., until the poor disseminator is driven to taking every cutting in sight, and then trouble begins.

RINGS THEM UP.

In the office at the greenhouses of J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia., there is a bell of about the size used on trolley cars, and it is connected with the telephone. As a result the foreman can hear the telephone call even if he happens to be in a distant range of houses. The big bell can be rung independently of the telephone and a card under it announces that one ring calls the foreman, two rings brings Mr. Wilcox, three rings calls a certain employe and four rings still another.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—H. L. Patthey, of Murtfeldt & Patthey, promoter and manager of the Minneapolis Journal's sweet pea show of 1903 and that paper's mid-season flower show of Aug. 10, 11 and 12, 1904, was in Chicago this week attending the flower show.

ADAMS, MASS.—Robert Groves is preparing for his annual trip to New York with a big lot of Christmas trees. He reports a heavy demand for ferns.

HORTICULTURAL COUNCIL.

Pursuant to a call sent out by Chief F. W. Taylor, of the Department of Horticulture, some thirty gentlemen met at that gentleman's office at the St. Louis World's Fair on Thursday afternoon, November 10, for the purpose of considering what may be done for the advancement of horticulture, employing that term in its most comprehensive meaning. The meeting was opened by Chief Taylor with a statement of the need of an organization which should be recognized as having authority to speak for all branches of horticulture and which should be so alive to the interests of horticulture that it would come forward whenever any of those interests could be furthered. He outlined what good organization and energetic action had done for other industries at the World's Fair and expressed the opinion that, had horticulture spoken in time, equal results might have been accomplished. He pointed to the success of the World's Fair Flower Show and the presence of representative men engaged in many branches of horticulture as making the time propitious for action. He spoke of the many separate societies and the tendency to division, each to care for the needs in its own particular field, as inadequate to the needs on great occasions and urged unification. He introduced Prof. Wm. Trelease, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, to preside. Prof. L. R. Taft was appointed secretary.

Prof. Trelease said that he was in full sympathy with the project on foot but would confine his efforts to drawing the thoughts of others rather than expressing his own. Papers had been received from several gentlemen, setting forth their ideas of the direction in which lie the interests of horticulture. Those of Luther Burbank, Wm. Falconer, Wilhelm Miller and G. C. Watson were read. These led up to the question of ways and means, the discussion being participated in by F. R. Pierson, H. C. Irish, J. C. Vaughan, H. G. Selfridge, Philip Breitmeyer and others. On motion the chairman was instructed to appoint a committee of seven with power to prepare a plan for the organization of a National Council of Horticulture and call a meeting for permanent organization to which all horticultural bodies shall be invited to send delegates. The committee will be announced after the acceptances of the appointees have been received.

A few minutes after the adjournment of the St. Louis meeting a paper was received from Prof. C. S. Sargent, of Arnold Arboretum, setting forth his thoughts on the subject of national horticulture.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The market conditions have perceptibly improved, with prospects of further improvement before the week ends. The mid-season varieties of chrysanthemums are practically over and from now on there is certain to be a good demand for all nice blooms. The foot ball games last Saturday caused a lively rush for yellow chrysanthemums, violets and red roses. Our Dear Friend proved a winner on this occasion. The wintry weather with which the week opened curtailed the production of roses and carnations. Prices are firmer, but there is little probability of an advance before next week, except perhaps on fancy stock.

Bowling.

A match of five games was played at the terminal alleys last week between three-men teams representing Samuel S. Pennock, and J. J. Habermehl's Sons. The former team consisted of C. J. Watson, R. G. Sheigley and Charles Gray, the latter of John Wilson, James Haley and John Nesbit. The wholesale team was victorious, winning four games out of five. A return match is planned for Thursday of this week, to be played on alleys up-town.

Germantown Horticultural Society.

The November meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society was fairly well attended and proved very interesting. Robert Kift read an interesting paper on "Horticultural Societies and Their Mission" which was heartily applauded. S. M. Meehan gave a talk on "Hazelnut Culture" which brought out a debate. A general discussion followed. There was a very pretty exhibition of chrysanthemums. In the regular classes John F. Gibson took the blue ribbons and Albert Woltemate in red.

Various Notes.

M. Rice & Co. have just purchased a property at 1220 Race street, where they will erect a modern fireproof six-story building for their florists' supply business. The building will contain nearly 12,000 square feet of space and is expected to be ready by July 1, 1905.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons expect to open their new store in the Bellevue-Stratford as the REVIEW goes to press this week.

Joseph G. Champion, of New Haven, was in town a few days ago looking up violets for the Yale-Harvard foot ball game this Saturday.

Charles E. Smith, of York, Pa., was a visitor at the show last week.

Wm. J. Muth, of the Cut Flower Co., noticed that business improved on the day after election. This improvement has continued since.

J. A. Smith, of the H. F. Michell Co., reports that their spiræa and valley arrived in good shape. Philip Freud was much complimented on his arrangement of the mushroom exhibit of the Henry F. Michell Co. at the show. The mirrors at each side made the bed appear like an unending field.

Paul Bender, who was assisting Secretary Rust last week, started work on Monday for D. E. Gorman, of Williamsport, Pa., as foreman.

S. S. Pennock is the fortunate distributor of the fancy Liberties grown by Edward Towill.

The William H. Moon Co.'s group of conifers was much admired at the show.

J. Wm. Colflesh, who was one of the judges on plants at the show, is expected to address the December meeting of the Florists' Club on "Blooming Plants for the Holidays."

The Chester Hill Horticultural Society held its fall show on Tuesday and Wednesday in the society's hall.

William J. Baker is getting Romans and Paper Whites.

In the note "There is Room at the Top" last week the words, Harry Fenn, crimson, were omitted. It is this variety that is considered by Mr. Stroud as his most prolific sort.

The Hightstown violet grower is Tracy H. Norton, not Percy Norton, as printed last week. The quotation he made should be: The warm weather is responsible for the warm weather. PHIL.

KANSAS CITY.

Various Jottings.

Trade has been fine the past week, a few weddings, plenty of dinners, card parties and receptions. Mums are the ruling flower just now, with a good demand. Prices are fair, ranging from $1.50 to $4 per dozen, poor demand for carnations and roses.

One of the features of the week was the opening reception of the Progress Club. The decorations were mums, palms and southern smilax furnished and arranged by the W. H. Humfeld Floral Co.

A. F. Barbe has added quite an improvement to his range near Elmwood cemetery, with a fine office and greenhouse. He is up-to-date in everything.

Several new stores have been opened in Kansas City in the past few weeks, but as yet they do not seem to have any effect with the growers.

W. H. Humfeld has just completed two carnation houses and one for coleus on his home place at Tenth and Highland.

Arthur Thornhill is contemplating moving his greenhouses from Rosedale to Westport.

One thing I would like to see and that is all the florists in Kansas City better friends with one another. Boys, we of the busiest and best city in the west can't afford to lock horns. Let us revive our club and get into the S. A. F.

Ed Ellsworth, manager for Kellogg, on Grand avenue, reports a good trade. He is a hustler and is stocking his store with everything pertaining to the profession, up-to-date in every particular.

W. L. Rock, of our city, took first prize at the Fair on table decorations.

Nelson Jarrett, out on the rock road, stays close to home these cold nights, but in spring when the birds begin to sing Nelson will emerge and then the market will boom.

Will Bridgeland, foreman for R. S. Brown, claims he has the finest Eatons in the state and reports good business in all lines.

A. Blankenfeld, whose place is in Westport, is busy stowing away cannas, of which he makes a specialty. In addition he is going into the chicken business and is raising Black Leghorns for the retail market. NARCISSUS.

WINONA, MINN.—The Winona Floral Co. hired a hall and gave a flower show November 10 to 12. They charged a small admission fee and did right well. These young men are hustlers.

PITTSBURG, PA.—Among the parties exhibiting mums at the last club meeting were the Valley Greenhouse Co. They are located at Sewickley and have been turning out very good stock all fall.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Seasonable cool weather arrived at the close of last week and has had a considerable effect in reducing receipts, which have been further cut down by the practice which many growers refuse to abandon of storing up stock for a holiday. The result is that this week has found the market but scantily supplied. With demand fairly active it has become somewhat difficult to supply all requirements and prices are on the upward grade. It is likely that the end of the week will see the full Thanksgiving list in force and the growers will be serving their own best interests if they let the stock come along then, instead of holding it until after the shipping demand for Thanksgiving has ceased. This promises to be very heavy but it will come practically to an end on November 22.

There is every prospect of good supplies in all lines for the Thanksgiving business. Some of the mid-season varieties of chrysanthemums will be cut out, but the good late sorts will be abundant and of very fine quality. There can be no question but that the stock in general, including chrysanthemums, roses and carnations, will be of better quality than usual for Thanksgiving. Chicago made the show at St. Louis last week, where the uniform high quality of the exhibits was generally commented upon. Chicago is making a show for herself this week and next week the local growers will devote their energies to making a show for their customers on Thanksgiving orders.

The Beauty crops are running largely to long-stemmed stock and quality is superb. Tea roses are not as abundant as they were, but average quality is better than at any time so far this season. Carnations are already up to the best mid-winter standard and from all indications this market is to have a superior quality of this flower all through the season. Every grower reports the plants looking better than ever before at this date.

The receipts of violets have shortened in keeping with the decrease in other lines. Good singles were sold at $1 per hundred early this week and good New York doubles at $1.50, which are the prices quoted in the advance Thanksgiving lists. There are likely to be further advances on this item for Thanksgiving. Red roses, too, are stiffer in price and are likely to go above quoted rates for the holiday.

Smilax has become one of the plentiful items and is weakening in price. Other items of green goods hold about as heretofore.

Various Notes.

The banquet committee, John P. Degnan, chairman, has made arrangements for the annual supper to take place at the Union Hotel this evening. It is expected that a large number of visitors will be present and that the supper will be one of the most largely attended in the history of the local trade.

E. E. Pieser says that the growers who have made the most money on mums this year are those who have produced such sorts as Ivory of medium grade. These flowers have sold in quantity at prices which paid better than the production of exhibition stuff.

C. W. McKellar reports that it is just between crops with orchids for flower show week and that the demand, particularly for cattleyas, exceeded the supply.

John Poehlmann, manager of the selling department of Poehlmann Bros. Co., and Miss E. E. Parker were married Saturday evening at the bride's home at Morton Grove. They are receiving the congratulations of everyone in the trade, to most of whom the announcement was a surprise. Mr. and Mrs. Poehlmann have taken up their residence in the city.

Peter Reinberg has gone to Butternut, Wis., with a party of hunters for a two weeks' outing. Mr. Reinberg's new residence is nearly finished. The Foley Mfg. Co. supplied all the interior finish. When Mr. Reinberg moves into the new home, Leonard Kill will move into the old Reinberg residence next door.

George Reinberg shipped one order on Tuesday which included 1,050 Beauties, mostly long-stemmed.

The E. F. Winterson Co. reports a good business in the line of wild smilax, which seems to be going better this season than it did last year.

Messrs. Herrington and Duckham, judges at the St. Louis flower show, visited the Poehlmann Bros.' establishment at Morton Grove on Monday to see how the prize stock looks on the plants.

L. Coatsworth reports that the call for seed of the Benthey aster promises to exhaust the supply in a very short time.

E. C. Amling reports that he has another big crop of smilax just ready to cut. He has had a big business on "green goods" this fall.

The A. L. Randall Co. is rearranging its counter space and building a new cool room for carnations.

Weiland & Risch have put in arc lights to take the place of gas in their store, which was already well lighted.

Vaughan & Sperry are still getting very fine Kaiserin roses.

Adam Zender has three big houses of Chatenay. A part of his cut goes to Milwaukee.

The town is full of visitors this week, attracted by the flower show.

The Market.

Business has not been anything to boast of during the past week, but happily the avalanche of chrysanthemums is passing away. After several rather depressing days the market stiffened on November 12, all flowers clearing out nicely. The cheaper grades of chrysanthemums are now coming in less freely and another week will see about the last of these. Good blooms average from $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Prices on American Beauties, Brides and Bridesmaids remain about the same. Liberty, however, is in strong demand, bringing up to $10 per hundred for the best. Carnations show a slightly hardening tendency and will advance as the mums decline. Violets are more plentiful, but there is a brisk demand, the best going as high as $1 per hundred. Lily of the valley maintains previous quotations. Paper White narcissi, bouvardia, mignonette, Easter lilies, sweet peas and pansies are seen in the market in small quantities. Adiantum and asparagus sell better.

A Visit to Brookline.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society paid a visit to the estate of Joseph H. White, Brookline, on November 10, to inspect the greenhouses. The head gardener, James Wheeler, who is the newly elected vice-president of the C. S. A., met the party on arrival and showed them every courtesy. The palm house was especially interesting to the visitors. The dimensions of this house are 35x60 and twenty-five feet high. It contains many beautifully grown specimens, among which were noted Cycas circinalis with 100 fronds over eight feet in length. Very handsome plants of Kentia Belmoreana, K. Forsteriana and K. Australis, arecas, rhapis, pritchardias and other palms. Theophrastus imperialis, not often seen in good condition, carried leaves over four feet long. Two large specimens of philodendron (Monstera delicosa) were fruiting freely. Some fine adiantums over five feet across and beautiful Nephrolepis Piersoni were noted. The back wall was clothed with ferns and begonias and the ground covered with Lycopodium denticulatum and Begonia Rex.

The committee was favorably impressed with a seedling dracaena in the way of D. Cooperi, but with darker and broader leaves. The rose house was in the pink of condition. Varieties grown are Bride, Bridesmaid, Liberty and Wootton. The plants were two years old, had been tied down and broke finely. Mr. Wheeler stated that the average production per plant of Bride and Bridesmaids from October, 1903, to November 1, 1904, was forty-eight flowers, of Wootton sixty-four. The carnations were remarkably fine, such varieties as Enchantress, Lawson, Mrs. Patten, Boston Market and Fair Maid being grown.

A new single violet was very interesting. It is a sport from Princess of Wales. The foliage is heavy and extra vigorous and the flower larger and rounder and of a beautiful dark blue color. The committee considered it superior to Princess of Wales and it is likely to be heard from in the future. Chrysanthemums in all the best of the new and older varieties were noted in quantity. Of these Mr. Wheeler was for years a very successful exhibitor. Batches of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, cyclamens, primulas, poinsettias and other seasonable plants were in fine condition. It was rather a surprise to see excellent asters still blooming in the open, with shutters and cloth protection at night. Everything on the place was clean and well grown, showing that a skilled practitioner was in charge.

Various Notes.

N. F. McCarthy & Co. have had a large auction sale of hardy roses and shrubs the present week, stock being from Dutch and American sources. Prices have been satisfactory.

The first poinsettias of the season were noted in a store window on November 15. One or two growers expect to have a nice lot of bracts in for Thanksgiving. Roman hyacinths have also made their appearance.

W. W. Rawson, of Arlington, was elected by a handsome majority to the governor's council from his district in the late election.

The new governor of Massachusetts, W. L. Douglas, the well-known Brockton shoe manufacturer, who carried a strong Republican state for the Democracy, is an ardent flower lover. Only a few weeks ago he made a large distribution of plants from his gardens for the poor of his city.

Welch Bros., who do a very large commission business in Boston, are receiving some very high-grade roses, carnations and chrysanthemums from the many growers whose cuts they handle. They report business as being very good.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club elected officers for 1905 on November 15. They will hold their next field day with Wm. Nicholson, Framingham, about the middle of December.

The chrysanthemum show proved a distinct financial success, the receipts being much larger than in 1903. Music proved a great drawing card and well paid for itself.

Lord & Burnham Co. are working on the following new contracts: Samuel Kinder, Bristol, R. I., four houses; M. Hazelton, Turner's Falls, Mass., one house; Norcross & Stratton, Grafton, Mass., two houses; Judge Moore, Prides Crossing, Mass., two houses.

D. F. Roy, Robert Marshall and William Anderson were at the show at New York last week and took along about a score of their specimen plants from the Boston show.

A few blooms of a beautiful deep flesh-colored carnation from Zenas Crane, Dalton, Mass., E. Dolby, gardener, something in the way of Marquis but much superior, attracted much favorable notice at the recent show.

The Rosary, as J. J. Casey's new store on Bromfield street has been called, is very attractive. It is located in the rear of Music Hall and Mr. Casey merits a good share of the public's patronage.

That the new halls of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society are admirably adapted for keeping cut flowers in fine condition was attested at the recent show. Most of the carnations were as fresh on November 7 as when staged four days before.

William Nicholson is still shipping some very fine chrysanthemums to the Park street market. E. N. Peirce & Co., in addition to a big quantity of the same flowers, are forwarding a fine lot of all the best carnations, their Enchantress being extra good.

Thos. Galvin, in a window display of orchids last week, showed some remarkably fine spikes of Zygopetalum Mackaii.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Since my last notes on the condition of business, a change has come about. One or two functions of magnitude have fairly cleaned the market and a brighter prospect is in view. A great number of debutantes' parties and weddings are on the calendar and small functions will assist in making this a banner season.

The demand for roses is still slow and the commission man is glad the crop is about off. Prices remain from $2 to $5 per hundred. Beauties are beginning to arrive and $3 per dozen for the best is asked. Carnations are selling well and the market is cleaned up every day. Some very fine Enchantress and Lawson are being handled by the Cleveland Cut Flower Co. Although "mum" is still the word, their time will soon be at an end. Thanksgiving will in all probability wind them up for this season.

Various Notes.

A visit of the members of the British Iron Institute at a recent date made quite a demand for high grade flowers. Several entertainments and a large banquet wound up their visit. The G. M. Gasser Co. had the banquet decoration at the Chamber of Commerce. It was an elaborate affair and used a very large quantity of stock. Mums predominated and a very satisfactory arrangement was the result.

Smith & Fetters had charge of the Hale funeral, which brought out some very fine design work and tasty bunches. Beauties, orchids, valley and mums were used largely.

James Eadie, of Erie street, is receiving some nice Beauties and Meteors from his new plant on Shaw avenue.

Parks is doing a fine trade in the Citizens building. He is handling the finest grade flowers.

At Pentecost's place, on Republic street, Lawson and Crane are doing nicely, with good flowers and long stems. Their mums are good and they will have a large cut for Thanksgiving. A fine batch of cyclamen gives evidence of high culture.

Just across Rockefeller park we find Fred Naumann looking well. Here is an interesting batch of seedling carnations. Some good red, white and pink are in flower and may be heard of later. Some extra well grown mums, flowers of the exhibition variety, are seen here, and Appletons that could hardly be beat. Mr. Naumann says the florists won't pay enough for high grade blooms so will retail them himself. All the newer varieties are being tested.

Another short jaunt brings us to George Smith's place on Wade Park avenue. Although not a large plant, it is a model of neatness. The best of stock is produced here and finds a ready sale at the store end. A bench of Lawson was a beautiful sight, healthy and vigorous, full of bud and bloom. Mums are grown here and the finest flowers bring the best results. A superb batch of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine proves that George knows how it is done. Cyclamen are also good and so are his primulas. In fact everything looks well.

Merkel Bros., of Mentor, are sending some extra fine mums of the leading varieties to Mr. Wagner, on Erie street. A visit to their greenhouses is a rare treat, as here we see all the up-to-date varieties of mums, both Australian and American. The carnations are doing splendidly. Enchantress is in full crop. Nelson Fisher as done here is very fine. Lawson, Flamingo and other varieties are also doing nicely.

Bate Bros. will have a good cut of mums and carnations for Thanksgiving.

The Essex Greenhouses are sending in some fine Beauties and carnations.

Forest City.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week opened with clear, cold, seasonable weather. The big flower show is in full blast and society has endorsed the horse show, as is its custom. Retailers are busy. Violets were in demand beyond the supply and specials easily brought $1.50. But the prices of roses, carnations and about every other variety of flower remain stagnant. The improvement materializes slowly and yet it is as inevitable, as Thanksgiving is at our doors and Christmas is only five short weeks away.

Club was held. Over sixty members were present. It was chrysanthemum and carnation night and a magnificent exhibition of new varieties was made, limited in numbers, but as choice as any exhibit ever made in the rooms of the society. Three immense vases of the new pink sport of W. H. Chadwick, named W. S. Allen, were exhibited by A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn. The carnation display was beyond criticism. John N. May displayed Phyllis, Weber & Sons, of Oakland, Md., My Maryland; Guttman & Weber, Victory, and C. W. Ward four fine sorts, Robert Craig, Judge Hinsdale, Ethel Ward and Lieutenant Peary, every one of them a gem in its class.

The resolutions on the death of the very Rev. Dean Hole were read with much feeling by Alex Wallace and a rising vote of acceptance demonstrated the respect of the club for his memory. John Birnie read the resolutions on the death of John Reickert and Charles Weathered those on the death of J. B. Hyatt, both reports being received and copies ordered sent to the bereaved families.

The nominating committee reported the following names: For president, F. H. Traendly and John Birnie; vice-president, S. S. Butterfield and J. Austin Shaw; for secretary, John Young and A. H. Langjahr; for treasurer, Charles Weathered and William Elliott; for trustees, Walter Sheridan, John Scott, John I. Raynor, L. B. Craw, John Nash, John Reimels and A. S. Burns. The five new members proposed at the last meeting of the club were duly elected and Jas. Taylor, of Southport, was proposed.

Patrick O'Mara addressed the club in behalf of Prof. Johnson, who is a candidate for the place of assistant secretary of agriculture. Strong resolutions were adopted endorsing Prof. Johnson. C. W. Ward endorsed the resolutions heartily and announced he had for some months given Prof. Johnson his best efforts.

The committee on awards reported on each and announced its intention of visiting the Cottage Gardens to inspect the new white, Ethel Ward, and Guttman & Weber's, at Lynbrook, to see Victory growing and John N. May's to inspect Phyllis. Each exhibitor was given an opportunity to tell of the habit and other merits of his variety and each invited members of the club to visit them and see the stock growing. Mr. Wallace suggested the appointment of a day on which the club members collectively should visit the headquarters of the new carnations and the officers of the club were appointed a committee to make the necessary arrangements.

The second Monday in December will be florists' supply night and it will be made as interesting as possible, being the last club meeting in its most successful year.

Various Notes.

John Young is receiving a fine supply of those grand new carnations from the Cottage Gardens, samples of which were on view at the club meeting.

John Scott's new fern seems to be in every retail establishment in New York City. Its commercial value is being demonstrated everywhere.

Elliott's big auction comes to-morrow and Cleary's Horticultural Hall will have immediately its great sale of hardy roses.

Kretchmar Bros., formerly of Flatbush, and for some years resting on their oars, are again back in their favorite work of carnation growing at the old stand in West Nyack, N. Y.

President Amos, of the Cut Flower Exchange, Coogan building, has been forced to use "the big stick" mornings lately, enforcing the rule that no baskets are to be opened before 6 a. m. He believes rules are made to be obeyed.

Aug. Schroeder, of Elmhurst, L. I., was robbed of all his best mums last week, the thieves doing a great deal of damage to other stock.

Bobbink & Atkins are finding it difficult to keep ahead of the orders for their plant tubs. They are hand-made, of oak or cypress and a large force is constantly employed in their manufacture.

Bowling.

The club enjoyed its first afternoon practice last Monday. Next Monday night at 8 o'clock the match between the Flatbush and New York begins. A good deal of interest is being taken in this contest and a record crowd is expected. The new alleys on the first floor of the Puritan Cafe, on Thirtieth street, near Eighth avenue, will be used on this occasion. Monday's scores were:

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Business the past week was extremely quiet, at least until Thursday; stock cleaned up fairly well the last of the week. Mums were a glut and many were sold at disgraceful prices in order to move them at all. No doubt some of the commission men will blush when they mail reports to growers.

A Large Decoration.

The event of the week was the Darlington wedding. A. M. Murdoch had this and made old Trinity church a vision of beauty. On each side of the chancel were groups of palms and white chrysanthemums, while in the chancel proper were white mums and cattleyas tied and looped with pale blue ribbon. On the altar were bunches of lilies. Just below the capitals of the pillars were clusters of white mums tied with broad blue ribbon and the pillars partly hidden with sprays of asparagus. The galleries bore festoons of smilax and asparagus fastened with ribbon. At the end of each pew in the center aisle was the same arrangement of smilax and narrow ribbon, while every fourth pew bore a cluster of cattleyas. At the Darlington home the decorations were notable. In the drawing room was an arch of orchids. The mantels were banked with cattleyas and Farleyense. The library was done in American Beauties. The hallway to the fourth floor was done in yellow mums. The pink rose, Tom Field, was used in the lower dining room and red roses in the upper. The bridal table had a great dome of cattleyas and Farleyense and directly beneath was a large centerpiece of Bride roses, valley and white orchids. The bridal bouquet was of white orchids showered with dendrobium blooms. The maid of honor carried a bunch of vandas. The bridesmaids carried bouquets of cattleyas, the flower girls carried baskets of valley. The bouquets were not the regular shower bouquets, but a beautiful and somewhat similar effect produced with ribbons. The whole decoration was much out of the ordinary.

Various Notes.

L. I. Neff has a bench the length of one of his houses in roseum lily which is just coming in, and he expects to cut for the next six weeks. They will come in handy when the mums are out of the road.

Jim Higgins was in a B. & O. wreck last week. The worst he got was a good shaking up. Hoo-Hoo.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The florists' business during the past week was fairly good. Winter weather has arrived and made stock of all kinds look much better and the wholesale market much less crowded. Prices have gone up a little on carnations and roses. Social work among the upper class is still lacking, though up-town florists who cater to this trade say that not until the World's Fair closes will society entertain home friends. Carnations are not so good as one would like them to be. Of the real first-class flowers the percentage is as yet very small and, as these are the only ones in demand, the market may be called short in supply. The price for fair stock is $3 per hundred, $2 and $1.50 for the others.

The rose stock is somewhat better in quality and supply. Extra fancy are $8 per hundred in Liberty, Carnot and Meteor. No. 1 bring $6 and seconds are sold at $2 to $3. Fancy American Beauties are not so many at $4 per dozen, but mediums are now $2 to $2.50, shorts $6 to $8 per hundred.

Chrysanthemums are still plentiful. Extra fancy sell well at $3 per dozen, second choice $1.50 to $2 per dozen, small white and pink Ivory bringing $4 to $5 per hundred. It is said that chrysanthemums will not average in price as much as last season.

Violets have advanced within the past few days to 60 cents per hundred. The cold weather has brought them better color and longer stems and from now on they will occupy their proper position in the market. Lily of the valley continues in good supply. Romans and Paper Whites demand $4 per hundred, stock extra good.

Everything points to a big demand for Thanksgiving day and from reports stock will be somewhat scarce with advanced prices.

Various Notes.

The World's Fair Flower Association's big show the past week in the Horticulture building was a great success. The first two days the paid admission averaged over 6,000. Wednesday and Thursday the bad weather kept many away and the attendance fell away below the mark. Friday the crowd was fairly large, but Saturday it was enormous and Manager Hauswirth was all smiles. President Breitmeyer, E. G. Hill, J. F. Ammann and James Hartshorne lent great assistance at the door on Saturday, as the crowd was too large for any two men to handle. The show did a great deal of good to the local trade and will no doubt be of great benefit to the Florists' Club when it holds its annual show next year.

Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer's, and B. Eschner, of Rice & Co., Philadelphia, took in the big show and both report a profitable stay in the city.

The new white begonia, Turnford Hall, exhibited by J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, was a decided novelty and is certainly of great commercial value.

Belle Miller and her sister, of Springfield, Ill., spent Friday at the show looking up new varieties in roses, carnations and chrysanthemums. Miss Miller is sending to this market daily some extra fine stock which is handled by Frank Ellis.

Judge and Mrs. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, were at the show and took many prizes with their fine stock. It is handled in this market by Charles Kuehn.

Ostertag Bros. bought all of the Siebrecht & Son's exhibit in the conservatory of the Horticulture building, which was one of the largest exhibits in plants at the World's Fair. Leo Ostertag made the sale the past week during the flower show.

The meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club on Thursday afternoon in the Horticulture building was not so well attended as expected. No business of any importance was transacted. This was all left over until the December meeting. After the regular routine business was disposed of they adjourned to F. W. Taylor's office where a meeting of the visiting florists was held, Prof. Wm. Trelease presiding.

George B. Windler, one of the prominent members of the Florists' Club, is to be married on Tuesday, November 22, to Miss Anna Margaret May. The members of the club I know are with me in congratulating Miss May on her choice, as no member of our craft has more friends than George Windler. Mr. and Mrs. Windler will be at home to their friends on Thursdays after January 1, at 4059 De Lore avenue.

Wm. Kalisch, of the firm of Wm. Kalisch & Sons, Delmar and Taylor avenues, was painfully hurt on Saturday by the street cars, which ran into his wagon on his way to the World's Fair. From reports of his son Monday morning, his father is resting easy, but it will be two weeks before he will be able to attend to business. J. J. B.

Vegetable Forcing.

RHUBARB.

I was interested in Mr. Croydon's article on rhubarb forcing in a recent REVIEW. Will he please tell us the best treatment to give the roots after they are through bearing? We would like to use ours again as the cost of fresh roots is considerable. C. L. W.

In the article on rhubarb forcing referred to I purposely omitted the after-care of roots, as I don't think it pays to hold them over. The unnatural conditions to which they are subjected when forced so saps the vitality of the plants that it takes considerable time and trouble to get them back into a good, healthy condition. Where old plants are used for forcing there is always more or less rot. Some of the crowns having reached the seeding stage, from these only a few stalks of good rhubarb are procured, then the flower spike is produced, after which the crown, having exhausted all its strength in the effort, invariably rots. To preserve the old roots they require to be covered over in sand or some similar material until spring, kept as cool as possible but at the same time free from damp or frost. To attempt to force them again the next winter would be only courting disappointment.

If it is necessary to preserve them it is better to plant them out without dividing for one season, after which their vitality will be partially restored. Then the following spring the clumps can be divided up into single crowns. By fall they will have made quite some growth, but seldom make plants strong enough for forcing the first season after dividing. Fresh crowns that never have been forced, on the other hand, if divided in spring will make good forcing plants by fall. The best policy, then, if you have available ground, is to keep a stock of fresh plants coming on and throw away your crowns when they are removed from the forcing quarters.

In breaking up plants for planting in the open ground divide into single crowns, plant not too deeply, in a well enriched, deeply cultivated soil, allowing twenty inches or, if ground is plentiful, two feet between the plants. Keep well cultivated and refrain from pulling the stalks and you will be surprised at the growth they will make in one season. Being kept growing freely, there is little danger of them making flowering crowns and where that is avoided a much better crop can be depended on. Old plants in which the majority of the crowns will have reached the mature stage and formed flower buds will only give about one-third the returns that fresh, free growing crowns will give.

Another method of producing forcing plants is from seed. From this in two seasons good crowns can be procured, but, as the plants cannot all be depended on to come true from seed, division is the most satisfactory method.

TROUBLE WITH LETTUCE.

I am having trouble with my lettuce. The under sides of the leaves are whitish in spots, something to the way mildew looks on other plants. After a while the leaves turn brown where affected. I enclose a specimen leaf and would like to know the cause and remedy for the trouble. A. D.

The trouble with your lettuce is mildew pure and simple and its presence denotes very unsuitable atmospheric conditions. The painting of your heating pipes in patches with a paste composed of sulphur and lime would help destroy the germs, but you must be careful not to overdo it or you will scald the edges of the tender leaves. Rather try and get at the bottom of the trouble by careful airing and the judicious regulation of atmospheric moisture. Avoid watering as much as possible during dull weather. Water only in the morning, so as to have the moisture all dried up before time to close down the house. Give air on all favorable occasions but avoid cold draughts by closing your ventilators gradually as soon in the afternoon as the air begins to get cold. More mildew is caused by careless airing than by anything I know and it will pay you to spend some time and trouble in the study of the airing question. When you have this down to a fine point I don't think you will have much trouble with mildew. W. S. CROYDON.

Seed Trade News.

VISITED CHICAGO: L. L. May, St. Paul; Max Wilhelmi, Lawrence, Kans.

J. M. CLARK, secretary of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, is on an eastern trip.

THE California growers are making full deliveries of all kinds of onion seed except Southport White Globe.

THE weather is favoring the green pickers in the northern woods but none but very small lots have yet reached market.

THE French bulb growers appear now to realize that there is a limit in price above which American buyers will not touch Romans or Paper Whites.

THE St. Louis News for November 6 has on its title page a portrait of Wm. F. Nicol, president of the St. Louis Seed Co., and contains an illustrated write-up of that firm's World's Fair exhibits, which included the floral clock.

IN THE Boston seed trade bowling league the standing of the teams now is: Joseph Breck & Sons, won five, lost one; R. & J. Farquhar & Co., won five, lost four; Schlegel & Fottler Co., won five, lost four; W. W. Rawson & Co., lost six.

THE country adjacent to Philadelphia once produced several tons of onion seed annually, but the estimated yield for 1904 is said to be less than 300 pounds and this is confined entirely to Philadelphia White Silverskin. The onion set crop is equally short. The few farmers who hold white sets refuse $4 per bushel for them.

AS an example of the importance of some of the seed-growing establishments at Quedlinburg, Germany, it may be stated that the firm of Henry Mette, founded in 1787, now grows 3,000 acres for seed crops and contracts for the crop of some 5,000 acres additional in the same vicinity. The pay roll has over 1,200 names, one half of whom are laborers, however.

VISITED PHILADELPHIA: Jas. Comont, representing James Carter, Dunnett & Beal, London, England.

A TOUR AMONG CALIFORNIA SEED GROWERS.

As we leave Santa Clara on our trip northward, the next point of interest is Palo Alto, where D. L. Sloan & Son showed some fine fields of onion seed and lettuce. This firm confines its efforts more particularly to these two crops, although it operates more or less along all the lines of the Santa Clara growers. Mr. Sloan lives quite near the Leland Stanford University and after seeing his seed fields he kindly drove us over to and through the grounds of this noted educational institution. His knowledge of the place made the side trip very enjoyable.

On the way from Palo Alto to San Francisco, Menlo Park, when called by the trainmen, brought recollections of a Sunset Seed & Plant Co. that had made Menlo Park a familiar word to a seedsman. The place is beautiful enough for the home of any sort of a seed or plant business, either at sunrise or sunset, and there was a regret that the company was no longer there.

Coming into San Francisco the numerous short windmills distributed among plats of vegetables growing on ledges like steps or stairs look peculiar enough, but the produce that is taken from these queerly situated gardens, both in quality and quantity, would satisfy any market gardener. The windmills are a necessity to pump water for irrigating for the crops and the ledges upon which the vegetables are grown are so situated as to make the irrigating process easy and efficient. Some time could be spent to good advantage in this part of San Francisco, for any one interested in the market garden branch of the trade. The hanging gardens of Babylon may have looked something like these.

At San Francisco two days were spent with the seed dealers. E. J. Bowen's business and warehouse was interesting from the fact of long establishment and because of the kindly personality of its head. E. J. Bowen was alive and in his office at the time of this trip. At Trumbull & Beebe's store Mr. Beebe did the honors. They have a nice store and do a good business. The Cox Seed Co. has a fine location, a nice store and offices and a commodious warehouse. In addition to their wholesale and seed growing interests they have a good retail trade. The other seed stores are creditable to the town.

As seed growers the Cox Seed Co. operates largely in the vicinity of Stockton, which is "up the river," with the difference of being down the river as well. The river branches at a certain point, one branch going up to Sacramento and the other going down to Stockton and beyond. Most of the Santa Clara growers operate on the Sacramento branch, which is the proper "up the river" locality as understood by them. The Cox Seed Co. has also growing crops at points other than in the Stockton vicinity and do an extensive business in this line.

The trip up the river was with Ben. Morse, representing C. C. Morse & Co. At the dock we met Charles Parker, who was also going up. The sail through the bay was enjoyable and as we neared the place where the San Joaquin and Sacramento rivers meet the scenery was remarkable, owing to the half submerged islands that lay apparently in all directions. Some of these islands, it was stated, had formerly contained valuable fruit and produce ranches and that a great deal of money had been used and was still being used in the effort to reclaim them. The steamer we were on took the Sacramento river which runs east and north. To one who had never before seen low lands surrounded by levee banks, the view, as the river narrowed, looked strange indeed. The tops of the fruit trees that were growing on both sides seemed just level with the water in the river, and at landing places, from the upper deck of the boat we looked down upon the fruits on the topmost branches. One could not but think of the disaster that a break in the levee would cause.

The steamer pushed along, making a number of stops before reaching Isleton where Mr. Morse and writer got off. Mr. Parker remained on board, going to Walnut Grove, or some other place near to his up the river plantings. What interest Isleton has for the visiting seedsman will be told next week.

SEED NOVELTIES.

Kohler & Rudel, Windischleuba-Altenburg, Germany, will send out a considerable number of novelties for 1905. Chief among them is a red perennial sunflower, the result of crossing Echinacea hybrida and Helianthus multiflorus. The plant and flowers attain great size. If sown early in a frame or greenhouse the plants bloom the first season but they do not attain perfection until the second year. The flowers are described as excellent for cutting for decorative purposes. Another welcome thing is a sky-blue form of Primula obconica. Primula Cashmiriana grandiflora is what the name indicates. Erigeron speciosus grandiflorus hybridus has a wide range of color and a considerable variety in form. Campanula persicifolia Pfitzeri has large double or semi-double blue flowers. Other new things are Viola cornuta Kommerzienrat Kohler, Aster hybridus, White Queen and Aster Amellus grandiflorus variegatus.

TROUBLE WITH ENCHANTRESS.

We come to you in trouble. We have a bed of Enchantress carnation benched in July, the glass put on early in September. It has been top dressed twice. A great many of the plants have long, healthy stems and buds, also two or three puny, yellow stems and buds on the same plant. If you could give us any advice it would be appreciated.

L. A. D.

I am inclined to think that the top dressing was too strong, or that you allowed the soil to get too wet right after it was applied. You do not state of what the top dressing consisted or the quantity applied, so I can only guess by the behavior of the plants. The fact that there are fine, long stems and sickly shoots on the same plants shows that there was a severe check of some sort and likely too much food just after it. Enchantress is a fine, strong growing variety when it is handled properly, but it easily loses its stride and usually the first signs are those sickly looking shoots. Let them get a little on the dry side and run them a little dry for a few weeks and I think the trouble will disappear. Just before you water them the first time, sprinkle a little air-slaked lime on the soil and water it in.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1905.

IN moving box, especially large plants, see that you get all the roots, or nearly all, at whatever cost of labor.

ALLEN T. VAWTER, who for fifty years conducted a nursery near Macomb, Ill., died November 4, aged 74 years.

T. C. MCPHERSON, of Troy, O., was found dead in a ditch near the Union station in Chicago November 6. Marks on the body indicated violence.

BAIRD & MURPHY, of the Tennessee Nurseries, Jackson, Tenn., report the largest deliveries of fruit trees in their history this fall, principally in the south and southwest.

HANKINSON, MINN.—W. W. Lilley and C. A. Chinberg have sold a half interest in their nursery to Wm. Strubel and Charles Carman. The business is to be enlarged.

WHILE a workman was repairing a light at the Jewel Nursery Co.'s place at Lake City, Minn., November 5, an explosion of gas took place which injured the man and partly wrecked the building.

THE nursery agent is to be looked to to find a planter for all the great quantities of fruit trees in course of preparation for next season. There is no limit to the amount of stock the farmers of the west will plant in the next few years if properly approached and honestly dealt with.

IN the south end of Jackson park, Chicago, a great deal of nursery stock is being planted this fall. There is still a large area which has not been reclaimed from the devastated condition in which it was left by the destruction of the World's Fair in 1894, but the finished part is in very good shape. An equally large task will be presented by the necessity for the restoration of Forest park, St. Louis, in a few months.

HOW to EARN $20 to $50 per WEEK

This is an advertisement but is worthy of your careful consideration, as it is a bonafide offer to the readers of the FLORISTS' REVIEW for their services this winter—whole or part time.

If you mean business it will pay you to write to the Spaulding Company and get their proposition. Whether you are experienced in their line or not they will outfit you free and instruct you fully each week, so that you will positively make as much as stated above, in cash, and in addition thereto will receive many premiums, not cheap, trashy things but useful and valuable articles which they send their salesmen free, from time to time, by way of appreciation and encouragement.

Working for them is not like representing an ordinary nursery concern, for they are nurserymen of national reputation and can be depended upon to fulfill all agreements with salesmen and customers. They will make life easy and prosperous for you if you give them the chance.

Write them to-day for full particulars.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Trade is very much the same as last week. There is nothing very startling going on and the demand is rather weak. Prices are holding only fair. Mums are averaging a little better but roses and carnations are about the same. Carnations are coming still more heavily and the quality is good. November business has not been up to standard this year and the complaint is general. About the only flower for which there is an active demand is the violet, and there are not enough of these to go around by a long ways. They bring from 50 cents to $1 per hundred, with prospects of a still further advance this week.

Various Notes.

The mum show at the fair took quite a number of our boys away from home. Among those who went were L. H. Kyrk, J. A. Peterson, Wm. McFadden and Peter Weiland.

Chas. Dudley and wife, of Parkersburg, W. Va., and Chas Dieterich passed through this city on their way to St. Louis, as also did Dr. Howald, of the Atlanta Floral Co., Atlanta, Ga.

The Club's Exhibition.

The annual mum show of the Florists' Society was held on Saturday and a very creditable display it was. Among the firms making exhibits were The E. G. Hill Co., George & Allan, The Rosebank Co., R. Witterstaetter, J. W. Rodgers, J. Breitmeyer's Sons, Theo. Bock and Nathan Smith & Son.

The general display prize was won by R. Witterstaetter with a fine display of mums, also a large number of vases of his famous seedling carnations. His improved Enquirer was in great shape and I have not seen anything this season that is equal to it. Theo. Bock had several varieties staged for exhibition purposes and they were right up to his standard of good blooms. The Rosebank Co. made a fine showing and though they did not get in the money, they had some very good blooms.

The E. G. Hill Co. staged some twenty-eight varieties of mums, one flower of each.

DO OU KNOW THAT THE MOST SUCCESSFUL growers of cut flowers are those who sell their own stock?

The Bonnaffon competition was not up to standard, there being but two entries. R. Witterstaetter captured first and J. W. Rodgers second.

The other awards are as follows: Best vase white, J. Breitmeyer's Sons, first, with Adelia; George & Allan, second; E. G. Hill Co. third.

Best vase yellow, E. G. Hill Co. first, with Yellow Eaton, the best blooms of this variety I ever saw; R. Witterstaetter second, with Appleton; George & Allan third, with Lincoln. Best vase pink, E. G. Hill Co. first, with Enguehard; R. Witterstaetter second and third.

Nathan Smith & Son exhibited two varieties for the mum society's committee.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The Market.

During the past ten days there have been a good many wedding decorations, as well as more than the usual amount of funeral work, this together with quite a little counter trade for cut flowers has given quite a snap to business, and worked off what would otherwise have been a glut of chrysanthemums and other stuff. Almost all of the florists have very pretty window displays, chrysanthemums being largely used. Roses and carnations have sold very slowly lately as everybody for the moment buys mums, as a result prices have eased somewhat, both wholesale and retail.

Various Notes.

Bruce Butterton has the sympathy of all in the death of his son, John, aged 7 years.

The regular meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society took place November 2. Final plans and committees were arranged for the seventh annual ball, which takes place December 2. Miss Alice Keteltas has offered a special prize of $50 (or a silver cup) for the best arrangement of shrubs or plants at the entrance of any estate in Newport, no evergreens to be used.

The greatest interest was taken here in the show at Boston. The following florists and members of the Horticultural Society attended. Alexander McLellan, David McIntosh, Andrew S. Meikle, Alexander Anderson, James Boyd, John B. Urquhart, Alexander McWilliams, Colin Robertson, Stewart Ritchie, Arend Brandt, Andrew J. Pow, Donald F. Shepherd, Paul Volquardson, Daniel J. Coughlin and James Robertson.

The Geo. A. Weaver Co. was closed Thursday, November 3, during the funeral of Mr. Weaver's sister, Mrs. W. Howard Greene. The employes sent a fine wreath of Ivory chrysamthemums, Kaiserin roses and violets.

On Wednesday of last week the funeral of Joseph S. Allen took place. There were so many floral tributes that the church was turned into a floral bower. The Horticultural Society sent a pillow and a large delegation of members attended the services.

J. M. Hodgson arranged the decorations for the Erving-Rutherford wedding on Thursday, in New York. It was a home affair, but very elaborate.

Wadley & Smythe are about closing their Bellevue avenue store for this season. They report trade as having been very good the past few weeks.

Henry J. Hass has just celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his birth at his home on Almy street, where, assisted by his wife and daughter, a large company of friends was entertained.

At Philip Caswell's greenhouses Mr. Allen has been cutting some fine chrysanthemums, especially Ivory and Bonnaffon. It is unfortunate that mums are selling so low; $6 to $8 a hundred is about all good flowers will bring here.

OWENSBORO, KY.—Thomas C. Milne took all of the first prizes for cut flowers in the professional classes at the flower show held here last week. The judge was W. R. Conover, of Henderson.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Business here has been a little quiet but everybody is looking for better trade now that election is over. Flowers of all kinds are very plentiful, so much so that some of the florists are having bargain sales. One florist had a large advertisement in the daily papers, "$10 pillows for $5, $8 pillows for $4, pinks 35 cents per dozen, all other designs at half price." Another one advertised chrysanthemums at 75 cents per dozen and invites the public to see them picked right fresh from the plants. This is the most prosperous town for flower stores in the state. One of the local storemen is talking of starting a lunch-room or cigar store in his present location. Still another is thinking of applying for a liquor license.

S. S. Peckham has opened another city salesroom and is making a fine show of mums. He is not only supplying his own trade but is also shipping a number of chrysanthemums out of town.

W. G. Kroeber, it is said, is soon to open a store on Union street, next door east to Sheedy's Theatre.

H. V. Showle reports business as quiet in his section of the city.

Arthur Ashley is bringing in some fine pinks and intends to soon build another house for pinks and one for violets.

W. E. Mosher has started to stake out for a new greenhouse.

W. L. G. Brown has the sides all in for a new house 25x100 to be used for roses.

R. E. Nofftz, the ivy leaf king, has just finished a new house to be used for the storage of his hardy stuff that he intends to force. Dick reports large sales of ivy leaves. He says he is shipping lots of them out of town.

We hear that E. H. Chamberlain is having a new delivery wagon built that is going to be a winner. We'll all be there at the christening of the new turnout.

The greenhouse of H. H. Rogers, in Fairhaven, has been open to the public this week and they say that Mr. Garthley is showing some very fine chrysanthemums.

We have not yet been able to get a quorum at the recent Florists' Club meetings, but are in hopes to at the next meeting. It seems to be hard to get the local florists away from their own firesides unless there is a supper.

C.

TORONTO.

Trade during the last week has picked up considerably and cut flowers are shortening in supply, with an increased demand, while we notice the wholesale price is gradually advancing; especially do we notice this in roses. Mums and carnations continue to be fairly plentiful, with demand and supply about equal. Violets are scarce.

Much interest is being taken in the coming flower show and all of our growers are holding their best stock for it. We expect a big exhibition, as the secretary informs us that nearly all the classes are well filled up and some of the exhibits will be decidedly interesting. Many out-of-town growers have made their entries and we are assured of several exhibits from our American cousins.

D. J.

HARTFORD, CONN.—E. M. Francis has closed his greenhouse and is going south for the winter.

OWATONNA, MINN.—The Clinton Falls Nursery & Greenhouse Co.'s new establishment is a model in every way. The houses contain tile benches throughout, with boiler shed separated from main house. The same is heated by high pressure eighty-five horse-power boilers of the latest type. The houses are lit with electric light. They grow a large variety of stock. Their roses and carnations are in excellent condition at present. They control 30,000 feet of glass. The houses are in charge of Paul Horn. Thos. Cashman is president of the company. They report an excellent trade and good shipping facilities to the surrounding towns.

PACIFIC COAST.

BEDDING STOCK FOR SPRING.

This is the best time of the year to propagate soft-wooded plants for borders or carpet bedding and, as there is considerable call for this class of material in the early spring in and around our large towns, a gentle reminder may be in order. This class of stock is so easily grown here that many of our growers do not bother with it and leave the handling to gardeners in private places or to the small dealers. But I have always found that at the proper season there is a considerable demand and some of our largest commercial places that have complete lines of other stock lose a good many dollars by not being able to furnish stock of this character and for which nothing else can be substituted or suggested.

Our border geraniums, achryanthes, alternantheras, coleus, begonias, salvias, lobelias, feverfew and verbenas are now in full growth and cuttings can be taken and struck in flats with no danger of their not rooting. There is no necessity of giving greenhouse room for this class of stock, as anything in the line of a frame is just to their liking. Some seasons we have frost sufficient to kill these border plants and other years they are only scorched on the tips of the foliage. However, this is the best time to make cuttings and if we do not have cold weather there will be no necessity of covering the frames. If the weather should get frosty it will be necessary to put a few sash over them at night and be careful not to water too freely until the cuttings are rooted, after which all is plain sailing.

I have found a good demand for Mme. Salleroi, Mountain of Snow, Marshal McMahon, Mme. Pollock and Happy Thought geraniums, the past few seasons, selling the young plants out of the flats without potting early in March. Achryanthes and alternantheras have sold well and verbenas also. The same rules will apply to the growing of all these plants. Lobelia, salvias, sweet alyssum and agreatums are easily grown from seed and this should be planted within the next few weeks. Coleus are more delicate and the cuttings had better be planted in the greenhouse and transplanted later into thumb pots. The weather is especially warm and favorable at present for making cuttings and it is best to have this work attended to before a sharp frost spoils the young foliage and shoots for the season's supply. SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

I might strain a point and say that business is fair, but that is the best that can be said about it. The weather still continues favorable and flowers are coming in to town in abundance. Especially is this true of chrysanthemums and carnations. Of the former we have an avalanche at present and the crop will last for a few weeks more. With carnations the majority of the benches have come into bloom and we will have quantities to select from before the cold weather begins. Prices are away down, which is always a poor sign for the florist. The best of the fancy sorts are being sold at three dozen for a dollar and a very few at 50 cents per dozen. Ordinary sorts sell at about $2 per hundred and less. Roses are fairly plentiful, owing to the continued bright weather. American Beauty sells at from $1 to $2 per dozen, Brides and Maids at from 25 cents to 75 cents, according to quality, and Meteor, Liberty and Testout at the same prices. Paper White narcissi are being sold to the stores at 75 cents to $1 per hundred stems. Violets are not over plentiful and unless we get more rain the next few days they will become even scarcer. They are selling wholesale at 75 cents per dozen bunches. Valley is plentiful and only in very slight demand; it sells at $3 per hundred. Only a few Lilium Harrisii are seen, of fair quality. Indoor mums are cheap. There is so little difference between the flowers grown outside and those from under glass that the retailers will not pay high prices for the latter. As a consequence the best grade of flowers can be had at from $5 to $10 per hundred. Smilax is becoming plentiful but maidenhair fern is scarce. All the summer and autumn blooming plants have gone out of business and it only needs a couple of good sharp frosts to put the prices of the balance of stock where they should be at this season of the year.

Various Notes.

Wm. Harmon, of H. M. Sanborn's Floral Depot, Oakland, is on the sick list.

The good resolutions made by the florists regarding the closing of stores at 1 o'clock on Sunday have been rescinded by a majority of the dealers and they are now open for business always. This order of things makes a hardship on the clerks who should be entitled to half a day's rest at least. G.

LOS ANGELES.

The florists of Los Angeles have organized an association which will seek to secure early closing, etc. The firms represented are: The Redondo, Ocean Park and Central Park companies, The American and Mercantile concerns, Mrs. Lord, Mr. Goldenson, Mr. Wright, Theodore Payne and the Ingleside company. The following officers will represent the new organization: T. W. Wright, president; Morris Goldenson, secretary; O. C. Saaks, treasurer.

WINNIPEG, MAN.

T. W. Duggan, manager of the Dale estate in Brampton, Ont., was in Winnipeg during the past week calling on customers. The Dale estate is widely known as the largest horticultural concern in the Dominion, and a representative of the Free Press interviewed Mr. Duggan regarding the handling of the products of the greenhouses.

"Is it true that you ship cut flowers all the way from Brampton to Winnipeg?" asked the reporter:

"Surely," replied Mr. Duggan, "thousands of them, millions of them, right to Victoria, Vancouver, and also Calgary, Regina, Brandon and Portage la Prairie, and we are sending five times as many now as we did two years ago. We regard it both as a certain sign of prosperity and of the cultivated taste of western people. If any one wants to know what class of people are living in the towns and cities of the west, let them inquire of the florists. They will find that the best customers of cut flower dealers are in Western Canada. As a sign of prosperity it is also unequaled. You can readily judge how quickly flowers are cut out of a citizen's expense bill during hard times. They are one of the first things to go. When we sell all the flowers we can grow, you may be assured that the country is as prosperous as it can be, and that is the case at the present moment. We have fourteen acres under glass—quite a little farm—and we are behind in our orders. The Brampton greenhouses are still much the largest in Canada, very much the largest. The business was built up years ago, and has always maintained its place. We are splendidly located and have an ideal soil for floriculture.

"The west is the coming country, however; there is no doubt about it. Where you cannot grow wheat you can dig minerals out of the earth. You will never be the whole thing, as they say, but you will be a very considerable and important part of it. You are just on the beginning of our career, and you have a most important history before you."

Kenosha, Wis.—C. G. Anderson has had a chrysanthemum show which attracted many people to his place. A departure with him is a house of lettuce for local trade.

KEEPING CLEAN FLUES.

Many florists in the vicinity of Cleveland, as well as others at places distant from the factory, have found a flue cleaner which gives satisfaction in the device manufactured by Chas. S. Kreidler, Post Office, Station H, Cleveland, O. He publishes a little booklet called "How?" which tells all about it and is sent free on request.

ANNAPOLIS, MD.—Rudolph Kaiser has built a house 20x100 with the material of the Dillon Greenhouse Mfg. Co., including the composition gutter plates, and finds it very satisfactory. His mums are fine this fall and business has been good.

MOLES.

If J. H. B., whose note on moles and the difficulty of trapping them appeared in the issue of November 3, will simply fill the runs with water, I think he will have no further trouble. Simply make a hole in the run and pour in the water until it is full. Once or twice will drive them off or drown them. It does not take much water unless the runs are very long. Don't break up the runs; it will let the water out. M. E. EDDY.

WINONA, MINN.—Miss Thekla Gertrude Kirchner, the eldest daughter of Ed. Kirchner, of the West End Greenhouse, was married November 10 to Albert C. Davidson.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SPORTS.

The reasons for a plant producing sports are difficult to understand. A week or two since I observed in a trade paper an enquiry from a market grower respecting the reason why nearly one-half of his stock of the Golden Yellow Horace Martin, a sport from Marie Masse, had produced pink flowers? The season previous his stock of several hundred plants was quite true. He planted this season 2,000 with the above result. A large number of growers will be sadly disappointed over the sport of Mrs. Barkley sent out as Lady Cranston. The white-flowered sport appeared in 1902, and the stock last season was eight plants all true to the sport. The form of the flowers was entirely changed, and they were pure white or prettily but slightly flushed on the crown (not the centre) with clear rose-pink. It was certificated by the National Chrysanthemum Society and the Royal Horticultural Society's floral committees, and also awarded the silver medal by the Scottish Horticultural Society, as the best novelty. All who saw the blooms were charmed with them, and there was a keen competition for the stock. But, alas and alack! the whole stock seems to have reverted to the original Mrs. Barkley, for out of my stock of about 100 very fine plants not a white flower has appeared, and other growers complain of the same thing. It is much to be regretted.—W. J. Godfrey, in Gardeners' Chronicle.

Chrysanthemums! Stock Plants!

The new Wells-Pockett set of the best of this season's introductions in strong plants. All sorts, each 20 cents; per dozen, $2.00.

These include all the best and latest introductions, and are true to name. These new acquisitions have proven successful in the crysanthemum line, and should be grown very extensively next season.

Madame Paul Sahut—a new early white that will take the place of Estelle and Polly Rose in the extra earlies. It is a decided acquisition in the early whites. Good stem and foliage, and an all-around good white. One of the very best yet introduced. Stem three feet; flowers as good as the best Robinson, and two weeks earlier. 25 cents each. $2.50 per dozen. We can supply this in quantity.

Good sorts, including Alice Byron, Ida Barwood, Madame Diederichs, Guy Hamilton, Golden Age, Mrs. Buckbee, and others, all extra good, including Carrie, an extra early yellow in bloom September 15th, 15 cents each; $1.50 per dozen.

The old standard sorts, such as Golden Wedding, Silver Wedding, Appleton, Lavender Queen, White and Yellow Jones, Estelle, Polly Rose, Henderson, Robinson, etc., 10 cents each. 75 cents per dozen.

MONTREAL.

The chrysanthemum exhibition of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Montreal, has this year been marked by a general excellence which demands beyond a doubt the most strenuous efforts on the part of exhibitors in the future to maintain the high standard. The success, on this occasion, might have been due largely to the keen competition set up by foreign exhibitors, or at any rate exhibitors from beyond the city's limits, but whatever be the cause, it has been productive of results beyond anticipation, and the show which terminated November 11 has established a record in scientific horticulture. It reflects great credit on the club.

Among the exhibitors were W. H. Horobin, Miss Eddy, T. J. Gorman, Eddy & Sons, A. Pinoteau and many others. The Tarrytown fern of the F. R. Pierson Co. was a great attraction. The judges were E. Mepsted, of Ottawa; Miss Murray, Messrs. Wilshire, Smith and Craig, of Montreal.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The show which closed November 10 was one of the best ever held here. Among the premium winners were: David Kydd, Robert Paton, Gustave Ginter, Elm City Nursery Co., F. E. Duffy, W. H. Symon, Frank Rehbein, A. J. Thompson, Oscar Carlson, J. A. Long, J. H. Slocombe, Henry Cliff, J. P. Sorenson and Frank H. Kimberly.

WINONA, MINN.—The Ladies' Guild of St. Paul's Episcopal Church gave a chrysanthemum show November 4 in the parish house in which all the local florists participated. Fullbruegge Bros., Winona Floral Co., The Central Greenhouse and the Woodlawn Greenhouse each displayed their best stock and made it an occasion of profitable advertising.

COLUMBIA, S. C.—David Fitzgibbon, for long gardener at the State Hospital for the Insane, died November 7, aged 89 years.

GOT STUCK BY AN IMITATOR.

Carthage, Mo.—We ran out of your Fumigating Kind of Tobacco Powder and tried some that a home dealer recommended very highly, it was a great deal cheaper, but it was a dear experience, as it injured the blooms when enough of it was used to be effectual in killing insects. We must say, emphatically, yours was in every way satisfactory; in future—yours for us. See page 1360.

Are all flower growers liars?

SURELY this cannot be true; well, we have over 100 growers who have written us, a large majority without request, their opinions; we publish a few of these letters in the columns of this paper; see on pages 1348-49-51-59, what they say about the FUMIGATING KIND TOBACCO POWDER. All began with a five-pound trial bag at our expense, which gave them an opportunity without cost to prove its GOODNESS and our assertion that it was the most effective, cleanest and quickest, as well as cheapest (10 cents per 100-foot house) article to fumigate with, and that all kinds of aphis can be killed in one night. Let us send you a five-pound trial bag by express, it will cost you nothing but the express charges on it, and be convinced that what your brother growers say of it is true. Our booklet tells of it; we mail it on request.

FUMIGATING.

Some of the large growers have dropped tobacco stems and are now using a cheap grade of tobacco leaf. It costs but little more than the stems and, as the leaf contains more nicotine than the stem, a smaller quantity produces an equal effect. We saw the leaf in use recently at the establishment of Bassett & Washburn, Hinsdale, Ill. The piles were placed directly on the walks and consisted of a double handful of the loose leaves on a small piece of paper. The tobacco was not dampened and it burned without flame. It requires less watching and is more satisfacory than the stems in many other ways.

On top of each one of the piles mentioned above was placed a handful of red pepper. The quantity seemed large as the fumigating piles were only about fifty feet apart, but we were told that no harm resulted to anything except thrips.

WACO, TEX.—P. J. Berckmans, of Augusta, Ga., was judge of the ninth annual flower show, which opened here November 9, continuing for three days and achieving the greatest success in the history of local exhibitions.

OSAGE, IA.—Walter S. Hall is an enterprising florist. His annual chrysanthemum show draws out almost the entire population of Osage. This year he has engaged the K. of P. band during the show. If more of the florists in the country would follow some of Mr. Hall's methods of doing business and advertising, it would increase the demand for flowers to a considerable extent.

POOR DRAUGHT.

We have a horizontal tubular steam boiler, fourteen feet long, grate 3x4 feet, with twenty-two 2-inch tubes. The stack is thirteen inches in diameter and twenty-four feet high. Is it large enough? There is a poor draught.

J. H.

The diameter of the smokestack is ample and the length is sufficient, provided there are no buildings or trees near which are taller and produce air currents which would hinder the draught of the chimney. The only fault in the construction seems to be the size of the grate, which it appears is too large for the boiler and for the capacity of the flues and stack. I would suggest that you cover the grate bars next to the sides of the fire box with brick so as to reduce the grate surface to an area 2x4 feet instead of 3x4 feet as at present and maintain a clean, thin fire over this area and note the effect. If the draught is not improved the fault is in some other factor. L. C. C.

LILIES FOR EASTER.

I would like to ask what is considered the best way to hold back Japan longiflorums for Easter and when is it safe to put them into 65 degrees at night and full light and 75 degrees in the daytime? Will freezing hurt them before the top has started? Would a cool, dark cellar do? SUBSCRIBER.

Japan longiflorums do not usually want much holding when Easter is in early April and we have received the Japan bulbs in good time. We have for several years past had no trouble in getting them into flower in time, but ten years ago, although the flowers were fine, the plants were too dwarf. We did not blame the firm that supplied the bulbs, for we believe we put the bulbs into heat too soon, that is, before they had made good roots. The Japan seems to differ from the Bermuda lilies in this respect. Our experience and that of a very successful grower of these Japan bulbs, is that if they are well rooted by the middle of December and have made but little top growth you will have no trouble in forcing them into flower in fourteen weeks in a night temperature beginning at 55 degrees and increasing to 65 and 70 degrees.

Heat, however, is the important point that no arbitrary figures can be given about. To answer the questions definitely and to help those who may have little experience I would say leave them in a cold frame until the middle of December. Protect by banking the frame and use double sash to prevent severe freezing. A few degrees of frost will do no harm. Don't think of the dark cellar. The frame is the place for them. If you can't leave them out as long as the middle of December, then a very cool house will do until Christmas and after that, if well rooted, force briskly. No fear of your being too early. Remember that after a lily bud begins to turn from green to white the plant can then be removed to a very cool house and the buds will open slowly and last a long while after they are open. W. S.
